PART I.

Registration of Mutations.

3. The Registrars and Sub-Registrars appointed under Act III of 1877 shall, within the districts and area to which this Act is extended, be Registrars of Mutations for the purposes of this Act.

Registrars of Mutations.

4. (1) Every person acquiring any proprietary right in any estate or revenue-free property, and every manager in charge of such estate or revenue-free property, who within four months from the date of such acquisition or assumption of charge, gives notice of the mutation to the Sub-Registrar of the sub-district in which the estate or property is situated, in such form as may be prescribed by the Board of Revenue, shall be considered to have complied with the provisions of the Land Registration Act, requiring him to apply to the Collector of the District for mutation of names.

Report of acquisition of proprietary rights to Sub-Registrars equivalent to application for mutation of names under Act VII (B.C.) of 1876.

(2) Notice of such application for mutation given to the Sub-Registrar shall, after it has been recorded by him, be forwarded by him to the Collector, and shall be held to have been filed before the Collector within the meaning of section 42 of the Land Registration Act, VII (B.C.) of 1876; and on receipt of such notice the Collector shall (unless the case is one provided for in section 43 of the Act) proceed in the manner prescribed in section 47 and the following sections of that Act. The Collector shall inform the Sub-Registrar of every mutation ordered by him under sections 52 and 55 of the Land Registration Act, and on the receipt of such information, the Sub-Registrar shall record the same in the Register of Mutations.

Exemption under section 43 of Act VII (B.C.) of 1876 conditional on registration before Sub-Registrar.

5. Any exemption granted under section 43 of Act VII (B.C.) of 1876 shall be conditional on registration of mutations being effected in the Sub-Registrar's office.

Periodical statements of changes to be filed in Sub-Registrars' offices.

6. Every holder of an estate or tenure shall file in the Sub-Registrar's office, at such time and in such form as the Board of Revenue may, from time to time, prescribe, a statement showing the changes, if any, which have occurred in the record of rights in each village included in the estate or tenure.

Transfer of, and succession to, tenures, under tenures, rayati holdings at fixed rates, and occupancy holdings, to be reported to Sub Registrar.

7. (1) Any person transferring his right as tenure-holder, raiyat at fixed rates or occupancy raiyat, or any person claiming by reason of such transfer, or by inheritance, to have acquired the status of a tenure-holder, raiyat at fixed rates or occupancy raiyat, in possession, shall, within four months from the date of such acquisition, give notice of such mutation to the Sub-Registrar of the Sub-district in such form as the Board of Revenue may, from time to time, prescribe.

(2) Such notice shall be treated as a document presented under Part VI of the Indian Registration Act, and shall be subject to the provisions of that Part regarding the admission and execution of documents:

Provided that in the case of any person claiming to have succeeded by inheritance, a notice shall be affixed in a conspicuous place in the village calling on any objector to appear before the Sub-Registrar within 15 days and prefer his objection.

(3) A notice given under this section when accompanied by payment of the prescribed fee shall be held to be a sufficient compliance with the provisions of sections 12, 15, 18 and 73 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

(4) It shall be optional for a non-occupancy or under-raiyat to give notice of a mutation under this section.

Duties of Sub-Registrar.

8. It shall be the duty of the Sub-Registrar to notify the fact of such reported transfer to the landlord of such person, and to cause the landlord's fee, if any, to be paid to him in such manner as the Board of Revenue may, from time to time, prescribe; and to call upon the landlord to state whether he admits or refuses to admit the mutation; and the Sub-Registrar shall record not only the fact of the transfer, but also whether the consent of the landlord in writing, in person or by agent, has, or has not, been given to the transfer of the holding, in an appropriate column of the Register described in section 11.

Presumptive force of mutation entry in rent suits.

9. In any suit for rent any entry of a mutation recorded by a Sub-Registrar under section 7 or section 8, and certified by him to have been duly registered under the Indian Registration Act, and assented to by the landlord, and in the case of a transfer between living persons by both parties thereto, shall be presumed to be correct till the contrary is proved.

Specification required in mutation notices.

10. All notices of mutation under section 4 and section 7 shall contain a specification of the rights as recorded in the khewat, or the survey numbers of the lands as entered in the khatian in respect of which mutation is to be effected, in such form or manner as may be prescribed by rules made under this Act.

Registers.

11. The Sub-Registrar shall, in his capacity as Registrar of Mutations, keep such Registers as shall, from time to time, be prescribed by the Local Government, including, for every village within the limits of the Sub-district, two Registers of Mutations, in one of which there shall be recorded changes affecting the entries in the khewat, and in the other, changes affecting the khatian of that village, and containing such particulars as the Board of Revenue may, from time to time, with the sanction of the Local Government, prescribe.

Registration of instruments effecting transfer of proprietary and tenant-right and simultaneous registration of mutations.

12. A Sub-Registrar, registering an instrument effecting a transfer of proprietary or tenant-right, or, under the provisions of sections 64 and 65 of the Indian Registration Act, receiving a memorandum of a transfer of property or tenant-right, shall proceed as follows:—

(a) If the instrument or memorandum effects a mutation of proprietary right, he shall notify the same to the Collector of the District as if it had been a notice under section 4 of this Act.

(b) If it effects a mutation of tenant-right, he shall issue notices as if he had received a notice of mutation under section 7 of this Act.

(c) When the prescribed procedure is completed, he shall, as Registrar of Mutations, take cognizance of such transfer, and make the necessary entries in the Register of Mutations as required by section 11.

13. It shall be the duty of all Courts to forward to the Sub-Registrar concerned a memorandum, in such form as may, from time to time, be prescribed, of every decision affecting proprietary and tenant-right in land.

All Courts to forward memoranda of decisions as to land.

14 (1) Any person giving notice as required by section 4 or section 7 of this Act shall be bound at the same time to tender such fee in cash or in stamps as he may be bound to pay under sections 12 and 15 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, or any other enactment for the time being in force, together with such fees as may be, from time to time, prescribed by the Board of Revenue for the service of processes.

Fees.

(2) On payment of the fees necessary, a copy of the entry in the Register of Mutations, or such extract therefrom as may be necessary, certified by the Sub-Registrar to be correct, shall be given to any applicant.

(3) The records in the Sub-Registrar's office shall be open at all reasonable hours without fee to the inspection of all persons interested.

(4) All fees leviable, and all fines imposed under this Act, shall be credited to the Registration Department.

15 (1) No person entitled, or required, to give notice, of a mutation to the Sub-Registrar under section 4 or section 7 shall, after the expiry of the period of four months therein mentioned, be entitled to sue for, or recover, the rent of any land the subject of the mutation, unless at the time of the institution of the suit he files in court a certified copy of the entry in the record of rights and of the entry in the Register of Mutations, if any, relative to such land, or shall adduce such other evidence as shall satisfy the court that notice of mutation was duly given.

Disability consequent on failure to register mutations.

(2) No landlord shall be bound to receive rent from, or recognize as his tenant, any person who has acquired a tenure, raiyati holding at fixed rates or occupancy holding by reason of any transfer or by inheritance, unless notice of the mutation has been given to the Sub-Registrar under section 7.

16. Whoever being required by this Act to give notice of having acquired any proprietary right, tenure, or holding, shall omit to give such notice within the prescribed time, shall be liable to such fine not exceeding fifty rupees, as the Collector may see fit to impose, and to a further daily fine not exceeding five rupees for each day during which he shall omit to apply for such registration after a date fixed by the Collector in a notice requiring him to apply for such registration. Such fines shall be credited to the Registration Department.

Penalty for failure to register mutations.

PART II.

Recovery of costs of a survey and preparation of a record of rights.

17. It shall be lawful for the Local Government, instead of proceeding under section 114 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, to recover, from all or any of the landlords and tenants in any District or part of a District, either in one year or several years, and in the manner specified in the sections following, their shares of all costs declared by the Local Government to be recoverable from proprietors and tenants, which have been incurred in making a survey and record of rights and a settlement of rents under Chapter X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, such costs not having been incurred for the purposes of a settlement of land revenue.

Recovery of costs of initial survey, &c.

18. From and after the commencement of this Act, all land situated within any District or part of any District in which this Act may, from time to time, be in force, shall be liable to the payment of a cess (hereinafter called "The Survey-Settlement Cess") to be applied in defraying the costs mentioned in the last preceding section.

Levy of a cess for recovery of costs.

19. The Local Government shall, by an order published in the Calcutta Gazette, notify the total expenditure incurred in any District or part of a District on account of the settlement-survey, and the amounts (in such proportion as may, from time to time, be determined by the Governor General in Council) which shall be paid by the proprietors and tenants and owners and occupants of rent-free tenures and holdings respectively in such District or part of a District, and the date from which the survey-settlement cess shall take effect; and shall specify the rate per acre to be paid by the holders of estates, and by tenure-holders and raiyats and owners of rent-free tenures and holdings. The distribution of this cess shall be made under rules to be framed, from time to time, by the Board of Revenue, with the sanction of the Local Government.

Rate of Survey-Settlement Cess.

20. The amount leviable from the holders of estates shall be paid annually, with the instalment of land revenue due on 28th March, in as many instalments as the Collector shall determine, and shall be recoverable as an arrear of land revenue.

Payment of cess by holders of estates.

21. The amount leviable from tenure-holders and raiyats shall be paid by them to the Settlement Officer, on receipt of the copy of the khatian to which they are entitled; or, if not paid then, it shall be paid with an addition of 20 per cent. as collection expenses to the holder of the estate, in as many instalments as such holder pays his share in; and in case of default, it shall be levied by the holder of the estate as an arrear of rent, and the same amount, less the additional 20 per cent. levied as aforesaid as collection expenses, shall be paid by the holder of the estate into the Government treasury, with the instalment of land revenue due on March 28th, and shall be recoverable from him as an arrear of land revenue.

Payment of cess by tenure-holders and raiyats.

PART III.

Miscellaneous.

22. (1) Every Registrar and Sub-Registrar appointed under this Act to be a Registrar of Mutations, and every person appointed temporarily to discharge the duties of any such office, shall be deemed to be a public servant within the meaning of section 21 of the Indian Penal Code, and all official records and papers kept by any such officer under this Act shall be held to be public records and the property of Government.

(2) Every order passed by an officer engaged in the registration of mutations in any District shall be appealable to the Collector of the District.

Appeals.

23. Every order passed by the Collector of the District under this Act shall be appealable to the Commissioner of the Division within two months of the date of such order, and the decision of the Commissioner shall be final.

Power to make rules for selection, etc., of Sub-Registrars.

24. (1) The Local Government or the Board of Revenue, with the sanction of the Local Government, may, from time to time, make, repeal and alter rules consistent with this Act—

(a) regarding the appointment, control, discipline, and payment of all Registrars' and Sub-Registrars' establishments;

(b) prescribing the method and periods for making entries of mutations in the record of rights, preparing new editions of such records, and republishing them from time to time, or otherwise making them available for public information;

(c) the distribution of the cess;

(d) generally for the purpose of giving effect to the provisions of this Act.

(2) The Local Government may, from time to time, alter any fee prescribed by this Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to provide for the maintenance of the record of rights, framed in the course of a survey-settlement under the Bengal Tenancy Act, by making it compulsory, in areas so surveyed and settled, to register all mutations of proprietary rights, and of the rights of tenure-holders and of raiyats at fixed rates, and occupancy raiyats. The registration of transfers of the right of non-occupancy and of under raiyats is left optional.

2. The system of registration is modelled on that prescribed by the Indian Registration Act. The Sub-Registrars will keep up registers in which all mutations, after being duly executed and verified, are to be entered; and in order to ensure that these registers are complete and that all mutations the registration of which is compulsory are reported, self-acting disabilities consequent on the failure to give notice of such mutations, as well as direct penalties, have been inserted in the Bill.

3. In Part II of the Bill a system is provided, supplementary to that laid down in section 114 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, for facilitating the recovery of the cost of a survey-settlement by a temporary cess to be levied rateably per acre from proprietors and tenure-holders, raiyats, and owners of revenue-free and rent-free tenures and holdings. The cess will either be paid up at once, or will be recoverable in instalments from the proprietors, who are empowered to recover the share due from other persons holding on their estates, with an additional charge for collection expenses.

NOTE ON THE LATE COTTON CROP IN BENGAL, 1894-95.

THE following is published for general information.

C. E. BUCKLAND,
Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

REVENUE DEPT.,
The 5th February 1895.

DEPARTMENT OF LAND RECORDS AND AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

Note on the late cotton crop in Bengal for the year 1894-95.

Explanatory.—There are generally speaking two cotton crops in Bengal, viz., the early crop which is sown during the monsoon rains and harvested during the cold weather, and the late crop which is usually sown at the close of the rainy season and harvested during the hot weather. The forecast of the early crop was issued on the 30th November 1894. This report furnishes statistics of area and outturn of the late crop only, which is believed to be the less important of the two. It will appear from the district returns attached to this report, that out of the sixteen districts included in it, only three districts, viz., Saran, Darbhanga, and Manbhum, show areas under cotton exceeding 10,000 acres.

Area sown.—The total area sown this year with the late variety of cotton appears from the appended statement to amount to 111,300 acres, against 114,300 acres in 1893-94. The decrease as compared with last year is nominal, but the area is less than the normal, owing to the late and heavy rainfall of the latter part of the last monsoon season, which interfered with sowing operations.

Character of the crop.—The weather after the sowing season has been on the whole favourable to the prospects of the crop, which it is estimated will yield an outturn of 14 annas against 11 annas of the previous year. The effect of the late rains was more important on the area sown than on the outturn of the crop. Out of the sixteen districts from which returns have been received, four districts, viz., Saran, Muzaffarpur, Bhagalpur, and Angul and Khondmals, estimate the crop as a full average one of 16 annas. The remaining 12 districts give estimates varying from 9 to 15 annas. Nine districts report this year's crop to be better than last year's, five report it to be equal to that of last year, and only two districts, viz., Birbhum and Balasore, report worse crops.

Explanation.—... indicates that no rain has fallen. If the return for any day has not been received, the corresponding space is left blank. If any of the returns are wanting, the corresponding cesses in the total rain fall columns are left blank. With reference to the column of rainy days, the definition of a rainy day is when at least 0·10 inch of rain has fallen.

CALCUTTA, the 4th February 1895.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING 8 A.M., SATURDAY, THE 2ND OF FEBRUARY 1895.

At the close of the previous week fine settled weather of rather strongly developed north-east monsoon character had set in in the rear of a barometric depression which had previously passed through the province. Hence on the 27th or the first day of the present week both day and night temperatures were rather considerably below the normal, skies were almost cloudless except in the extreme north of the province, and there was a complete absence of rain except for a light shower at Darjeeling; pressure was also above the normal at practically all stations, though a slight to moderate fall was recorded on the morning of the 27th. On the 28th conditions remained practically unchanged, except that temperature was rising very slowly, while pressure had again fallen slowly and had become almost normal in amount. On the 29th the fall of pressure had ceased, and a slight to moderate rise had set in, while temperature had also risen and the variation of the day temperature from the normal became small, while the night temperatures remained in considerable defect. On the 30th pressure had again commenced to fall rather briskly in Bengal, and had become in distinct defect, while in Western India a barometric depression appeared, the centre of which was lying over Lower Sind and Kathiawar, and which was advancing in an easterly direction. On the 30th also temperature had risen moderately at the great majority of stations in Bengal, while cloud proportion was also increasing at many stations. On the 31st the barometric depression had advanced from Sind into South-east Rajputana and Central India. Hence pressure had again fallen in Bengal, and had become in small to moderate defect, while a further increase had occurred in the temperature, and both day and night temperatures were usually in decided excess. Humidity had also increased rather largely and was very high, while the amount of cloud was increasing decidedly. On February 1st a fresh barometric depression which had appeared in Beluchistan on the 31st had advanced rapidly in an easterly direction into Rajputana, while a deepish secondary depression had formed in the North Punjab. A further fall of pressure therefore occurred in Bengal, which was rather large at the western stations, and pressure became in defect by amounts ranging up to a tenth of an inch at Gaya. Temperature also again rose and became in very decided excess and skies became rather heavily clouded. On the 2nd the primary depression had advanced from Rajputana to Baghelkhand, while the secondary depression in the Punjab was filling up. The primary depression then began to affect Bengal more largely, and Bihar and the western districts reported moderate general rain, while the skies were heavily clouded in practically all districts. Temperature also remained unusually high, while pressure with the advance of the depression was also decidedly low; indeed the mean temperature was from 3° to 7° above the normal on the 2nd, while pressure was about 0·04″ in defect.

Pressure.—As pressure was high at the commencement of the week and low at its close, the mean pressure for the week has not been very far removed from the normal. At most of the western stations slight defects of about 0·01″ to 0·02″ have been recorded, but at a few of the northern stations slight excess pressures have been registered.

Temperature.—The variations of temperature from the normal have been large, for at the commencement of the week the readings reported were about 2° to 4° in defect, and at its close they were 3° to 7° in excess. The average for the whole week shows that the mean temperature of the province was 0·5° in excess, the largest excess having been reported in North Bengal, where it has equalled 2°.

The actual temperatures registered during the week and their variations from the normal temperature of the present season are clearly seen in the table below, where the average maximum, minimum, and mean temperatures for the week at nine typical stations in different districts of the province are compared with the normal values for the same period. The variations, it will be seen, have been small in the day, or maximum, temperatures, which have been in defect at most stations by less than a degree, while they have been in excess at others by about 2°. At most stations the night, or minimum, temperatures have been in moderate to large excess varying up to 4·3° at Cuttack, while on the other hand four stations report slightly defective temperatures:—

Rainfall.—An average fall of 0·36 inch of rain has been recorded in Bihar, while slight to moderate showers have also been received in Chota Nagpur and North Bengal. The districts which have received the heaviest falls have been Shahabad 0·55 inch, Champaran 0·54 inch, Patna 0·51 inch, Gaya 0·60 inch, Darbhanga 0·44 inch, and Saran 0·41 inch.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the six meteorological divisions of the province for the week ending Saturday, the 2nd of February 1895 :—

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h., 10h., 16h., and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

When it appears to any Magistrate, authorized in this behalf by the Local Government, upon the certificate in writing, in the form (B) provided in the schedule, of an Inspector of Lepers, that any person is a leper; and if it further appears to such Magistrate that such person is a pauper leper, he shall, after recording the evidence and his order thereon, send such pauper leper in charge of a police officer together with an order, in writing, in the form (C) provided in the schedule, signed by him and bearing the seal of the Court, to a leper asylum, whose such pauper leper shall be detained until discharged by order of the Board.

On conviction before a Magistrate of a breach of such bye-law, a fine may be inflicted not exceeding rupees twenty, and a fine of rupees ten for each day during which the offence is continued after conviction for such offence. The provisions of the Act under which the Commissioners are appointed and elected relating to bye-laws shall apply to any bye-law made and confirmed under this Act.

13. It shall be lawful for an Inspector of Lepers to require any person, whom he has reason to believe to be a pauper leper, or a leper carrying on any trade or calling within a municipality which a leper is prohibited from carrying on, to afford him reasonable opportunity of satisfying himself whether such person is a leper or not, and he shall be legally bound to afford an Inspector of Lepers such opportunity.

Appeals.

14. Any person other than a pauper leper, in respect of whom an Inspector of Lepers has issued a certificate in the form (B) provided in the schedule declaring him to be a leper, or has refused to issue a certificate in the form (A) provided in the schedule, may appeal to such officer as may be appointed by the Local Government to hear such appeals, and the decision of such officer shall be final.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE expediency of segregating pauper lepers under proper safeguards, and of forbidding lepers generally from exercising certain trades and callings connected with human food, drink, and clothing, was urged by the Leprosy Commission which visited India in 1890-91. Experience in Bombay having shown that these recommendations can be successfully carried into effect, the accompanying Bill has been prepared to legalise the introduction of similar measures in Bengal.

2. The Bill defines as "lepers" persons suffering from the disease of leprosy, in whom the process of ulceration has commenced, and as "pauper lepers" those lepers who have no ostensible means of subsistence, and who have solicited public charity. Next it deals with the arrest, examination, segregation in a properly constituted leper asylum, and discharge of pauper lepers who have been certified to be such by duly qualified authorities: it also enables local bodies to assist in providing for the maintenance and medical treatment of pauper lepers while so secluded. Lastly, it treats of the restraints to be placed on lepers who are not paupers, and enables the Commissioners of a Municipality, with the sanction of Government, to make rules and bye-laws under the Act by which it is constituted, forbidding lepers to engage in certain specified trades and occupations of the character above described.

PART VI.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 7th February, 1895 :—

No. 4 of 1895.

A Bill to provide for the payment by Railway Companies registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1882, of interest out of capital during construction.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the payment by Railway Companies registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1882, of interest out of capital during construction; It is hereby enacted as follows :— VI of 1882.

Title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Railway Companies Act, 1895.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; and

(3) It shall come into force at once.

Definition.

2. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) "railway" means a railway as defined in section 3, clause (4), of the Indian Railways Act, 1890: IX of 1890.

(2) "the railway" means the railway in relation to the construction of which interest out of capital is permitted to be paid as hereinafter provided: and [57 & 58 Vict., c. 12, s. 2.]

(3) "Railway Company" means a Company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1882, and formed for the purpose of making and working, or making or working, a railway in India, whether alone or in conjunction with other purposes. VI of 1882.

Payment of interest out of capital.

3. A Railway Company may pay interest on its paid-up share capital out of capital, for the period, and subject to the conditions and restrictions, in this section mentioned, and may charge the same to capital as part of the cost of construction of the railway:— [57 & 58 Vict., c. 12, s. 3.]

(1) Such interest shall be paid only for such period as shall be determined by the Governor-General in Council; and such period shall in no case extend beyond the close of the half-year next after the half-year during which the railway shall be actually completed and opened for traffic.

(2) No such payment shall be made unless the same is authorised by the Company's memorandum of association or by a special resolution of the Company.

(3) No such payment, whether authorised by the Company's memorandum of association or by special resolution as aforesaid, shall be made without the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council.

(4) The amount so paid out of capital by way of interest, in respect of any period, shall in no case exceed a sum which shall, together with the net earnings of the railway during such period, make up the rate of four per cent. per annum.

(5) No such payment of interest shall be made until such Railway Company has satisfied the Governor General in Council that two-thirds at least of its share capital, in respect whereof interest is to be so paid, has been actually issued and accepted, and is held by shareholders who, or whose representatives, are legally liable for the same.

(6) No such interest shall accrue in favour of any shareholder for any time during which any call on any of his shares is in arrear.

(7) The payment of such interest shall not operate as a reduction of the amount paid up on the shares in respect of which it is paid.

[cf. 57 & 58 Vict., c. 12, s. 4.]

Provisions of section 3 applicable to additional share capital for extensions.

4. A railway in course of construction and intended to be made or worked by a Railway Company in addition to or by way of extension of any railway owned or worked by such Company shall be deemed to be the railway of such Company for the purposes of this Act, and all the provisions of the last preceding section shall apply to such railway and to the share capital issued for the purpose of its construction.

[cf. 57 & 58 Vict., c. 12, s. 5.]

Notice in prospectus and other documents.

5. When a Railway Company has power to pay interest under this Act, notice to that effect shall be given in every prospectus, advertisement or other document inviting subscriptions for shares therein, and in every certificate of such shares.

[Ib., s. 6.]

Accounts.

6. When any interest has been paid by a Railway Company under this Act, the annual or other accounts of such Company shall show the amount on which, and the rate at which, interest has been so paid.

[Ib., s. 7.

Construction of borrowing powers.

7. If by any memorandum of association, articles of association, or other document any power of borrowing money is conferred on a Railway Company, or on its Directors, with or without the sanction of any meeting, and if such power of borrowing is limited to an amount bearing any proportion to the capital of such Company, the amount of capital applied or to be applied in payment of interest under this Act shall, for the purpose of ascertaining the extent of such power of borrowing, be deducted from the capital of such Company.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

THE restriction against treating any part of the subscribed capital of a Company as income during the time when it is necessarily unproductive, which applies under English law to every Company registered under the English Joint Stock Companies Acts, would probably be held by the Courts in this country to apply to a Company domiciled in India and registered under the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). The restriction has been removed so far as Companies domiciled in England, but formed for the construction of railways in India, are concerned, by the Statute 57 & 58 Vict., c. 12, passed by Parliament in the middle of last year. The object of this Bill is to place Railway Companies domiciled in India and registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1882, in the same position in this respect as Companies registered in England.

Approximate position, lat. 12° 26′ 40″ S., long. 143° 19′ 55″ E.

Also, of the existence of two pinnacle rocks, with depths of 4¾ and 5½ fathoms on them, and deep water close to, lying respectively, N. 42° W., distant 4 cables, and N. 32° W., distant 3 cables, from the 4 fathoms rock.

Also, that Eel(e) reef beacon stands near the western edge of the reef in a position S.S.W. ½ W., distant 7 cables, from where the beacon is shown on the charts, or approximately in lat. 12° 24′ 30″ S., long. 143° 20′ 40″ E.; and that the north extreme of Eel(e) reef extends nearly two-thirds of a mile westward of the old position of the beacon.

(3) Amended depth on shoal S.W. of Claremont light-vessel.

Also, that a depth of 26 feet at low water, though possibly there may be less water, has been found on the 5¼ fathom patch lying S.W. ½ S. (S. 42° W.), distant one mile, from Claremont light-vessel, or approximately in lat. 13° 29′ 30″ S., long. 143° 41′ 15″ E.

AUSTRALIA—GREAT SANDY STRAIT.

Exhibition of certain lights.

THE Portmaster, Brisbane, has given notice (No. 24 of 1894) that on and after 1st January 1895 the following lights will be exhibited to assist in navigating Great Sandy Strait by night, viz:—

Three white lights off Snout Point, forming two leads, bearing N. 2° E. and S. 17° E., respectively;
Two lights, red and white, at Figtree Creek, Great Sandy Island, bearing S. 60° E.;
Two lights, red and white, on Stewart Island, bearing S. 28° E.;
Two lights, red and white, Moonboom Island, bearing N. 49° W.;
One light, green, on dolphin off N.E. end of Moonboom Island;
One light, white, on Boonlyo Point, Great Sandy Island;
Two lights, red and white, north of Round Bush, bearing N. 43° W.;
One light, red, on dolphin, west side of channel;
Two lights, red and white, at Sheridan Flats, bearing S. 52° W.;
Two lights, white, to northward of South White Cliffs, bearing S. 18° E.

Directions.—Vessels from the southward will, on approaching Snout Point, bring the two white leading lights there in line, and keep them so until within a cable's length of the lower and nearer light, when steer to pass it a short ship's length off on the starboard hand, and continue until it comes in line astern with a third white light to the S.E. Keep the latter line until the red and white leading lights at Figtree Creek come in line astern, when the latter line is to be kept until the white light on Stewart Island opens out, when haul up at once and steer to pass it on the starboard hand a ship's length off; continue until past the red light on the island, when bring these two last-named lights in line astern (keeping them a little open to the eastward) until the red and white lights on Moonboom Island are in line ahead. Leave the latter line when within half-a-cable's length of the red light and steer to pass the green light at a ship's length off on the port hand; steer thence to pass at a similar distance on the starboard hand the white light on Boonlyo Point, and bring the red and white lights of the round Bush lead in line; keep them so until the red dolphin light to N.N.W. comes in line with the white back light of the Sheridan Flats lead, and keep these lights in line until near the red, when steer to pass it on the port hand at a ship's length off, then bring it in line astern with the white back light of the Round Bush lead and continue so until the Sheridan Flats lights are in line. Keep the latter in line astern until the South White Cliffs lights are in line, when steer for them until near the steep shore of Sandy Island. Follow this shore to the northward at a distance of half-a-cable until two white lights on the island come in line astern, which lead up to the main channel just to the eastward of the Junction Buoy.

PRELIMINARY NOTE ON THE WHEAT CROP OF BENGAL, 1894-95.

C. E. BUCKLAND, Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

DEPARTMENT OF LAND RECORDS AND AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

Preliminary note on the wheat crop of Bengal, 1894-95.

1. Character of the season.—The latter part of the last monsoon season was characterised by unusually late and heavy rainfall, which lasted till the end of the first week of November, being particularly heavy in Bihar, Chota Nagpur, and North Bengal. The late rainfall retarded sowing operations, and prevented much of the usual area from being sown in wheat. The decrease is specially noticeable in South Bihar.

Since the end of the first week of November, there was practically no rain until after the middle of January; as the district returns describe the condition of the crop about the middle of the month, the effect of the recent rainfall was not taken into account in the forecast.

The crop appears to be so far free from fungoid and insect pests.

2. Area cultivated.—The total area sown in wheat this year in the chief wheat-growing districts of Bengal is estimated at 1,552,600 acres, against 1,583,800 acres sown in 1893-94; the decrease is 31,200 acres, or nearly 2 per cent. on the area sown last year. The decrease is solely attributable to the unusually late continuance of the monsoon rains. No attempt has been made to compare this year's area with the estimated normal area, owing to misconceptions, which still seem to exist with regard to the meaning of the term 'normal area.'

3. Outturn.—The outturn of the standing crop may be estimated at 15 annas against 12 annas, which was the estimated outturn of the crop of 1893-94. The fact of the crop being sown unusually late owing to the prevalence of wet weather in October and the beginning of November has told unfavourably on its prospects, particularly in South Bihar and Chota Nagpur. Since sowing, however, the weather has been favourable, and the January rains make the prospects more favourable than it was at the time of the submission of the district returns.

Division.	District.	Approximate normal area under wheat.	Approximate area sown last year (1893-94).	Estimated area sown this year (1894-95).	Taking 16 annas to represent the average outturn per acre, how many annas represented outturn last year (1893-94).	Taking 16 annas to represent the average outturn per acre, how many annas will represent this year's outturn (1894-95).	Remarks by the District Officers. 		Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Annas.	Annas.
Patna.	Shahabad ...	175,000	116,900	123,400	7½	11	Owing to the excessive rain lasting late during the year, wheat was less cultivated in the sub-divisions of Arrah, Buxar and Bhabua than elsewhere. The outturn is promising.	The Collector estimates the crop at 7 annas in the Sadar sub-division, 16 annas in Buxar, 12 annas in Bhabua, and 9½ annas in Sasaram. The cause for such wide variations is not understood.
	Patna ...	122,500	114,100	100,100	8½	12½	The weather being up to date very seasonable, a better outturn is expected this year than last. The less area sown is due to the late rains, which did not get off the land till it was too late to sow it in full.
	Gaya ...	157,600	130,600	126,800	11	11	The decrease in the area sown this year is due to excessive rainfall at the time of sowing. The outturn is expected to be about 11 annas. The sowings being late, the crop is behind time.
	Saran ...	147,500	147,500	140,000	15	15	The area sown was less than normal and last year's owing to delay in the cessation of rains at sowing time.
	Champaran ...	47,000	47,000	41,000	16	16	Owing to late rain the area sown is less than that of last year.
	Muzaffarpur ...	70,000	70,000	70,000	16	16	.....
	Darbhanga ...	110,200	104,600	102,000	12	16	The decrease in the area sown with wheat this year as compared with the last year's area is due to excessive moisture caused by unusually heavy rain in October. The prospects of the crop are, however, good, and if the weather should continue favourable, there is every reason to expect an average crop.

DIVISION.	District.	Approximate normal area under wheat.	Approximate area sown last year (1893-94)	Estimated area sown this year (1894-95).	Taking 16 annas to represent the average outturn per acre, how many annas will represent this year's outturn (1894-95). 		Acres.	Acres	Acres.	Annas.	Annas.
BHAGALPUR.	Bhagalpur ...	215,500	192,300	215,600	12½	16	This year there has been sufficient rainfall, which has led to the cultivation of a larger area than in the last year; the forecast is good, as the moisture warrants the expectation of a good outturn.	A revised forecast will be submitted on receipt of the sub-divisional figures.
	Monghyr ...	163,000	106,500	106,600	14	14	The year was favourable for the cultivation of wheat crop. The crop is looking well, but is backward owing to late sowing on account of late rains.	It is not understood why, if the season proved favorable, the area sown this year should fall so short of the normal.
	Purnea	24,000	22,700	23,000	13	16	The season being favourable, a larger area than that of last year was sown with wheat in the Sadar sub-division.
	Santhal Parganas	68,400	65,100	66,000	12	14	Taking the district outturn as a whole, it is expected to be better than last year's, and is attributable to better distribution of rainfall.	The Deputy Commissioner returned last year's acreage under wheat as 14,212 acres. This error has been corrected and the figure changed to 65,100 acres, which area was returned under wheat in the final report on the wheat crop of 1893-94.
BURDWAN.	Malda	86,500	42,000	42,000	8	16	The season was favourable to the cultivation of the wheat crop, and 16 annas outturn is expected.	The cause of the large decrease in the area sown this year as compared with the normal should be explained in the final report.
	Burdwan	2,100	1,400	1,400	10½	12	There is no extensive wheat cultivation in this district. Owing to excessive rain the condition of the crop is worse in the Sadar sub-division than what it was last year. In the Kalna sub-division heavy rainfall in November 1894 affected the outturn, and it will, therefore, be the same as was in last year. Owing to seasonable rainfall in sowing time the outturn in the Katwa sub-division is expected to be better than last year. In the Raniganj sub-division there is an increase in the present estimate of outturn, which is apparently due to the sufficient rainfall.

CHOTA NAGPUR.	Bankura	6,500	5,900	12	14	The favourable state of the weather at the sowing season, as well as afterwards, has increased the area under wheat and has improved the prospects of the crop as compared with last year. The decrease of area as compared with the normal is said to be due to facilities for sowing other crops.
	Birbhum	5,500	5,500	13	13	Owing to late rainfall in the sowing season and want of rainfall since, the area under wheat has fallen slightly this year, and the outturn is not likely to be more than 12 annas.
	Hazaribagh ...	9,500	8,000	11	13½	The deficiency in the area and outturn is due to heavy rains which lasted very late this year.
	Lohardaga ...	2,200	1,800	7	10	The increase over the area sown in 1893-94 as also in the outturn is due to comparatively seasonable rainfall, but the decrease as compared with the normal area is owing to excess of moisture.
	Palamau	19,000	18,900	12	16	The increase in the area and outturn is due to sufficient rain during the sowing and ploughing seasons.	The Deputy Commissioner estimates the outturn at 16 annas against 15 annas reported by the police, and also considers the estimate of area sown this year to be low.
	Manbhum ...	79,500	79,500	8	10	The crop at present appears to be promising as there has not been too much rain.	If the crop be promising, 10 annas would seem to be a low estimate.
	Singhbhum ...	2,800	*2,800	9	13	The increase in outturn is due to seasonable rainfall.
PRESIDENCY.	Nadia	37,500	19,600	11	10	The increase in the area sown is due to the improvement of lands on account of floods and also to the fact that several rabi crops sown broadcast were damaged by the excessive rainfall in September, October, and the beginning of November last. The season being late, the cultivators could not renew the lands with the same crops, but sowed wheat thereon. If there be rain at the end of January the outturn will probably exceed the estimate.
	Murshidabad ...	150,500	123,700	132,200	10	13	The decrease in area sown this year as compared with the normal and last year's area is due to the soil being moist on account of heavy rains in ploughing time. The increase in the estimated outturn is attributable to the moisture of lands owing to the heavy showers at the close of the rainy season.

DIVISION.	District.	Approximate normal area under wheat.	Approximate area sown last year (1893-94).	Estimated area sown this year (1894-95).	Taking 16 annas to represent the average outturn per acre, how many annas represented outturn last year (1893-94).	Taking 16 annas to represent the average outturn per acre, how many annas will represent this year's outturn (1894-95).	Remarks by the District Officers.	Remarks by the Department of Land Records and Agriculture, Bengal.
1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
		Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Annas.	Annas.
RAJSHAHI.	Rajshahi ...	84,500	84,500	75,400	12½	14	In the Nesgaon and Sadar sub-divisions, owing to late rains, many cultivators could not sow the seeds in time, and there is a decrease in the area cultivated. In the Nator and Nesgaon sub-divisions the moisture in the land and bright sunshine will facilitate the growth of the plants and 16 annas outturn is expected. In the Sadar sub-division not more than 11 annas outturn is expected on account of want of rainfall in the sowing season. The district average outturn is estimated to be 14½ annas.
	Pabna ...	23,600	23,100	15,400	8	16	The water of the last rains not having subsided in the usual time, the cultivation of the lands ordinarily sown with wheat was retarded, and hence the decrease in cultivation; but there being no rains at the sowing time, an average outturn is expected.
	Rangpur ...	40,000	40,000	29,800	13	10	There is not much wheat cultivation in the Sadar and Kilpahari sub-divisions.	It should be explained in the Final report why the area sown this year has fallen so considerably short of the normal.
	Darjeeling ...	5,600	5,100	5,100	10	14	Better outturn is expected on account of seasonable rainfall.
DACCA.	Faridpur ...	2,000	2,000	1,600	8	8	The sowing was retarded owing to the soil remaining wet till lately, on account of the flood continuing longer this year than usual, and of the heavy rainfall in November last. It is yet too early to form a correct estimate of the probable outturn. Hardly more than 8 annas is expected.
	Total ...	1,55,600	1,53,500	1,25,300	11½	(a)15	.....	(a) As estimated by the department.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL, AND OF THE METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN ASSAM, FOR THE MONTH OF JANUARY 1895.

THE following have been the principal features in the meteorology of January 1895 :—

1. The mean pressure for the month has varied very slightly from the normal. About one-half of the stations report very slight excess pressures, usually of about 0·01″ or under, and the remaining half slight defects of about similar amounts. Hence the general average pressure for the whole month has been almost absolutely normal. In Assam on the whole pressure has been in defect by nearly 0·02″. The barometric changes from day to day during the month have also been generally small.

2. The average mean temperature for the month for South-West, North, and East Bengal has been almost absolutely normal. Bihar, Orissa, and Chota Nagpur, on the other hand, have shown slight excess temperatures, ranging from about half to one degree. In the case of the day temperatures, however, they have been in general defect by about a degree, while on the other hand the night, or minimum, temperatures have been in excess at the majority of stations by rather more than a degree.

3. Humidity has been in distinct excess at all stations, the excess amount usually averaging from 5 to 10 per cent. On the other hand, cloud proportion has usually been in slight defect from the normal amount.

4. The weather in Bengal during January was affected by rather numerous barometric depressions coming from North-Western and Central India. The first disturbance was caused by a feeble depression from the 1st to the 3rd; the province was then affected by a second depression from the 8th to the 10th; by a third depression from the 11th to the 14th, and by a fourth from the 16th to the 18th. A fifth depression, which gave moderate general rain, affected Bengal from the 22nd to the 25th, after which fine settled weather prevailed practically till the end of the month. The majority of these five depressions were, however, feeble, and gave very little rain, but each gave a wave of high temperature and humidity in front of and in connection with the depression, and usually a cool wave in its rear.

5. Rain has, however, been received in all divisions, the amounts ranging from about four-tenths of an inch in Bihar and Chota Nagpur and a fifth of an inch in South-West Bengal and Orissa to only a few hundredths of an inch in East Bengal, and in all divisions the falls have been rather largely below the normal amounts.

The following is a brief summary of the principal meteorological changes which have occurred during January :—

At the end of December a barometric depression had entered North-Western India, and had travelled in a south-easterly direction, and on the 31st of December it was in Bundelkhand. On the 1st of January the depression had moved slightly eastwards, and was a little to the east of Sutna. On the 2nd the depression covered Orissa, South Bengal and the head of Bay, while on the 3rd it had partially, and on the 4th it had entirely filled up. Hence, with the advance of this depression, temperature, humidity, and cloud proportion became high, while pressure was low, but the depression was not of sufficient importance to give any general rainfall, and only a few local showers occurred in Bihar, principally in the Champaran district. From the 4th, however, fine settled weather with comparatively low temperature and humidity again set in, which lasted till about the 8th, when Bengal began to be affected by a second barometric depression, which had appeared on the North-West Frontier on the 6th, and had advanced eastwards till on the 8th its centre was near Nowgong in Bundelkhand.

Hence pressure began to fall slowly over the western districts of Bengal on the 8th, while a further increase of temperature occurred, and both day and night temperatures in Bengal became rather considerably in excess of the normal, while humidity was also decidedly high. On the 9th the depression had remained practically stationary, but pressure had fallen slightly to briskly over the western half of Bengal, showing that the depression had decidedly intensified and was affecting Bengal more largely, and hence temperature again rose and the sky became lightly to moderately clouded. On the 10th the depression had advanced in a south-easterly direction, and probably existed over the head of the Bay, but it had become very feeble, and was not well marked. Pressure was hence falling slowly over the southern and eastern districts of Bengal, while it was rising elsewhere, and temperature had again risen moderately and both day and night temperatures became in excess by amounts ranging from about 2° over a large part of the province up to 5° and 6° in the western districts. On the 11th the depression at the head of the Bay disappeared, but a new depression accompanied by an irregular cyclonic circulation of winds appeared in Bundelkhand, which again affected the weather in Bengal, where pressure had fallen moderately, while temperature rose briskly, and at several stations southerly winds appeared, which caused a very considerable increase in the humidity. On this day the excess in the mean temperature at a good many stations equalled about 5°, while in certain cases, such as at Jalpaiguri, the night temperatures were about 10° higher than usual. On the 12th the depression had advanced from Bundelkhand, and had travelled eastwards into Bengal, and hence temperature and humidity were high, and excess amounts of 8° to 10° were recorded in the night temperatures at such stations as Patna, Gaya, Saugor Island and Berhampur. On the 13th pressure had begun to rise slightly in Bihar and Chota Nagpur, while it fell moderately to rapidly at the eastern and northern stations in the province, and a very decided barometric depression again existed in North Bengal. On the 14th pressure had again risen briskly to rapidly in Bengal and Assam, and the depression had to a great extent disappeared, but temperature in Bengal still continued excessive. Rather general rain had also been received in Bihar and Chota Nagpur in connection with this depression, and very numerous rain-showers were reported on the morning of the 15th in the western and northern districts. On the 15th, though pressure continued to rise in Bengal, while temperature also fell slowly, yet conditions were far from settled, for a cyclonic circulation of winds commenced in the North-Western and Central Provinces, and this was apparently connected with another feeble low-pressure area, which began to pass eastwards through Bengal on the 16th, causing a brisk to rapid fall of pressure, particularly in the western districts, and causing a large increase in the cloud proportion with fairly general rain in Bihar, and somewhat numerous but usually light rain showers in Chota Nagpur. On the 17th pressure continued to fall slowly over Bengal, and the province was still rather largely influenced by the depression, so that skies were overcast over a very considerable area, though the rainfall had to a great extent ceased, but temperature had risen briskly at the great majority of stations. On the 18th pressure began to rise in Bengal, and the depression was hence disappearing; so that temperature commenced to fall briskly, the decrease in the mean temperature at many stations equalling 5° and 6°; cloud proportion and humidity also began to decrease, and only one or two local showers were reported. On the 19th the effects of the depression had quite disappeared, temperature had fallen considerably, and had become decidedly low and below the normal, while a dry northerly current was blowing over the whole of Bengal, skies were almost cloudless, and no rain had fallen.

Fine settled weather of the ordinary cold-season type therefore again set in from the 19th and lasted till the 22nd, when a depression advanced from South Rajputana and Central India into the eastern districts of the North-Western Provinces and Bundelkhand, and began to affect Bengal. On the 23rd the depression had advanced over Bengal, and on the 24th it had either broken or filled up or had passed eastwards from India. In its advance over Bengal it gave the usual large rise in temperature and increase in humidity and cloud proportion, and in addition it gave fairly general rain on the 23rd over the greater part of the province, and at this time the most general and probably the heaviest rainfall of the month was received. From about the 25th instant, however, again, fine settled weather of rather strongly developed north-east monsoon character set in over Bengal accompanied by decidedly low temperatures, and at this time several stations in South-West and North Bengal, Bihar, and Chota Nagpur registered night temperatures of about 43° and 44°. The weather then continued fine, but with gradually increasing temperature until practically the close of the month, when Bengal again began to be slightly affected by a depression which was advancing from North-Western India.

Pressure.—The variations of pressure due to the passage of the depressions through the province have not been large, and the comparatively low pressure experienced during the depressions has been to a great extent neutralized by the high pressures registered during the cold waves following in the rear of the depressions. Hence the variation of the mean pressure from the normal has been unusually small, and the average pressure for the whole province has been practically normal. Slight excess amounts, usually not exceeding a hundredth of an inch, have been recorded at about half the number of reporting stations, and similar defects at the other half. The variations of pressure from the normal, week by week, showed that pressure was in slight defect in the first and second weeks, it was nearly normal in the middle of the month, while for the remainder of the month pressure was usually in slight excess. In Assam the average defect of pressure for the month equalled 0·019".

Temperature.—The average mean temperature of Bengal was 0·9° in excess in the first week of the month, while in the second week the excess had risen to no less than 3·7°. In the third week the excess had fallen to 0·5°, while a rapid fall of temperature then occurred, and a defect of 2·2° was registered for the next week, while at the close of the month temperature was becoming normal. Hence, for the whole month, for the whole province the mean temperature was in excess by only 0·4°, the excess being practically confined to Chota Nagpur, Orissa and Bihar. The excess was also practically entirely confined to the night, or minimum temperatures, for the average day, or maximum temperatures, for the month have usually been in small defect.

In Assam the temperature for the month was 1° in excess of the normal.

The actual variations of the maximum, minimum, and mean temperatures, week by week, for the month from the normal values at nine typical stations in different divisions of the province are given in the following table :—

Rainfall.— The largest average divisional rainfalls have equalled about four-tenths of an inch only in Bihar and Chota Nagpur, while the falls in South-West Bengal and Orissa have averaged about a fifth of an inch only. In North and East Bengal the rainfalls have averaged the small amounts of an eighth and a sixteenth of an inch respectively. Hence in all cases the divisional rainfalls have been rather largely below the normal.

In the case of the smaller districts the falls have been about equal to, or in some cases even in excess of, the normal amounts in Burdwan, Bankura, Nadia, Patna, Gaya, Shahabad, Saran, Monghyr, Puri, Palamau and Manbhum, while on the other hand the following districts have received either no rain at all or amounts only averaging one or two hundredths of an inch:—Midnapur, Howrah, Calcutta, Dacca, Furridpur, Backergunge, Noakhali, Chittagong, South Lushai Hills, Cuttack and Balasore.

In Assam during the month Sibsagar has received 1·58 inch of rain, Dhubri 0·18 inch, and Silchar 0·16 inch.

The results of observations at the Alipore Observatory are not rigorously comparable with the registers of past years (at the Park Street Observatory). The barometer is about 3 feet higher at Alipore, and, other things being equal, reads therefore ·003 lower. The diurnal range of temperature is also greater at Alipore, and the mean temperature apparently about 2·5⊖ lower; and, finally, the thermometer which furnished the record of temperature at the Surveyor-General's Office during 20 years and upwards is found to read 0·6 higher than the Kew standard thermometer, which is the standard of reference at the present Observatory.

N.B.—The anemograph was under repair from 2 p.m. of the 10th to 4 p.m. of the 14th January 1895; hence the results of that period are deficient.

Explanation.—... indicates that no rain has fallen. If the return for any day has not been received, the corresponding space is left blank. If any of the returns are wanting, the corresponding spaces in the total rainfall columns are left blank. With reference to the column of rainy days, the definition of a rainy day is when at least 0·10 inch of rain has fallen.

CALCUTTA, the 12th February 1895.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING 8 A.M., SATURDAY, THE 9TH OF FEBRUARY 1895.

At the close of the previous week weather had become rather disturbed in Bengal as a barometric depression which had advanced eastwards from North-Western India had reached Bundelkhand, Chota Nagpur and the adjacent districts of the Central Provinces, and hence on the 2nd instant pressure was low and temperature very high in Bengal, the excess in the night temperature ranging up to about 10°; skies were also almost overcast and a good many rain-showers were reported. On the 3rd or the first day of the week under review, the depression had moved in an easterly direction and was lying over the western and central districts of Bengal, but it was becoming rather more feeble in character, though pressure was falling rapidly at the eastern and northern stations. Hence temperature and humidity continued unusually high, the skies were still rather heavily clouded, and a good many light local showers were reported. On the 4th instant pressure again fell briskly to rapidly at the eastern and northern stations, and a decided depression continued to exist in and near the Himalayas. The changes of temperature were variable, but a rather rapid reduction of humidity commenced, and skies began to clear.

On the 5th a brisk to rapid increase of pressure had occurred, and the depression had practically filled up, and the cool wave of air in the rear of the depression swept over Bengal, giving again fine settled weather with a rapid decrease in both temperature and humidity, so that temperature became much more nearly normal than it had been. On the 6th pressure continued to increase slightly to briskly, while a further rapid fall of temperature occurred, and the mean temperature became usually from 3° to 6° below the normal. From the 6th to the morning of the 9th the changes were unimportant, and rather strongly developed north-east monsoon conditions prevailed over Bengal, but on the 9th another very feeble form of barometric depression began to advance over Bengal from the Central Provinces, giving again rapidly increasing temperature and humidity with a large increase of cloud, though the decrease of pressure was small. Hence at the beginning and end of the week conditions were a little abnormal and somewhat disturbed, but for the remainder of the period the north-east monsoon conditions were rather strongly developed.

Pressure was rather largely in defect of the normal at the commencement of the week, and the defect then slowly but steadily disappeared, and from the 7th pressure was in moderate excess, though at the close of the week the excess had disappeared, and pressure had become almost normal, though, if anything, slightly in defect. Hence the average pressure for the week has been in very distinct defect, usually varying from 0·02″ to 0·05″.

Temperature.—The average mean temperature of the whole province has been about one degree below the normal, the defect being largest in Bihar and Chota Nagpur. On the other hand, in Orissa, slight excess temperature has been registered.

The actual temperatures registered during the week, and their variations from the normal temperature of the present season, are clearly seen in the table below, where the average maximum, minimum, and mean temperatures for the week at nine typical stations in different districts of the province are compared with the normal values for the same period. The variations, it will be seen, have been large in the day or maximum temperatures, which have been in defect at most stations by about two to three degrees, while they have been in defect at others by about 5°. At most stations the night or minimum temperatures have also been in slight defect, while on the other hand four stations report slight excess temperatures:—

Rainfall.—The average falls in Chota Nagpur and Orissa have equalled from about a quarter to a fifth of an inch, while elsewhere the average falls have only equalled a few hundredths of an inch. Hence in all divisions the falls have been largely below the normal amounts.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the six meteorological divisions of the province for the week ending Saturday, the 9th of February 1895 :—

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

RETIREMENT OF MAHÁMAHOPÁDHYÁYA MAHES CHANDRA NYÁYÁRATNA, C.I.E.

The 19th February 1895.—The retirement of Mahámahopádhyáya Mahes Chandra Nyáyáratna, C.I.E., from the Principalship of the Sanskrit College affords the Lieutenant-Governor a suitable opportunity for placing on record his appreciation of the services rendered by the Pandit, during his long career as a Government officer, alike to Sanskrit learning and to the spread of education. While his general culture in the field of Sanskrit learning is exceptionally wide, his special reputation as a student of Nyáyá stands high among the scholars of India and Europe. Since his first appointment as Officiating Principal of the Sanskrit College in 1877, he has steadily devoted himself to the encouragement of the study of Sanskrit in the indigenous Tols of the country. The institution of the Sanskrit Title Examination, which has proved so popular and successful a measure, and the substantial rewards more recently offered to tol-pandits and their pupils throughout the Province, for proficiency in Sanskrit as tested by examination, owe their origin to his direct initiative. Both these measures have appealed widely to popular sympathies, and have elicited large contributions from private liberality in their support. When he has been consulted upon measures affecting the public weal, the influence of the Pandit has been steadily ranged on the side of order and good government, while his sound and temperate judgment, his uprightness and loyalty, have lent weight to his counsels. The cordial good wishes of the Government of Bengal follow Mahámahopádhyáya Mahes Chandra Nyáyáratna in his well-earned retirement.

(2). Any money placed by any enactment for the time being in force at the disposal of a Local Government for the purpose of the establishment or maintenance of hospitals, dispensaries, lunatic asylums or other institutions for affording medical relief, may, notwithstanding anything in such enactment, be applied to all or any of the purposes mentioned in sub-section (1), clause (a).

On conviction before a Magistrate of a breach of such bye-law, a fine may be inflicted not exceeding rupees twenty, and a fine of rupees ten for each day during which the offence is continued after conviction for such offence. The provisions of the Act under which the Commissioners are appointed and elected relating to bye-laws shall apply to any bye-law made and confirmed under this Act.

Power of Inspector of Lepers to inspect suspected persons.

13. It shall be lawful for an Inspector of Lepers to require any person, whom he has reason to believe to be a pauper leper, or a leper carrying on any trade or calling within a municipality which a leper is prohibited from carrying on, to afford him reasonable opportunity of satisfying himself whether such person is a leper or not, and he shall be legally bound to afford an Inspector of Lepers such opportunity.

Appeals.

14. Any person other than a pauper leper, in respect of whom an Inspector of Lepers has issued a certificate in the form (B) provided in the schedule declaring him to be a leper, or has refused to issue a certificate in the form (A) provided in the schedule, may appeal to such officer as may be appointed by the Local Government to hear such appeals, and the decision of such officer shall be final.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE expediency of segregating pauper lepers under proper safeguards, and of forbidding lepers generally from exercising certain trades and callings connected with human food, drink, and clothing, was urged by the Leprosy Commission which visited India in 1890-91. Experience in Bombay having shown that these recommendations can be successfully carried into effect, the accompanying Bill has been prepared to legalise the introduction of similar measures in Bengal.

2. The Bill defines as "lepers" persons suffering from the disease of leprosy, in whom the process of ulceration has commenced, and as "pauper lepers" those lepers who have no ostensible means of subsistence, and who have solicited public charity. Next it deals with the arrest, examination, segregation in a properly constituted leper asylum, and discharge of pauper lepers who have been certified to be such by duly qualified authorities: it also enables local bodies to assist in providing for the maintenance and medical treatment of pauper lepers while so secluded. Lastly, it treats of the restraints to be placed on lepers who are not paupers, and enables the Commissioners of a Municipality, with the sanction of Government, to make rules and bye-laws under the Act by which it is constituted, forbidding lepers to engage in certain specified trades and occupations of the character above described.

AUSTRALIA—GREAT SANDY STRAIT.

Exhibition of certain lights.

THE Portmaster, Brisbane, has given notice (No. 24 of 1894) that on and after 1st January 1895 the following lights will be exhibited to assist in navigating Great Sandy Strait by night, viz:—

Three white lights off Snout Point, forming two leads, bearing N. 2° E. and S. 17° E., respectively;
Two lights, red and white, at Figtree Creek, Great Sandy Island, bearing S. 60° E.;
Two lights, red and white, on Stewart Island, bearing S. 28° E.;
Two lights, red and white, Moonboom Island, bearing N. 49° W.;
One light, green, on dolphin off N.E. end of Moonboom Island;
One light, white, on Boonlyo Point, Great Sandy Island;
Two lights, red and white, north of Round Bush, bearing N. 43° W.;
One light, red, on dolphin, west side of channel;
Two lights, red and white, at Sheridan Flats, bearing S. 52° W.;
Two lights, white, to northward of South White Cliffs, bearing S. 18° E.

Directions.—Vessels from the southward will, on approaching Snout Point, bring the two white leading lights there in line, and keep them so until within a cable's length of the lower and nearer light, when steer to pass it a short ship's length off on the starboard hand, and continue until it comes in line astern with a third white light to the S.E. Keep the latter line until the red and white leading lights at Figtree Creek come in line astern, when the latter line is to be kept until the white light on Stewart Island opens out, when haul up at once and steer to pass it on the starboard hand a ship's length off; continue until past the red light on the island, when bring these two last-named lights in line astern (keeping them a little open to the eastward) until the red and white lights on Moonboom Island are in line ahead. Leave the latter line when within half-a-cable's length of the red light and steer to pass the green light at a ship's length off on the port hand; steer thence to pass at a similar distance on the starboard hand the white light on Boonlyo Point, and bring the red and white lights of the round Bush lead in line; keep them so until the red dolphin light to N.N.W. comes in line with the white back light of the Sheridan Flats lead, and keep these lights in line until near the red, when steer to pass it on the port hand at a ship's length off, then bring it in line astern with the white back light of the Round Bush lead and continue so until the Sheridan Flats lights are in line. Keep the latter in line astern until the South White Cliffs lights are in line, when steer for them until near the steep shore of Sandy Island. Follow this shore to the northward at a distance of half-a-cable until two white lights on the island come in line astern, which lead up to the main channel just to the eastward of the Junction Buoy.

APPENDIX TO

The Calcutta Gazette.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1895.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL,—MARINE DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 19 Marine, dated Calcutta, the 13*th February* 1895.

UNDER section 10 of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1859, the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased, with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council, to make the following rules for the conduct of examinations for Masters and Mates of Foreign-going Ships and Home Trade Ships and as to the qualifications to be required. These rules are in supersession of the rules issued under notifications Nos. 25 and 26 Marine, dated Calcutta, the 30th and 31st January 1890, respectively, and will take effect from the 1st of May 1895.

C. W. ODLING,
Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

Foreign-going Certificates superior to Home Trade Passenger Ship Certificates.

2. Every Certificate of Competency for a "Foreign-going Ship" is to be deemed to be of a higher grade than the corresponding Certificate for a "Home Trade Passenger Ship," and entitles the lawful holder to go to sea in the corresponding grade in such last-mentioned Ship; but no Certificate for a "Home Trade Passenger Ship" entitles the holder to go to sea as Master or Mate of a "Foreign-going Ship," nor does a Certificate of Service entitle the possessor to act in a Vessel of any class except that for which it is granted.

Certificates granted to persons who pass examinations.

3. Certificates of Competency will be granted to those persons who pass the requisite examinations and otherwise comply with the requisite conditions. For this purpose examiners have been appointed, and arrangements have been made for holding examinations at the ports and upon the days mentioned in Appendix A.

Examinations continued till all the Candidates are examined.

4. The examinations will commence early in the forenoon, and will be continued from day to day until all the Candidates whose names appear upon the Port Officer's list on the day of examination are examined.

Notice of application for examination to be given to the Port Officer.

5. Candidates for examination must make their application upon the appropriate form (Exn. 2) which must be filled up at the Port Office. The Exn. 2., properly filled in, together with the Candidate's testimonials and discharges, must be lodged with the Port Officer of Calcutta, not later than the day before the day of examination, and the Candidate must conform to any regulations in this respect which may be laid down by the Government, as, if this be not done, delay may be occasioned, and it is therefore desirable that the discharges and testimonials should be handed in, together with the Form, Exn. 2, as many days as possible before the date of the examination which the Candidate desires to attend, as in the absence of the necessary verification the candidate cannot be examined.

Sea Service not strictly in accordance with the Regulations.

6. In cases where a Candidate is in doubt whether his Sea Service complies with the Regulations, and he wishes to submit his case for special consideration, all Certificates, discharges, testimonials, &c., together with the Form, Exn. 2 (which can be obtained at the Port Office) properly filled in, and a concise statement of the irregularity, should be sent to the Port Officer of Calcutta. If necessary, the Port Officer will, after seeing that the required information is clearly set forth in the papers, and making his remarks thereon, forward them to the Government who will deal with the case, or the Port Officer may transmit it to the Board of Trade for decision.

Inquiries regarding examinations.

7. All other Inquiries regarding examinations should be made and dealt with in the same way. The point on which information is sought should be clearly stated, and Certificates, discharges, testimonials, &c., should be forwarded when they are material to the inquiry.

Foreigners to know English.

8. Foreigners must prove, to the satisfaction of the Examiners, that they can speak and write the English language sufficiently well to perform the duties required of them on board a British Vessel (see also paras. 21 and 130). In the case of candidates for Home Trade Certificates, the Certificates of Asiatics who may not be able to speak English shall be endorsed to the effect that they are valid only for vessels manned and officered entirely by Asiatics.

Certificates as to age.

9. Should any doubt exist as to the age of a Candidate, he will be required to produce a certificate of birth.

Inaccurate statements of service.

10. It is provided by the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (sec. 104), that every person who makes, or procures to be made, or assists in making, any false presentation for the purpose of obtaining for himself or for any other person a Certificate of Competency, shall for each offence be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour,—the punishment for which is imprisonment for any period not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour, or a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees. These provisions will be strictly enforced by the Government, and any Candidate for a Certificate of Competency as Master, or as First, or Second, or Only Mate, in the Merchant Service, who shall, knowingly and fraudulently, for the purpose of obtaining any such Certificate, present to the Port Office of Calcutta any "application to be examined for a Certificate of Competency" (Exn. 2) or statutory declaration containing any false or inaccurate statement of service, and any person who shall knowingly and fraudulently make or prepare, or assist in making or preparing, any such false or inaccurate statement, will be prosecuted.

Form Exn. 16. Completion of examination.

11. If the Candidate passes he will receive the Form Exn. 16, which authorises the Port Officer to whom it is addressed by the Examiner to issue the Certificate to the Candidate, whose testimonials, &c., will be returned at the same time. It is therefore important that the port of destination of the Certificate should be the same on both the Form Exn. 16 and the Form Exn. 2. If circumstances should make any alteration necessary, the Examiner should see that it is made in both Forms, otherwise delay in the issue of the Certificate may be caused.

If after passing examination services are found to have been insufficient.

12. If after a candidate has passed his examination it is discovered on further investigation, e.g., by verification on the part of the Port Officer, that his services are insufficient to entitle him to receive a Certificate of the grade for which he has passed, such Certificate will not be granted to him; but if the Government is satisfied that the error in the calculation of the Candidate's services did not occur through any fault or wilful misrepresentation on his part, he may be granted a Certificate of such lower grade as his service entitles him to. The difference, if any, between the fee paid by him for the superior Certificate and the fee payable for the inferior Certificate will be placed to his credit. A Certificate for the higher grade will not be granted until the Candidate has performed the amount of service in which he was deficient, and has been re-examined in all the subjects.

Suspension or Cancellation of Certificates.

13. Certificates are liable to suspension or cancellation:—

(1) On an investigation ordered by the Government under section 478 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, into the incompetency or misconduct of the possessors.

(2) By courts of inquiry into shipping casualties under the 6th part of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894.

(3) By the Government under section 20 of the Merchant Shipping Act V (I.C.) of 1883.

14. No Certificate which has been cancelled will be reissued or renewed without the express sanction of the Government.

Regulations as regards Sea Service and other qualifications for Examination.

15. For Foreign-going Certificates the term "Sea Service" means, unless otherwise stated, service performed in Foreign-going Vessels. "Sea Service."

16. For Home Trade Passenger Ship Certificates Service in the Home or Coasting Trade is regarded as equivalent to service in the Foreign Trade; but for Foreign-going Certificates it is regarded as only equivalent to two-thirds of the same time served in the Foreign Trade. Service in Home or Coasting Trade.

17. CERTIFICATE.—By "Certificate" is meant a Certificate granted by the Board of Trade under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, or the Acts amending the same, or the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894; or by the Government of a British Possession under an Order in Council issued in pursuance of sec. 8 of the Merchant Shipping (Colonial) Act, 1869, or sec. 102 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894; or by the Governments of Bengal, Bombay, and Madras under the Merchant Shipping Act I (I.C.) of 1859. "Certificate."

18. Officer's Service, to be recognised as such, must be performed with the requisite Certificate as specified in paras. 59, 62, and 84, and in Appendix S. The Officer's Service performed by men who have been duly promoted during the course of a voyage (see para. 24), or who in consequence of serving in vessels plying between ports abroad have been unable to obtain the necessary Certificate, may, however, be recognised, provided that it is in other respects satisfactory. Officer's service.

19. Testimonials to character and to sobriety, experience, ability and good conduct on board ship for at least the twelve months of service last preceding the date of application to be examined, will be required of all applicants, and without producing them no person will be examined. Testimonials to character, conduct, and ability required. S. 134.

20. Candidates who have neglected to join their vessels after having signed Articles, or who have deserted their vessels after having joined, or who have been found guilty of gross misconduct on board, will be required to produce satisfactory proofs of two years' subsequent service and good conduct at sea, unless the Local Government, after having investigated the matter, should see fit to reduce the time. Desertion and gross misconduct.

21. The testimonials of service of Foreigners and of British Officers and Seamen serving in foreign vessels, which cannot be verified by the Port Officer, must be confirmed either by the Consul of the country to which the ship in which the Candidate served belonged, or by some other recognised official authority of that country, or by the testimony of some credible person on the spot having personal knowledge of the facts required to be established. The production, however, of such proofs will not of necessity be deemed sufficient. Each case will be decided on its own merits, and if the sufficiency of the proofs given appears to be at all doubtful, it must be referred to the Government. Service in Foreign Vessels.

22. The time for which length of service as Seaman or Officer in the Mercantile Marine is to be reckoned in all cases referred to in the following paragraphs is from the commencement to the termination of the voyage. The Verification of services.

Certificates of Discharge for service in the Foreign Trade will generally be accepted as proof of such service, but Certificates of Discharge for service in the Home or Coasting Trade must always be sent to the Superintendent, Mercantile Marine, for verification. Great care must be exercised by the Port Officer and Examiners so as to detect any tampering with the information contained in these Discharges; any suspicious cases must be reported at once to the Government. If a Candidate has apparently sufficient service to qualify him for Examination for a Certificate of Competency, but some part of such service requires verification, he should fill up the Form (Exn. 2) of Application to be examined, pay the Examination Fee, and forward the Form, together with all his discharges and testimonials, to the Port Officer of Calcutta, who will then make any necessary verification without further charge.

Verification of services by Articles.

23. Services which cannot be verified by proper Entries in the Articles of the Ships in which the Candidates have served cannot be counted. For instance, a man will state his service to have been as Second or Only Mate, and to support his assertion will produce a Certificate of Discharge or of employment by the Master, to the effect that he served as Mate, when on reference to the Articles it appears that he has actually been rated as Boatswain; the service in such a case will not be regarded as having been in the capacity of Mate.

Promotion during Voyage.

24. Whenever a man has, from any cause, been regularly promoted, on the occurrence of a vacancy in the course of the Voyage, from the rank in which he first shipped, and such promotion, with the ground on which it has been made, is properly entered in the Articles and in the Official Log Book, he will receive credit for his service in the higher grade for the period subsequent to his promotion.

Service in Trawlers, &c.

25. Service performed exclusively in Trawlers and other deep sea-fishing vessels will not qualify a Candidate for examination. He must in addition prove the following service:—

(1) For a Foreign-going Certificate, service for at least eighteen months in an ordinary trading vessel in the Foreign Trade, or the equivalent period (27 months) in the Home or Coasting Trade.

(2) For a Home Trade Passenger-ship Certificate, service for at least twelve months in an ordinary trading vessel in the Foreign, Home, or Coasting Trade.

Service in Pleasure Yachts.

26. Service in Pleasure Yachts will be accepted as qualifying service under the following conditions:—

(a) Service in Pleasure Yachts must in all cases be verified by satisfactory proofs, which must set forth clearly and in detail the nature and duration of the service claimed, and it must be distinctly understood that only actual sea service will be accepted, service in harbour or port being inadmissible.

(b) Service in Foreign-going Yachts will be accepted in full; and service performed within Home Trade limits in Sailing Yachts of not less than 50 tons net register or in Steam Yachts of not less than 80 tons gross register will be accepted in the proportion stated in para. 16; but candidates must also show (1) For a Foreign-going Certificate, service for at least eighteen months in an ordinary trading vessel in the Foreign Trade, or for the equivalent period (27 months) in an ordinary trading vessel in the Home or Coasting Trade. (2) For a Home Trade Passenger-ship Certificate, service for at least twelve months in an ordinary trading vessel in the Foreign, Home, or Coasting Trade.

(c) Service within Home Trade limits in Sailing Yachts of under 50 tons and not less than 20 tons net register, or in Steam Yachts of under 80 tons and not less than 40 tons gross register, will be accepted towards qualifying a candidate for a Foreign-going Certificate as equivalent to half the same time served in the Foreign Trade, but no amount of such service shall count as more than two years' service in the Foreign Trade, and no such service shall count as Officers' Service to qualify Candidates for Foreign-going Certificates.

(d) Service within Home Trade limits in Sailing Yachts of not less than 20 tons net register, or in Steam Yachts of not less than 40 tons gross register, will be accepted at the ordinary rate as qualifying service for Home Trade Passenger-ship Certificates, but Candidates must prove that they have in addition served for at least twelve months in an ordinary trading vessel in the Foreign, Home, or Coasting Trade.

(e) Service within Home Trade limits in Sailing Yachts of less than 20 tons net register, or in Steam Yachts of less than 40 tons gross register, will not be accepted as qualifying service for any class of Certificate.

Service in Tug Boats.

27. Service performed in Tug Boats employed in Channel Service or outside partially smooth water limits (see Appendix R) may be accepted as Sea Service qualifying for a Mate's or Master's Certificate for Home Trade Passenger Ships.

Service in Steam Hopper Barges.

28. Service in Steam Hopper barges may (subject to para. 30) be allowed to count towards qualifying a Candidate for a Mate's Certificate of competency for Home Trade Passenger Ships, provided he can prove at least two years' service in an ordinary trading vessel in either the Home, Coasting, or Foreign Trade. Service in these Steam Hoppers will not be accepted as Officer's service towards qualifying a Candidate for a Master's Certificate.

Service in Light-Ships and Engine-room.

29. Service in Light-ships or in an Engine-room will not be accepted as sea service.

Service on rivers and in smooth waters.

30. Service performed on rivers, no matter of what size, and service performed within smooth or partially smooth water limits (see Appendix R.), will not be accepted.

Where any doubt whatever exists on this point, the Candidate must be required to produce a Certificate from the Master or Owner of the vessel in which the service was performed, before the service can be accepted.

Service in Excursion Steamers.

31. In the case of service on board Excursion Steamers only such service as can be proved to have been performed actually at sea can be accepted.

Service in Auxiliary Screw Whaling Ships.

32. Service in Auxiliary Screw Whaling Ships and other Vessels with auxiliary steam power, which use their screws only in calms or during light winds, is considered as service performed in Sailing Vessels.

Only Mate, Home, or Coasting Trade.

33. Service in a lower grade than First or Only Mate in the Home or Coasting Trade will not be recognised as Officer's Service towards qualifying a Candidate for examination for a Foreign Trade Certificate.

Auxiliary Mates.

34. Service as Additional or Auxiliary First Mate, or as Auxiliary Second Mate (when a Third Mate is carried) in large Foreign-going vessels will count as First Mate's or Second Mate's service, as the case may be, provided that the Candidate was entered on the Articles in one of these capacities, and that he was, during the whole time claimed, in charge of a Watch or Watches.

Service "in charge of a Watch."

35. When service "in charge of a Watch" in either the Foreign or Home Trade, is specified in the Regulations, the Candidate will have to prove that during the whole of the time claimed he had the regular charge of a Watch or Watches, which, if in the Foreign Trade, must amount to not less than 8 hours of each 24 hours of service. It must be distinctly understood that occasional service in charge of a Watch will not be accepted as Mate's service under the Regulations.

Great care must be exercised by the Port Officer in regard to such service, and unless the Candidate produces a clear and satisfactory Certificate, specially setting forth the above facts, from the Master or Owner of the Vessel in which the service was performed, it must not be accepted.

Pilot.

36. The term "Pilot" in these Regulations (see paras. 59 and 84, and Appendix S.) means a pilot who is employed in general pilotage, and holds a First Class Pilot's Certificate from some competent authority authorising him to pilot vessels outside Harbour and partially smooth water limits. A Hooghly Master Pilot is for the purpose of this rule to be considered as First Class Pilot.

Service in capacities other than as Apprentice, Midshipman, or Seaman.

37. Candidates whose services have been in capacities other than Apprentice, Midshipman, Ordinary Seaman, or Able Seaman, e.g., Cook (when it is performed in small vessels, where cooking is only a part of a man's duty), Carpenter, or Sailmaker, will be required to satisfy the Port Officer that they have, during the whole time claimed, performed deck duties in addition to their own particular work, and that they have a good knowledge of Seamanship. These facts may possibly be proved by the production of satisfactory Certificates from the Masters with whom the Applicant has served; but such service will only be accepted as equivalent to two-thirds of the same time served as ordinary deck hand. Failing satisfactory evidence, the Applicant will be required to perform additional service in the capacity of Seaman. Service as Cook (under other conditions than the above), or as Steward, will not be accepted.

Service on board a Training Ship.

38. Half the time served on board a training ship will be allowed to count as service at sea up to a limit of one year (i.e., no length of service will be allowed to count as more than one year at sea), provided that the Candidate can produce a Certificate from the Committee that he has conducted himself creditably and passed a good examination in seamanship, so far as it is practised in the training ship, as well as in other matters, down to the time of his leaving the ship, but this service will not be regarded as equivalent to service in square-rigged vessels.

Apprentices.

39. The whole of the time served under Indentures of Apprenticeship (unless the same are cancelled through some fault of the Candidate) will be accepted as actual Sea Service under the Regulations, provided that the Applicant has served at sea four-fifths of the time claimed as Apprentice (i.e., that he has not spent more than one-fifth of the time claimed in Home Ports), and provided also that his Indentures are endorsed by the Owner or Master to whom he has been bound, to the effect that he has performed his service faithfully during the time he remained Apprentice. In cases where an Apprentice may be qualified for examination before the expiration of his Indentures (or for any other satisfactory reason), a letter from the Owner or Master will be accepted in place of this endorsement.

In the event of the Candidate being short of the required four-fifths of his Apprentice's time out of the United Kingdom, he will be required to show sufficient additional sea service, either as seaman or junior officer, to make up the four-fifths of the time claimed as Apprentice.

Midshipmen in the Mercantile Marine.

40. The whole of the time served as Midshipman in the Mercantile Marine will be accepted, subject to the same conditions as those laid down for Apprentices, provided the Candidate has been bound by Indentures during the time claimed as Midshipman, but not otherwise.

Apprentice in Trinity House Vessels.

41. Five years completed service as Apprentice in a Trinity House Steam Vessel will be allowed to count as three years service at sea towards qualifying a Candidate to be examined for a Second Mate's Certificate for Foreign-going Steamships, and the remaining twelve months' service required by the Regulations must be performed in a Foreign-going Trading Vessel, either steam or sailing; or, seven years' completed service in a Trinity House Steam Vessel will be allowed to count as three and-a-half years at sea, while the remaining six months must be performed in a Foreign-going Trading Vessel, either steam or sailing.

Five or more years completed service as Apprentice in a Trinity House Steam Vessel will be allowed to count as two and-a-half years service at sea towards qualifying a Candidate to be examined for an Ordinary Certificate as Second Mate; the remaining 18 months service required by the Regulations to be performed in a Foreign-going (Trading) Sailing Vessel.

Service in the Royal Navy, Royal Indian Marine, and Royal Naval Reserve.

Service in Royal Navy.

42. Officers of the Royal Navy are at liberty to apply for Certificates of Service and to be examined for Certificates of Competency in the Mercantile Marine, but the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have directed that the applications of officers on the active list should be made through their commanding officers, and that the applications of officers on half-pay should be made to the Secretary of the Admiralty, who, in either case, will forward the application to the Government. In the case of Royal Indian Marine officers' applications to be made through the Government of India.

43. The conditions on which Certificates of service are issued are stated at page 40.

44. Officers of the Royal Navy or Royal Indian Marine desirous of being examined for Certificates of competency in the Mercantile Marine will be required to prove the following service, and if the officer wishes to obtain an Ordinary Certificate he must prove that at least twelve months of this required period was served under sail alone.

45. For Second Mate.—A Candidate must produce satisfactory evidence of four years' service at sea, or that he has attained the rank of Acting Sub-Lieutenant.

46. For Only Mate.—A Candidate must prove five years' service at sea.

47. For First Mate or Master.—A candidate must show that he has attained the rank of Sub-Lieutenant.

48. Officers of the Royal Naval Reserve who perform sea service on board Her Majesty's ships in the capacity of Lieutenant or Sub-Lieutenant, will be allowed to count such service as if it had been performed on Foreign-going Merchant Ships; and the service will rank according to the Certificate of Competency held by the Candidate at the time.

Drill in Royal Naval Reserve, &c.

49. If accompanied by a good report, half the time spent in Drill in the Royal Naval Reserve, and in Harbour Ships of the Royal or Colonial Navies, will be allowed to count as sea service, subject to the limit that no such service must amount to more than one-fourth of the time required for the particular grade of Certificate applied for.

* See Appendix M.
† See Appendix L.

93. The Examination is open to all who are qualified to go up for a Master's Certificate for Foreign-going Steamships, or who have already obtained such a Certificate. It is open also to men who have failed in the Examination for an Extra Master's Certificate to show the requisite knowledge of the management of square-rigged sailing vessels, provided they can prove the necessary amount of Officer's service in Steamships. Voluntary Examination in the Laws of the Deviation of the Compasses of Iron Ships.

105. Any person holding a Certificate of any grade, whether for the Foreign or Home Trade, or as Master of his own Pleasure Yacht, who wishes to pass a voluntary examination in the Syllabus* of examination on the Laws of the Deviation of the Compasses of an Iron Ship, &c., can at any time be examined upon filling up the usual form of application, and paying to the Port Officer the fee of Rs. 12. If the Candidate passes the examination successfully, a note to that effect will be duly made upon the Certificate held by him.

Voluntary Examination in Steam.

Voluntary Examination in Steam.

106. These examinations are provided for the purpose of giving Masters and Mates who are possessed of Certificates of Competency an opportunity of undergoing a voluntary examination as to their practical knowledge of the use and working of the steam-engine. They are conducted on the premises, and under the superintendence, of the Port Officer at such times as he may appoint for the purpose; and the Examiners are selected by the Government from the Engineer Surveyors appointed under the Indian Steam Ships' Act, 1884.

Application how to be made. Exn. 2.

107. Any person holding a certificate, of any grade, whether for the Foreign or Home Trade, or as Master of his own Pleasure Yacht, who desires to be examined in Steam must deliver to the Port Officer a statement in writing to that effect, upon the Form of Application (Exn. 2), and the Applicant's Certificate of Competency must be delivered to the Port Officer along with his statement.

Fee to be paid. Conduct of examination, &c.

108. A fee of Rs. 12 must be paid by the Applicant, and the Port Officer will thereupon inform him of the time and place at which he is to attend to be examined, and the examination will then and there proceed in the same manner as the other examinations. If the Applicant fails, his Certificate will be at once returned to him.

Record of Certificate. Exn. 14.

109. If the Applicant passes, the Report (Exn. 14) and the Certificate of Competency, together with the Form (Exn. 2), will be sent to the Government; the words "Passed in Steam." with the date and place of examination, will then be entered on the Certificate and its counterpart, and the Certificate will be sent to the Port Officer and be delivered to the Applicant in the usual manner.

Failure.

110. If the Applicant fails he may not present himself for re-examination until the expiration of three months from the date of failure.

Extent of examination.

111. The examination is for the most part viva voce, and extends to a general knowledge of the practical use and working of the steam-engine, and of the various valves, fittings, and pieces of machinery connected with it. Intricate theoretical questions on calculations of horse-power or areas of cylinders and valves, or any of the more difficult questions which appertain to steam-engines and boilers, will not be asked. The examination will in fact be confined to the duties which a Master of a steam-vessel may be called upon to perform in the case of the death, incapacity, or delinquency of the engineer.

112. Examiners are to be careful in their examinations to satisfy themselves that Applicants really do know the names and uses of the various parts of engines and boilers, and their connecting pipes, valves, cocks, &c. Practical knowledge, as distinguished from theories, abstruse calculations, and book learning, is to be the test of the Applicant's fitness to have his Certificate endorsed.

Where examination to be conducted.

113. The Examiner should arrange to conduct part of the examination in the engine-room of a Steamship, unless from circumstances he finds it impossible to do so; and if an opportunity offer, the Applicant should be permitted, under the guidance of the Examiner, to start and stop the engine of some vessel which may have her steam up.

* See Appendix L.

114. The Examiner, in sending in his report of examinations of Masters and Mates in steam, should state where the examination has been held.

Examination in elementary questions.

115. Candidates will be required to give written answers to sixteen out of twenty questions taken from a book of Elementary Questions published by the Government.* These questions will be altered from time to time without notice. The twenty questions are not to be difficult, theoretical, or book questions, but are to be such as any man of ordinary capacity who has any practical knowledge of the use and working of the steam-engine ought to answer.

Answers to be sent to the Government.

116. These questions, with the Candidates' answers, should be sent to the Government, with the reports, after each examination.

117. These answers will also assist in enabling the Government to decide any question that may hereafter arise in cases where it is alleged that Applicants have been improperly passed, or improperly rejected.

Candidates referring to books, &c. to be put down as failed.

118. If a Candidate refers to any book or paper or memorandum, or obtains information from another Candidate during the examination, he will be treated as having failed, will forfeit his fee, and will not be allowed to be re-examined for a period of three months.

In cases of failure Examiner to report questions that decided it.

119. The Examiners will report, in the case of failure, the nature of the question or questions that decided the failure, or the point in the management of the engine in which the Candidate was deficient.

Service on board Steamship unnecessary

120. There is nothing in the Regulations requiring that Applicants for the voluntary examination shall have served on board Steamships; all that is required is that they shall have a "practical knowledge." Examiners will of course not fail to appreciate the fact, when passing Applicants, that practical knowledge is best gained in the engine-room; and the examination of an Officer who does not produce official evidence of service in Steamships, and of experience of engines, must necessarily be more searching than in the case of one who produces evidence of such service and experience.

Provisional Certificates as First Mate and Master for Royal Naval Reserve purposes only.

121. Provisional Certificates (either Ordinary, or for Foreign-going Steamships, according to the Applicant's qualifications) are granted on the conditions stated below to any officer of the Mercantile Marine who may require such a Certificate to qualify him for appointment to or promotion in the Royal Naval Reserve. They are only available for purposes of the Royal Naval Reserve, and do not authorise the holders to go to sea as First Mate or Master.

122. Candidates for these Certificates must apply to the Port Officer of Calcutta, fill up the form of application (Exn. 2), and pay the usual fee. They must also produce their First or Second Mate's Certificates of Competency, and an authority from the Government or the Admiral Superintendent of Royal Naval Reserves before they can be examined. This authority should be obtained through the Port Officer.

123. Provisional Certificates as First Mate.—Provisional Certificates as First Mate are granted to Candidates who can prove that they have served five years at sea, and that during one year of this period they have served in a capacity not lower than Fourth Mate while holding a Second Mate's Certificate. They must pass the usual examination for First Mate and pay the usual fee. These Certificates are exchangeable for the proper formal Certificate as First Mate, without further payment or examination, on production to the Port Officer of satisfactory proofs that the holder has served at sea not less than 12 months in a Foreign going

* See Appendix O.

Vessel in a capacity not lower than Fourth Mate, and that during the whole of that period he has been in regular charge of a Watch and in possession of a proper formal Certificate of Competency as Second Mate.

124. Provisional Certificates as Master.—Provisional Certificates as Master are granted to Candidates who can prove not less than six and-a-half years' service at Sea, and who pass the usual examination for Master, and pay the usual fee. Of this service two and-a-half years must have been served in a capacity not lower than Fourth Mate of an Ocean-going Steamship, during the last 12 months of which the Applicant must have been in possession of a proper formal First Mate's Certificate of Competency (not a Provisional Certificate) authorising the holder to go to Sea as First Mate. These Certificates are exchangeable for the proper formal Certificate as Master, without further payment or examination, on production to the Port Officer of satisfactory proofs that the holder has served at Sea not less than two and-a-half years in a Foreign-going Vessel in charge of a Watch in a capacity not lower than Fourth Mate, and that during 12 months of this period he has served as Second Mate while in possession of a proper formal Certificate of Competency as First Mate.

Failure in Examination.

Re-examination in case of failure.

125. In all cases of failure the Candidate must be examined de novo. If a Candidate fails in Seamanship he will not be re-examined until after a lapse of SIX MONTHS. Whether the whole or part of this period must be served at sea must depend upon the subjects in Seamanship in which the Candidate failed, but what amount (if any) of sea service will be required will be left to the discretion of the Port Officer, subject, however, to revision by the Government, should they see fit.

126. The Examiners in making out their Report on Form Exn. 14, should state what amount (if any) of further sea service the Candidate must perform, and they should also insert this information under Division II. in Form Exn. 2.

Certificate of lower grade.

127. If a Candidate fails three times in Navigation within three months, he will not be re-examined until after a lapse of THREE MONTHS from the date of the last failure.

128. If a Candidate has failed in his examination, but the subjects in which he has failed are not included in the subjects required for a Certificate of a lower grade, he may, if he desires it, receive a Certificate of such lower grade.

129. No part, however, of the fee he has paid will be returned to him, and on presenting himself, when qualified, for re-examination for the higher grade of Certificate he will be required to pay a further full fee.

130. If a Candidate fails for bad spelling or writing, he will not be re-examined until after a lapse of at least three months. If he fails for ignorance of the English language, he will not be re-examined until after a lapse of six months.

131. If a Candidate fails in Seamanship so far as regards the management of square-rigged Sailing Vessels in his examination for an Ordinary Certificate, he may, if qualified as to service, without further formal application, or further payment of fee, proceed with the examination for a Certificate of Competency for Foreign-going Steamships, or for Fore and Aft rigged vessels. And if a Candidate fails in the same manner in his examination for an Extra Master's Certificate, he may, under the same conditions as above, proceed with the examination for an Extra Certificate for Steamships only.

Fees for Examination.

132. Candidates for examination, in making their application on Form Exn. 2, will be required to pay the examination fee before any step is taken in the way of inquiring into their services or testing their qualifications, &c.

Should it be found that their service is not sufficient to entitle them to be examined, or should their testimonials be unsatisfactory, or should they from any other cause, except failure to pass the Colour Vision test (see Appendix T.) not be examined, no part of the fee will be returned to them, but when they have fulfilled the requisite service, or are able to produce satisfactory testimonials, as the case may be, they will be allowed to again present themselves for examination for a Certificate of the same grade without paying any further fee.

Fees to be paid by applicants for examination. S 133.

133. The fee for examination must be paid to the Port Officer in the cash office. In any case in which a Candidate offers money to any other officer than the Port Officer or in any place but in the cash office, the Candidate so offering money will be regarded as having committed an act of misconduct, and will be rejected, and not allowed to be again examined for twelve months either at the port where the offence was committed, or at any other port.

134. If a Candidate fail in his examination, no part of the fee will be returned to him.

General Instructions to Examiners and Candidates.

135. All instruments necessary for use in the examinations are supplied by the Government. Instruments used in examinations.

136. A Candidate will not be allowed to undergo examination twice in the same week, unless under very special and urgent circumstances the Port Officer should see fit to relax this rule. Candidates not to be examined twice in same week.

137. Before commencing the examination, the tables or desks must be cleared of all scraps of paper or books that are not used in the examination, and care should be taken that the Candidates do not bring into the examination room any book, paper, document, or memoranda of any description whatever. No person whatever should be allowed in the room during the time of examination, but those whose duties require them to be present. Prohibited books and papers.

138. No instructors will be allowed on the premises.

139. Candidates will under no pretence whatever be allowed to leave the premises while the examination is proceeding. If a Candidate has occasion to visit the retiring room he will only be allowed to do so on the completion of the paper on which he may be engaged, when he will be required to enter in a book, kept for the purpose, the exact time of his leaving and returning to the examination room. When only a few Candidates are under examination, two persons will not be allowed to leave the room at the same time. Candidates not to leave premises during examination.

140. Candidates should be so placed as to prevent one copying from the other, and no communication whatever between the candidates should be allowed. Position of Candidates at examination.

141. A sheet of blotting paper should be issued to each Candidate with the first examination paper, and it must be returned to the Examiner when the last paper is completed each day. The examiner will be careful to see that the blotting paper has not been used by the Candidate in solving his problems, or for conveying information to other Candidates (see para. 175). Blotting paper.

142. The examination papers should be issued to the Candidates in half sheets only, and one at a time. This will prevent a Candidate from spreading out the sheets on the table so as to enable his nearest neighbour to look over and copy or examine the problems. It will also enable the Examiner to look over and report upon the work on one half sheet while the Candidate is at work upon another, and so on. When the errors are not too numerous, or when they do not arise from ignorance of the subject, the incorrect problems may be returned to the Candidate for correction, but in no case should the errors be pointed out by the Examiner, neither should any marks be made on the correct work of the problem, which would at once indicate how far or to How examination papers should be issued.

what extent the work is correct. Should the problems be returned to the Examiner the second time incorrect, this would be a failure; and as the time allowed is considered ample for working out the papers carefully, this rule is expected to be strictly observed.

In certain cases problems may be corrected on morning following examination day.

143. When from the large number of the Candidates, it may sometimes be found impossible to look over the work on the day of examination during the office hours, an hour in the morning of the following day may be allotted for the purpose of correcting the problems, but in no case should a Candidate have his problem returned to him for correction after he has made the second attempt.

Exn. 4*a*. Definitions.

144. The paper (Exn. 4*a*) is only for those Candidates who present themselves for examination for the first time for a Foreign-going Certificate. It is intended not only to insure on the part of the Candidate a knowledge of the meaning of a variety of terms of great use to the Navigators, respecting which much ignorance exists at present, but, at the same time, to test his handwriting and spelling.

145. In using this paper, the Examiner will place a mark against the numbers of the particular questions which he selects for answers, and not less than ten questions should be selected. The Candidate will then write against the questions so marked his definition of the terms in a clear and legible hand, so as to prevent the possibility of any letter being mistaken. Attention must be paid to the spelling and writing of all grades of Candidates. The supplementary viva voce test should also be applied as usual.

Questions on Deviation of the Compass. (Exn. 7, Appendix I.)

146. In the questions on Deviation of the Compass (Exn. 7, Appendix I) the Examiner should mark at least twelve of the questions, and those indicated must be correctly answered. The selected questions should be varied frequently, and no two Candidates should have precisely the same questions. The Candidate should be furnished with sheets of the blank ruled paper which is supplied for that purpose, with instructions that he is to write only on one side of the paper, and to answer in a clear and legible hand each of the questions against which a mark is placed, and to commence each answer by writing down the number of the question to which it relates in the margin left for that purpose. In answering Question 39 on the tentative method* of compass adjustment, the Candidate will be tested by "Beall's Compass Deviascope," and it will not therefore be necessary for him to give the written answer and sketches. A Candidate for an Extra Master's Certificate will not be required to answer the questions on the Deviations of the Compass on "Exn. 7," but will be examined by the Syllabus (Appendix L) and "Compass Deviascope."

Viva voce examination.

147. In the viva voce examination a reasonable time should be allowed for the Candidate to give his answers. No assistance should be given or leading question put.

Adjustment of sextant.

148. Particular attention should be paid to the adjustments of the sextant, and the written answers should be given on the ruled paper in the same manner as the answers to the questions on Exn. 7, and the supplementary viva voce test should be applied as usual. Every Candidate should have a practical knowledge of what is known as the first three adjustments, and be able to read correctly off the arc a supposed index error to be given by the Examiner as additive, as well as reading on the arc in the usual way.

Minor corrections.

149. All outstanding or minor corrections should appear in the margin of each problem paper; also on the chart papers Exn. 9C. and Exn. 9D.; and unless all these corrections appear on the papers of the Candidate they will not be considered complete.

Examination to commence with that for Second Mate.

150. In every case the examination, whether for Only Mate, First Mate, Master, or Master Extra, is to commence with the problems for Second Mate.

* See Appendix K.

151. Examiners should bear in mind that the problems to be solved are required as tests, and for the purposes of an examination, and not for sea-going or practical purposes alone. Problems required as tests.

152. The Candidates will be allowed to work out the various problems according to the method and the tables they have been accustomed to use.

Time allowed for Problems and Writings.

153. Candidates for Second Mates' Ordinary Certificates of Competency must complete the whole of their Examination in Navigation in eight hours, including the time allowed for writing the definitions (Exn. 4*a*), the paper on the adjustment of the sextant, and the correction of all errors and oversights; but the nautical problems on Forms "Exn 4" and "Exn. 5" must be completed within six hours, and without the Candidates leaving the premises during that period. Time allowed for problems and writings.

154. Candidates for Only and First Mates' Ordinary Certificates must complete the whole of their Examination in Navigation in twelve and-a-half hours,* including the time allowed for the papers on the sextant; the chart; cyclones or revolving storms; and for the correction of all errors and oversights; but the nautical problems on Forms "Exn. 4," "Exn. 5," and "Exn. 6" must be completed within six hours, and without the Candidates leaving the premisse during that period.

155. Candidates for Ordinary Certificates as Masters must complete the whole of their Examination in Navigation in fifteen hours, including the time allowed for the papers on the sextant; the chart; compass deviation; cyclones or revolving storms; and for the correction of all errors and oversights; but the problems on Forms "Exn. 4," "Exn. 5," and "Exn. 6" must be completed within six hours, and without the Candidates leaving the premises during that period.

156. Candidates, after finishing the problems required in the various grades on the first day of examination, should proceed, until the end of that day, with such subjects as the definitions, sextant, chart, &c.

157. The Sumner Problem (Exn. 6a.) must on no account be given out to any Candidate on the first day of the Examination, but should form the commencement of the Candidate's work on the second day, and on completion of this problem the Candidates for Masters' Certificates should proceed with the problems on paper "Exn. 7."

158. Candidates for Home Trade Mates' Certificates must complete the whole of their arithmetical, chart, and other papers within eight hours, and Candidates for Certificates as Masters of Home Trade Passenger Ships within ten hours.

159. Candidates for Foreign-going Steamships Certificates of Competency will be allowed the same amount of time to perform their navigation, &c., as hereinbefore laid down for the respective grades for the Ordinary Foreign-going Certificates.

160. Candidates for Certificates as Masters of Pleasure Yachts will be allowed the same amount of time for completing their Examination as the Canditates for Ordinary Masters' Certificates.

161. Extra Masters' Certificates.—The time allowed Candidates for Examination for Certificates of Competency as Extra Master, and for Extra Master for Steamships only, to complete the whole of the problems and writings (including the Compass Syllabus and the correction of all errors and oversights), must not exceed 26 hours.

162. Deviation of the Compass.—A period not exceeding eleven hours will be allowed to Candidates for the completion of the whole of the examination in the Syllabus, including the correction of all errors and oversights in both the problems and writings.

* A Candidate (other than Second Mate) who may not previously have passed an examination, may be allowed the time occupied in writing his definitions on Exn. 4a, in addition to the above.

Additional time allowed in special cases.

163. Punctually at the expiration of the prescribed time all the papers should be called up, whether completed or not, and if not completed, the Candidate will be declared to have failed, unless the Port Officer see fit to lengthen the period in any special case. If, however, the period is lengthened in any case, the special circumstances of that case, and the reasons for lengthening the period, together with the time allowed, must be reported to the Government by the Port Officer in the column for "remarks" on the Form Exn. 14. It should be noted that the periods prescribed in the foregoing paragraphs are not intended to include the time occupied by the viva voce part of the examination.

164. It is anticipated that but few of the Candidates for Certificates of Competency will require the whole of the time herein allowed for completing their examination in Navigation; and ample time has been prescribed, so that Candidates may perform their work in a careful, clear, and legible manner, and to the entire satisfaction of the Examiners.

Degree of Precision required in the Solution of the Problems.

165. In order to prevent any misapprehension as to the degree of precision required by the Regulations in working out the various problems in the examinations for Masters' and Mates' Certificates, the attention of Examiners and Candidates is particularly directed to the following instructions:—

(a) Candidates are expected to work out their answers to all problems within or not to exceed a margin of 1′ of position from a correct result (e.g., in problems where the answer required is a latitude, longitude, or distance); in finding the ship's position by "Sumner's" method a margin of 2½′ will be allowed.

(b) In such problems as the "Amplitude" and "Alt-Azimuth," where the bearings, deviation, &c., only are required, a margin of 2°, or 3°, from a correct result will be sufficiently accurate.

(c) In no problem is the Candidate for an Ordinary Certificate required by the Regulations to correct for second differences in taking out the quantities from the Nautical Almanac.

(d) In solving the "Time Azimuth" problem an answer not exceeding half a degree from the exact result will be sufficiently near. But in all cases the actual latitude, declination, and time used, together with the exact bearing (from the North or South) as given in the tables, must be clearly shown by the Candidate on his papers.

(e) In interpolating for the correct deviation to be applied in solving the Chart questions (Papers "Exn. 9 C." and "Exn. 9 D.") it will usually be sufficiently near if the Candidate works throughout with the nearest degree of deviation taken from the "Deviation Card"; and even in cases where the deviations may vary but little, the nearest half degree used throughout will be sufficiently precise, and will at the same time prove whether the Candidate understands the method of arriving at the amount of deviations and applying them. It is not necessary that the Candidate should waste his time in solving the course to odd minutes, as is sometimes done.

(f) In calculating the correction to apply to the Soundings (Question 5 of Paper "Exn. 9 D."), the Candidate is not required to work out to the exact inch, as is sometimes done. It will be sufficiently near if he brings his answer within half a foot or so of a precise result.

It must be clearly understood in reading the foregoing Instructions as to the precision required, that they only apply when the work of the Candidate is correct in principle.

Supplementary viva voce Examination on the written Papers.

166. An impression prevails in regard to the examination of Masters and Mates, that so long as a Candidate can commit to paper correct answers to the various questions in the examinations requiring written answers, no matter how indicative the answers may be of their having been learnt off by rote only, the duty and responsibility of the local Examiners are at an end, and that they have no power or authority to reject a Candidate should his written answers be correct.

167. It is therefore to be noted that Candidates for Certificates of Competency are not only expected to give correct written answers, which may merely be learnt off by rote, but are also expected to possess an intelligent knowledge of the various subjects, including the problems, prescribed in the Regulations, particularly as regards the important subject of the Deviation of the Compass.

168. The Government are of opinion that this result may be easily attained by the local Examiner putting a few viva voce questions to the Candidate as the papers are brought up for inspection, or at any subsequent time if more convenient. The oral questions (suggested by the printed questions and the answers given) should be such that the Examiner may satisfy himself that the candidate possesses a real knowledge of what he has written, and should be confined strictly to the subjects of the printed questions. Should the Candidate then exhibit ignorance of the subjects, the Examiner (who is in a position to judge of the real knowledge the man before him possesses) should deal with him at his discretion, notwithstanding that the Candidate may have written all the answers correctly by rote.

169. When an Examiner finds it necessary to fail a Candidate in this Supplementary viva voce test, a statement to that effect must be made on the Candidate's examination papers, when forwarded, in the usual course, to the Port Officer.

Special Notice to Candidates.

170. The attention of Candidates is specially called to the following Regulations :—

171. Candidates are required to appear at the examination room punctually at the time appointed.

172. Candidates are prohibited from bringing into the examination room books, paper, or memoranda of any kind whatever. The slightest infringement of this regulation will subject the offender to all the penalties of a failure, and he will not be allowed to present himself for re-examination for a period of three months.

173. In the event of any Candidate being detected in defacing, blotting, writing in, or otherwise injuring any book or books or any of the forms belonging to the Government, the papers of such Candidate will be detained until the book or books so defaced are replaced by him. He will not, however, be at liberty to remove the damaged book, which will still remain the property of the Government. He will further subject himself to all the penalties of a failure.

174. In the event of any Candidate being discovered referring to any book or memoranda, copying from another, or affording any assistance or giving any information to another, or communicating in any way with another, during the time of examination, or copying any part of the problems for the purpose of taking them out of the examination rooms, he will subject himself to all the penalties of a failure, and will not be allowed to be examined for a period of six months.

175. No Candidate will be allowed to work out his problems on a slate or on waste paper, or to write on the blotting paper supplied for his use in the examination. Violation of this rule will subject the Candidate to all the penalties of a failure.

176. No Candidate will be permitted to leave the examination room without permission and until he has given up the paper on which he is engaged. Violation of this rule will subject the Candidate to all the penalties of a failure.

177. Candidates will find it more convenient, both here and at sea, to correct the declination and other elements from the Nautical Almanac by the "hourly differences" which have been given in that work in order to facilitate such calculations; they will thereby render themselves independent of any proportional or logarithmic table for such purpose.

178. The corrections by inspection of tables given in some of the works on navigation will not be allowed (see Tables IX, XI, and XXI in Norie's Epitome, &c.); every correction must appear on the papers of the Candidates.

179. Perfect silence is to be preserved in the examination room, and any Candidate violating any of the regulations, or being guilty of insolence to the Examiner, or of disorderly or improper conduct in or about the room, will render himself liable to the postponement of his examination, or, if he has passed, to the detention of his Certificate for such period as the Government may direct.

180. For rules as to amount of time allowed to perform the work, see page 35.

44. Complement of an Arc or Angle.
45. Supplement of Ditto.

APPENDIX C.

Adjustments of the Sextant.

The Applicant will answer in writing, on paper which will be given him by the Examiner, all the following questions, numbering his answers with the numbers corresponding to the questions:—

Question.

1. What is the first adjustment of the sextant?
2. How do you make that adjustment?
3. What is the second adjustment?
4. Describe how you make that adjustment?
5. What is the third adjustment?
6. How would you make the third adjustment?
7. In the absence of a screw how would you proceed?
8. How would you find the index error by the horizon?
9. How is it to be applied?
10. Place the index at error of minutes to be added, clamp it, and leave it.

(Note.—The Examiner will see that it is correct.)

11. The Examiner will then place the zero of the vernier on the arc, not near any of the marked divisions, and the Candidate will read it.

Note.—In all cases the Applicants will name or otherwise point out the screws used in the various adjustments.

(The above completes the Examination of Second Mates.)

Candidates for Only Mates', First Mates,' and Masters' Certificates will be required to give, in writing, replies to the following questions, in addition to those required of Candidates for Second Mates' Certificates as above.

12. How do you find the index error by the Sun?
13. The readings being { } What is the index error, and how do you apply it?
14. What proof have you that those measurements or angles have been taken with tolerable accuracy?

APPENDIX D.

EXAMINATION OF MASTERS AND MATES IN THE INTERNATIONAL CODE OF SIGNALS.

Instructions to Examiners.

The Government desire to direct the attention of the Examiners to the principal points connected with the International Code of Signals (which is to be treated as a subject in Navigation) as to which Candidates for Examinations should be questioned in order to qualify for Certificates of Competency.

The Government would recommend to the Examiners a perusal of the Report of the Signal Committee of 1855 (which will be found at the commencement of the Signal Book), and also the first few pages of the Book. The information therein given will be found sufficient to make the Examiners theoretically acquainted with the characteristics of the Code, and the advantages it claims to possess over other Codes, and will enable them to appreciate and urge upon Candidates for Examination the facilities which this System of Signalling affords for easy and rapid communication.

The "comprehensiveness" and "distinctness," of the International Code are its chief recommendations.

The form of the Hoist generally indicates the nature of the Signal made, so that an observer can at sight understand the character of the Signal he sees flying.

The annexed plate gives examples which illustrate this.

The Examinations should tend to elicit a knowledge of the distinctive features of the Code above alluded to.

With this object the Examiners should make the 2, 3, and 4 Flag Signals on the Frame Board which is furnished for the purpose (always taking care first to show the Ensign and the Code Pennant at the Gaff),* questioning the Candidates as to the distinguishing Forms of the respective Hoists (see Plate annexed); which will be indicated according as a Burgee, or a Pennant, or a Square Flag, is uppermost.

The Candidate ought to know how to find in the Signal Book the communication or the enquiry he desires to make, and how to make the Signal. The Signal to be made should invariably be sought for by the Candidate in the Vocabulary and Index, Part II, and never in Part I.

The Candidate ought to know how to interpret a Signal.

* The object of this is, of course, to distinguish the Signals from those of another Code.

The Examiner should place a Signal on the Frame Board, and vary the Signal by showing a 2 or 3 Flag Signal, or a "Geographical" or a "Vocabulary" Signal, or the name of a Merchant Ship or a Ship of War.

The two latter Signals would not of course be found in the Signal Book. The Candidate ought to point them out in the Code List of Ships.

A Candidate ought to be able to read off a Signal at sight, so far as to name the Flags composing the Hoist.

He ought to know the use of the Code Pennant, and of the Pennants C. and D., "Yes" and "No."

The Candidate should be practised in the use of the Spelling Table, by being made to spell his own name, or some word not in the Vocabulary of the Code.

A knowledge of the Distant Signals should be required of the Candidate, their object and the mode of signalling by the Distant Code, which will be found at the end of the Signal Book and also of Morse Code.

For this purpose two Black Balls, two Black Square Flags, and two Black Pennants will be furnished with the Frame Board, and the Candidate should be required to make one or two Distant Signals, and to read off one or two made by the Examiners.

The Ball being the distinguishing symbol of the Distant Signal, any Pennants or Flags of the Code may be employed in conjunction with it, irrespective of colour. The Black Pennants and Flags are merely sent as showing best in the light background of the Frame Board.

The Examiners should be careful to ascertain that the Candidate possesses a knowledge of the Distress Signals.

Semaphores.

We have as yet no Semaphores on our coasts. The French however, have a considerable number of such stations established on their coasts, and there are also similar stations on the coasts of Portugal, Italy, and other countries, at which the International Code of Signals only is used.

A plate at the end of the Signal Book explains the method by which the arms of the Semaphore are made to represent by their position (up, down, or horizontal) the three symbols used for Distant Signalling, viz., a Flag, a Ball, or a Pennant. Before making Signals with the Semaphore, the Black Disc with the white rim should be placed on the top of the Semaphore Mast, as it properly forms a part of the Mast itself.

The International Code is used on board Her Majesty's Ships, and it has been adopted by all the principal Maritime Powers for their Imperial as well as for their Mercantile Navies.

Note.—The International Code of Signals, with the Code List, is prepared by the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen, and may be had of the Publishers, Messrs. Spottiswoode & Co., 54, Gracechurch Street, London, and the principal Booksellers at the various ports.

The Official Mercantile Navy List and Maritime Directory, published for the use of Merchants, Shipowners, Shipbrokers, and others, may be obtained in like manner, price 12s.

APPENDIX E.

Regulations for preventing Collisions at Sea.

NOTICE.

The Board of Trade have had their attention drawn to the necessity of a more strict examination of Applicants for Certificates of Competency in their knowledge of the regulations for preventing collisions at sea.

In order that the rule of the road at sea may be better understood, and that a uniform system of examination may prevail, the Board of Trade have issued the following catechism.

This catechism has received the approval of the Trinity House and Admiralty in England, and of the Council of the Admiralty of France.

The Board of Trade attach very great importance to a thorough knowledge of the steering and sailing rules on the part of every Applicant for a Certificate of Competency, and a thorough examination on the part of the Examiners.

All Applicants for examination, whether for Certificates as Masters or Mates, are to be examined as to their knowledge of the steering and sailing rules each time they present themselves for examination.

Questions suggested by the following heads of examination are to be asked in addition to, and are not to supersede, any other questions proper and necessary to be asked by the Examiner.

The following questions need not be adhered to literally by the Examiner, and are not all to be asked; but the substance of the leading questions should be asked, and all that are asked should be satisfactorily answered, before an Applicant is reported to have passed his examination. The Examiner should make such a selection of the questions as each case appears to him to require.

HEADS of EXAMINATION in the REGULATIONS for Preventing COLLISIONS at SEA.

1. What light or lights are required by the regulations to be exhibited by sailing vessels at anchor?

One light only; viz., a white light.

2. What light or lights are required by the regulations to be exhibited by steamships at anchor?

The same as for sailing vessels.

3. Where is the anchor light to be exhibited?

Where it can best be seen. It must of course be placed where there is the least possible chance of obstruction from spars, ropes, &c., &c.

4. To what height may the anchor light be hoisted?

It may be exhibited at any height where it can best be seen, not exceeding 20 feet above the deck.

5. What is the description of the lantern containing the anchor light required by the regulations?

A globular lantern of not less than 8 inches in diameter.

6. In what direction or directions must the anchor light show?

It must show a clear, uniform, and unbroken light, visible all round the horizon.

7. At what distance must it be visible?

At least one mile.

8. What is the number of lights required by the regulations to be carried by sailing ships when under way at night?

Two side lights, and to have in readiness a white light or a flare-up light to show from their stern to any vessel overtaking them.

9. Of what colour are these lights, and how are they to be placed on board the ship?

A green light on the starboard side, and a red light on the port side.

10. What description of light must be shown from the sides of sailing vessels under way; and over how many points of the compass, and in what directions, and how far, are they required to show?

Each light must be so constructed as to show a uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass; so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the starboard and port sides respectively; and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

11. What lights are they to carry when being towed at night?

The same.

12. Are the side lights required to be fitted with screens; and if so, of what length, and how?

Yes, on the inboard side; at least 3 feet in length, measuring forward from the light. They are to be so fitted that a line drawn from the outside edge of the wick to the foremost end of the inboard screen shall make an angle of four degrees, or as near thereto as may be practicable, with a line drawn parallel with the keel of the ship from the outside edge of the wick.

13. What is the number of lights required by the regulations to be carried by steamships when under steam at night.

Three lights, and to have in readiness a white light or flare-up light to show from their stern to any vessel overtaking them.

14. Of what colour are these lights, and how are they to be placed on board the ship?

A white light on or in front of the foremast at a height above the hull of not less than 20 feet, and if the breadth of the ship exceeds 20 feet, then at a height above the hull not less than such breadth. A green light on the starboard side, and a red one on the port side.

15. Over how many points of the compass, in what direction and how far, is the foremast-head light of a steamer required to show?

Over 20 points, viz., from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on both sides. It must be of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least five miles.

16. Are the side lights required to be fitted with screens; and if so of what length?

The green and red lights are to be fitted with screens on the inboard side, extending at least 3 feet forward from the light. They are to be so fitted that a line drawn from the outside edge of the wick to the foremost end of the inboard screen shall make an angle of four degrees, or as near thereto as may be practicable, with a line drawn parallel with the keel of the ship from the outside edge of the wick.

17. Over how many points of the compass, in what directions, and how far, are the coloured side lights of steamers required to show?

The side lights must be so constructed as to show a uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass, on each side of the ship, i.e., from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the starboard and port sides respectively, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

18. What description of lights are steamers required by the regulation to carry when they are not under steam, but under sail only?

Side lights only, the same as sailing vessels.

19. What exceptional lights are to be carried by small sailing vessels in certain cases ?

Whenever, as in the case of small vessels during bad weather, the green and red side lights cannot be fixed, these lights shall be kept on deck, on their respective sides of the vessel, ready for use; and shall, on the approach of or to other vessels, be exhibited on their respective sides in sufficient time to prevent collision, in such manner as to make them most visible, and so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side, nor the red light on the starboard side.

To make the use of these portable lights more certain and easy, the lanterns containing them shall each be painted outside with the colour of the light they respectively contain, and shall be provided with proper screens.

20. What description of lights are pilot vessels required to carry when on their stations on pilotage duty ?

A pilot vessel, when engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall not carry the lights required for other vessels, but shall carry a white light at the masthead, visible all round the horizon, and shall also exhibit a flare-up light or flare-up lights at short intervals, which shall never exceed fifteen minutes.

21. What description of lights are steam pilot vessels required to carry when on their stations on pilotage duty in British waters, and not at anchor ?

A steam pilot vessel, when engaged on her station on pilotage duty and in British waters, and not at anchor, shall, in addition to the lights required for all pilot vessels, carry at a distance of 8 feet below her white masthead light a red light visible all round the horizon on a clear night for at least two miles, and also the coloured side lights required to be carried by vessels under way.

22. What description of lights are steam pilot vessels required to carry when on their stations on pilotage duty in British waters, and at anchor ?

A steam pilot vessel, when engaged on pilotage duty in British waters and at anchor, shall carry, in addition to the lights required for all pilot vessels, the red light 8 feet below her white light, but not the coloured side lights.

23. What description of lights are pilot vessels required to carry when not on their station on pilotage duty ?

A pilot vessel, when not engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall carry lights similar to those of other ships.

24. What lights are open boats and fishing vessels of less than 20 tons net register required to carry when under way and not actually engaged in fishing ?

Open boats and fishing vessels of less than 20 tons not registered tonnage, when under way and when not having their nets, trawls, dredges, or lines in the water, shall not be obliged to carry the coloured side lights; but every such boat and vessel shall in lieu thereof have ready at hand a lantern with a green glass on the one side and a red glass on the other side, and on approaching to or being approached by another vessel, such lantern shall be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision, so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side nor the red light on the starboard side.

25. What lights are fishing vessels and fishing boats of 20 tons net register, or upwards, required to carry when under way and not actually engaged in fishing ?

They must carry similar lights to those of other ships when under way.

26. What lights are steam trawlers of 20 tons gross register, or upwards, whilst actually engaged in trawling, and not being stationary, required to carry ?

All steam vessels engaged in trawling must carry either one of the two following arrangements of lights, whichever of the two may be the more convenient:—

(a) The usual green and red side lights, and foremast head light, similar to those carried by other steamships; or

(b) They must carry on or in front of the foremast head, and in the same position as the white light which other steamships are required to carry, a lantern showing a white light ahead, a green light on the starboard side, and a red light on the port side; such lantern shall be so constructed, fitted, and arranged as to show an uniform and unbroken white light over an arc of the horizon of four points of the compass, an uniform and unbroken green light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass, and an uniform and unbroken red light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass, and it shall be so fixed as to show the white light from right ahead to two points on the bow on each side of the ship, the green light from two points on the starboard bow to four points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and the red light from two points on the port bow to four points abaft the beam on the port side: and (2) a white light in a globular lantern of not less than eight inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform, and unbroken light all round the horizon; the lantern containing such white light shall be carried lower than the lantern showing the green, white, and red lights as aforesaid, so, however, that the vertical distance between them shall not be less than 6 feet nor more than 12 feet.

27. What lights are sailing trawlers whilst actually engaged in trawling, and not being stationary, required to carry ?

All sailing vessels, of whatever tonnage, whilst engaged in trawling must carry either one of the three following arrangements of lights, whichever of the three, (a), (b), or (c), may be the most convenient :—

(a) They may carry the green and red side lights similar to those of other sailing ships; or

(b) They may carry on, or in front of the foremast head, a lantern having a green glass on the starboard side and a red glass on the port side, so constructed, fitted, and arranged that the red and green do not converge, and so as to show an uniform and unbroken green light over an arc of the horizon of 12 points of the compass, and an uniform and unbroken red light over an arc of the horizon of 12 points of the compass, and it shall be so fixed as to show the green light from right ahead to four points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and the red light from right ahead to four points abaft the beam on the port side; and (2) a white light in a globular lantern of not less than eight inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform, and unbroken light all round the horizon; the lantern containing such white light shall be carried lower than the lantern showing the green and red lights as aforesaid, so, however, that the vertical distance between them shall not be less than 6 feet and not more than 12 feet; or

(c) They may carry a white light in a globular lantern of not less than eight inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform and unbroken light all round the horizon, and visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, for a distance of at least 2 miles; and also a sufficient supply of red pyrotechnic lights which shall each burn for at least 30 seconds, and shall, when so burning, be visible for the same distance under the same conditions as the white light. The white light shall be shown from sunset to sunrise, and one of the red pyrotechnic lights shall be shown on approaching, or on being approached by, another ship or vessel in sufficient time to prevent collision.

28. What lights are vessels whilst actually engaged in drift net fishing required to carry ?

All vessels when engaged in fishing with drift nets shall exhibit two white lights from any part of the vessel where they can be best seen. Such lights shall be placed so that the vertical distance between them shall be not less than 6 feet and not more than 10 feet; and so that the horizontal distance between them measured in a line with the keel of the vessel shall be not less than 5 feet and not more than 10 feet. The lower of these two lights shall be the more forward, and both of them shall be of such a character, and contained in lanterns of such construction, as to show all round the horizon, on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, for a distance of not less than three miles.

29. What lights are vessels whilst actually engaged in line fishing required to carry ?

A vessel engaged in line fishing is required to carry the same lights as a vessel engaged in drift net fishing.

30. If a vessel, when fishing, becomes stationary in consequence of her gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, what signal must she make ?

She must show the same light, and if a fog, mist, or falling snow prevail, she must make the same fog signal as if she were at anchor.

31. What lights are fishing vessels and open boats required to exhibit when at anchor ?

Between sunset and sunrise they must exhibit a white light, visible all round the horizon at a distance of at least one mile, the same as any other vessel.

32. What sound signals are fishing vessels required to make whilst engaged in fishing in thick weather ?

In fog, mist, or falling snow, a drift net vessel attached to her nets, and a vessel when trawling, dredging, or fishing with any kind of drag net, and a vessel employed in line fishing with her lines out, shall at intervals of not more than two minutes make a blast with her fog horn and ring her bell alternately.

33. May fishing vessels and open boats use flare-up lights, and if so at what part or parts of the vessel should they be exhibited ?

Yes. Fishing vessels and open boats may at any time use a flare-up in addition to the lights which they are by this article required to carry and show. All flare-up lights exhibited by a vessel when trawling, dredging, or fishing with any kind of drag net shall be shown at the after part of the vessel, excepting that if the vessel is hanging by the stern to her trawl, dredge, or drag net, they shall be exhibited from the bow.

34. Do these regulations referring specially to fishing vessels and boats apply in all parts of the world ?

No; with the exception of the first paragraph of Article 10 of the regulations, they apply only to fishing vessels and boats when in the sea off the coast of Europe lying north of Cape Finisterre.

35. What lights are steam ships required to carry when towing other ships ?

A steam ship, when towing another ship, shall in addition to her side lights carry two bright white lights in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart, so as to distinguish her from other steam ships. Each of these lights shall be of the same construction and character, and shall be carried in the same position as the white light which other steam ships are required to carry.

36. What light is a ship which is being overtaken by another required to show?

A ship which is being overtaken by another shall show from her stern to such last-mentioned ship a white light or a flare-up light.

37. Describe the lights, and the day signals, that vessels employed in laying or picking up a telegraph cable are required to carry.

A ship, whether a steam ship or sailing ship, employed in laying or in picking up a telegraph cable, shall at night carry in the same position as the white light which steam ships are required to carry, and if a steam ship, in place of that light, three lights in globular lanterns each not less than 10 inches in diameter, in a vertical line over one another not less than 6 feet apart; the highest and lowest of these lights shall be red and the middle light shall be white, and they shall be of such a character that the red lights shall be visible at the same distance as the white light. By day she shall carry in a vertical line one over the other not less than 6 feet apart, in front of but not lower than her foremast head, three shapes not less than 2 feet in diameter, of which the top and bottom shall be globular in shape and red in colour, and the middle one diamond in shape and white.

38. Describe the lights and the day signals that vessels which from any cause are not under command, are required to carry?

A ship, whether a steam ship or a sailing ship, which from any accident is not under command, shall at night carry, in the same position as the white light which steam ships are required to carry, and if a steam ship, in place of that light, three red lights in globular lanterns, each not less than 10 inches in diameter, in a vertical line one over the other, not less than 3 feet apart, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles; and shall by day carry in a vertical line one over the other, not less than 3 feet apart, in front of but not lower than her foremast head, three black balls or shapes, each 2 feet in diameter.

39. Are the above mentioned ships to carry side-lights?

The above ships when not making any way through the water shall not carry the side-lights, but when making way shall carry them.

40. What are the previous mentioned shapes and lights intended to indicate to approaching ships?

These shapes and lights are to be taken by approaching ships as signals that the ship using them is not under command and cannot therefore get out of the way.

41. Do these rules prevent squadrons and convoys from carrying special lights?

No. Nothing in these rules shall interfere with the operation of any special rules made by the Government of any nation with respect to additional station and signal lights for two or more ships of war, or for ships sailing under convoy.

42. What sound signals are steam ships and sailing ships required by the regulations to be provided with?

A steam ship shall be provided with a steam whistle or other efficient steam sound signal, so placed that the sound may not be intercepted by any obstructions, and with an efficient fog horn to be sounded by a bellows or other mechanical means, and also with an efficient bell. A sailing ship shall be provided with a similar fog horn and bell.

43. When are these signals to be used?

In fog, mist, or falling snow, whether by day or night.

44. What sound signal is to be made by steam ships and sailing ships when not under way?

A steam ship and a sailing ship when not under way shall, at intervals of not more than two minutes, ring the bell.

45. What sound signal is required to be made by a steam ship when under way?

A steam ship under way shall make with her steam whistle, or other steam sound signal, at intervals of not more than two minutes, a prolonged blast.

46. What sound signals are required to be made by sailing ships when under way?

A sailing ship under way shall make with her fog horn, at intervals of not more than two minutes, when on the starboard tack one blast, when on the port tack two blasts in succession, and when with the wind abaft the beam three blasts in succession.

47. Do the regulations require ships to take any other precaution during thick weather?

Yes. Art. 13 says every ship, whether a sailing ship or steam ship, shall, in a fog, mist, or falling snow, go at a moderate speed.

48. Is it optional for a steam ship to make any other signals with her steam whistle?

Yes, but only to vessels in sight, i.e., not to vessels which are so obscured by fog, mist, or falling snow, that they cannot be seen though their whistles may be heard.

Art. 19 provides that in taking any course authorised or required by the regulations, a steam ship under way may indicate that course to any other ship which she has in sight by the following signals on her steam whistle, viz. :—

One short blast to mean "I am directing my course to starboard."

Two short blasts to mean "I am directing my course to port."

Three short blasts to mean "I am going full speed astern."

The use of these signals is optional; but if they are used, the course of the ship must be in accordance with the signal made.

49. What precaution is to be taken by steamers approaching another vessel?

If there is risk of collision, the steamer is to slacken speed, or, if necessary, stop and reverse.

50. If you see two white lights in a vertical line one over the other, what do they denote as regards the vessel carrying them?

They denote the presence of a steamer towing with her side lights not within sight on account of distance, fog, &c.; or a vessel end on to me engaged in drift net fishing, or in line fishing; or it may be a steam trawler end on, or within two points of being end on, to me.

51. If you see a green, or a red, light with a white light below what do they denote?

They denote the presence of either a sailing or a steam vessel engaged in trawling.

52. If you see both the green and the red lights with a white light below them, what do they denote?

They denote the presence of a sailing trawler coming end on to me.

53. If you see a white light alone, what does it denote as regards the ship carrying it?

It denotes the presence of a vessel or boat at anchor; or a pilot vessel on her station; or the mast-head light of a vessel, under steam, with her side lights not within sight on account of distance, fog, &c.; or a fishing vessel stationary through her gear getting fast to some obstruction, or a sailing trawler engaged in trawling (1) under one arrangement of lights heading so that her side lights are obscured, (2) under another arrangement from the red pyrotechnic light not having been exhibited; or it may be a light shown from the stern of a vessel which is being overtaken.

54. If you see a green or a red light without a white light, or both a green and a red light without a white light, is the vessel carrying the light or lights seen, a vessel under steam or a vessel under sail?

A vessel under sail.

55. How do you know?

Because there is no white mast-head light.

56. If you see a white light over a coloured light, is the vessel a vessel under sail or a vessel under steam?

A vessel under steam. The mast-head light denotes that the vessel is under steam.

[The Examiner will then take one model of a vessel, which he will place on the table, and call it A. He will then take the mast or stand with a white and red ball on it, and place it at the other end of the table, and call it B. The Examiner should be careful that the model of one vessel only is used when the questions numbered 57 to 63 are asked.]

57. A is a steamer going north, seeing a white light and red light right ahead at B. Are A and the vessel B showing the two lights meeting end on, or nearly end on, or is B passing A, or is B crossing the path of A, and in what direction, and how do you know?

Passing to port, because if I see a red light ahead I know that the head of the vessel carrying that red light must be pointing away in some direction to my own port or left hand. The ship showing the red light has her port or left side more or less open to A.

58. If A is going north, within what points of the compass must the vessel B showing the white and red lights be steering?

B must be going from a little W. of S. to W.N.W.

59. How do you know this?

Because, the screens being properly fitted, I could not see the red light of B at all with the vessel's head in any other direction.

60. A is a steamer going north, and seeing a white and green light ahead. Are A and B meeting, or is B passing A, or is B crossing the course of A, and in what direction; and how do you know?

B is passing to starboard of A, because if I see a green light ahead I know that the head of the vessel carrying that green light must be pointing away in some direction to my starboard or right hand.

The ship showing the green light has her right or starboard side more or less open to me.

61. As A is going north, within what points of the compass must the vessel showing the white and green lights be steering?

B must be going from a little E. of South to E.N.E.

62. How do you know?

Because, the screens being properly fitted, I cannot see the green light at all with the vessel's head in any other direction.

63. If a steamer A sees the three lights of another steamer B ahead or nearly ahead, are the two steamers meeting, passing, or crossing?

Meeting end on, or nearly end on.

64. Do the regulations expressly require the course of a ship to be altered to starboard in any case; and, if so, when?

Yes; in the case of two steamers meeting end on or nearly end on.

65. Do they expressly require the course of a ship to be altered to starboard in any other case; and, if so, in what other?

No. It is not in any other case expressly required by the regulations.

[The Examiner should see that the Candidate puts the models in the positions indicated by the question 56, and following.

66. If a steamer A sees another steamer's red light B on her own starboard side, are the steamers meeting, passing, or crossing, and how do you know?

Crossing, because the red light of one is opposed to the green light of the other; and whenever a green light is opposed to a red light, or a red light to a green light, the ships carrying the lights are crossing ships.

67. Is A to stand on; and if not, why not?

A has the other vessel B on her own starboard side. A knows she is crossing the course of B because she sees the red light of B on her (A's) own starboard side. A also knows she must get out of the way of B, because Article 16 expressly requires that the steamer that has the other on her own starboard side shall keep out of the way of the other.

68. Is A to starboard or to port in such a case?

A must do what is right so as to get herself out of the way of B; it is generally preferable to pass under a ship's stern rather than attempt to cross her bows, but it depends entirely on the position and relative speed of the two ships, and therefore the regulations wisely leave the giving way ship to get out of the way in any manner that may be most desirable, so always that she does get out of the way.

69. If A gets into collision by porting, will it be because she is acting on any rule?

No; the rule does not require her either to port or to starboard. If she ports, and gets into collision by porting it is not the fault of any rule.

70. If a steamer A sees the green light of another steamer B on her own (A's own) port bow, are the two steamers meeting, passing, or crossing; and how do you know?

Crossing, because the green light of one ship is shown to the red light of the other.

71. What is A to do, and why?

By the rule contained in Article 22 of the Regulations, A is required to keep her course, subject only to the qualification that due regard must be had to all dangers of navigation; and that due regard must also be had to any special circumstances which may exist in any particular case rendering a departure from that rule necessary in order to avoid immediate danger. The crossing ship B on A's port side must get out of the way of A, because A is on B's starboard side.

72. A, a steamer, sees the green light of another steamer, B, a point on her, A's port bow. Is there any regulation requiring A to port in such a case, and if so, where is it to be found?

There is not any.

73. Are steam ships to get out of the way of sailing ships?

If a steamer and a sailing ship are proceeding in such direction as to involve risk of collision, the steamer is to get out of the way of the sailing ship unless the sailing ship is overtaking the steamer.

74. What is to be done by A, whether a steamer or a sailing ship, if overtaking B?

A is to keep out of the way of B.

75. When by the rules one of two ships is required to keep out of the way of the other, what is the other to do?

To keep her course. This is absolutely necessary to enable the commander of a ship required by the regulations to keep out of the way, to act with decision and promptitude, which he cannot possibly, unless he knows what the other vessel is going to do.

76. Is there any qualification or exception to this?

Yes. Due regard must be had to all dangers of navigation, and to any special circumstances which may exist in any particular case, and require a departure from the regulations to avoid immediate danger.

77. Is there any general direction in the steering and sailing rules, and if so, what is it?

Yes, it is this: that nothing in the rules shall exonerate any ship, or the owner, master, or crew thereof, from the consequences of any neglect to carry lights or signals, or of any neglect to keep a proper look-out, or of the neglect of any precaution which may be required by the ordinary practice of seamen, or by the special circumstances of the case.

78. Can you repeat article (———) of the regulations? I refer to the article containing the rule for (———).

[The Examiner should repeat this question, naming a different article each time.]

79. What does the Act of Parliament provide as to the obligation of owners and masters in obeying the regulations respecting lights, fog signals, and steering and sailing?

Section 419 of "The Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1894," provides that owners and masters shall be bound to obey the regulations, and it also provides that in case of wilful default by the master or owner he shall be deemed to be guilty of a misdemeanor for each infringement.

80. What do breaches of the regulations imply?

If an accident happens through non-observance of the regulations, it implies wilful default on the part of the person in charge of the deck at the time, unless it is shown to the satisfaction of the court hearing the case that the special circumstances of the case rendered a departure from the rules necessary.

81. If collision ensues from a breach of the regulations, who is to be deemed in fault for the collision ?

The person by whom the regulations are infringed, unless the court hearing the case decides to the contrary.

82. Is there any special rule for steam ships navigating narrow channels ?

In narrow channels every steam ship shall, when it is safe and practicable, keep to that side of the fairway or mid-channel which is on the starboard side of such ship.

83. Do the regulations apply to sea-going ships in harbours and in rivers ?

Yes ; unless there is any rule to the contrary made by a competent authority.

84. Do they apply to British ships only ?

No, to foreign ships as well, with the exception of the Orders in Council of August 1892 and January 1893, which apply only to British Vessels.

85. Do you know where the present regulations are to be found ?

Yes, in the Orders in Council of the 11th August 1884, 30th December 1884, 24th June 1885, 18th August 1892 and 30th January 1893. Copies are given away on application to the Board of Trade.

86. Is one ship bound to assist another in case of collision ?

Yes.

87. What is the penalty for default ?

If the master or person in charge of the ship fails to render assistance without reasonable excuse, the collision is, in absence of proof to the contrary, to be deemed to be caused by his wrongful act, neglect, or default.

88. Is there any other penalty attached to not rendering assistance ?

Yes. If it is afterwards proved that he did not render assistance, his certificate may be cancelled or suspended by the court investigating the case.

89. Is it not expected that you should understand the regulations before you take charge of the deck of a ship ?

It is.

90. Why ?

If I do not understand them and am guilty of default, the consequences will be very serious to me.

91. What would be a serious offence ?

To cause a collision by porting the helm or doing anything not required by the regulations and without due consideration.

REGULATIONS FOR PREVENTING COLLISIONS AT SEA.

Preliminary.

Art. 1. In the following rules every steam ship which is under sail and not under steam is to be considered a sailing ship; and every steam ship which is under steam, whether under sail or not, is to be considered a ship under steam.

Rules concerning Lights.

Art. 2. The lights mentioned in the following Articles numbered 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11, and no others, shall be carried in all weathers, from sunset to sunrise.

Art. 3. A sea-going steam ship when under weigh shall carry—

(a) On or in front of the foremast, at a height above the hull of not less than 20 feet, and if the breadth of the ship exceeds 20 feet then at a height above the hull not less than such breadth, a bright white light, so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 20 points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light 10 points on each side of the ship, viz., from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on either side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least five miles.

(b) On the starboard side, a green light so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to 2 points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

(c) On the port side, a red light, so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to 2 points abaft the beam on the port side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

(d) The said green and red side lights shall be fitted with inboard screens projecting at least 3 feet forward from the light, so as to prevent these lights from being seen across the bow.

Art. 4. A steam ship, when towing another ship, shall, in addition to her side lights, carry two bright white lights in a vertical line one over the other, not less than 3 feet apart, so as to distinguish her from other steam ships. Each of these lights shall be of the same construction and character, and shall be carried in the same position, as the white light which other steam ships are required to carry.

Art. 5. (a) A ship, whether a steam ship or a sailing ship, which from any accident is not under command, shall at night carry, in the same position as the white light which steam ships are required to carry, and if a steam ship, in place of that light, three red lights in globular lanterns, each not less than 10 inches in diameter, in a vertical line one over the other, not less than 3 feet apart, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles ; and shall by day carry in a vertical line one over the other, not less than 3 feet apart, in front of but not lower than her foremast head, three black balls or shapes, each 2 feet in diameter.

(b) A ship, whether a steam ship or a sailing ship, employed in laying or in picking up a telegraph cable, shall at night carry in the same position as the white light which steam ships are required to carry, and if a steam ship, in place of that light, three lights in globular lanterns, each not less than 10 inches in diameter, in a vertical line one over another, not less than 6 feet apart ; the highest and lowest of these lights shall be red, and the middle light shall be white, and they shall be of such a character that the red lights shall be visible at the same distance as the white light. By day she shall carry in a vertical line one over the other, not less than 6 feet apart, in front of but not lower than her foremast head, three shapes, not less than 2 feet in diameter, of which the top and bottom shall be globular in shape and red in colour, and the middle one diamond in shape and white.

(c) The ships referred to in this Article, when not making any way through the water, shall not carry the side lights, but when making way shall carry them.

(d) The lights and shapes required to be shown by this Article are to be taken by other ships as signals that the ship showing them is not under command, and cannot therefore get out of the way. The signals to be made by ships in distress and requiring assistance are contained in Article 27.

Art. 6. A sailing ship under way, or being towed, shall carry the same lights as are provided by Article 3 for a steam ship under way, with the exception of the white light, which she shall never carry.

Art. 7. Whenever, as in the case of small vessels during bad weather, the green and the red side lights cannot be fixed, these lights shall be kept on deck, on their respective sides of the vessel, ready for use; and shall, on the approach of or to other vessels, be exhibited on their respective sides in sufficient time to prevent collision, in such manner as to make them most visible, and so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side nor the red light on the starboard side.

To make the use of these portable lights more certain and easy, the lanterns containing them shall each be painted outside with the colour of the light they respectively contain, and shall be provided with proper screens.

Art. 8. A ship, whether a steam ship or a sailing ship, when at anchor, shall carry, where it can best be seen, but at a height not exceeding 20 feet above the hull, a white light in a globular lantern of not less than 8 inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform and unbroken light visible all round the horizon at a distance of at least one mile.

Art. 9. A pilot vessel, when engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall not carry the lights required for other vessels, but shall carry a white light at the masthead, visible all round the horizon, and shall also exhibit a flare-up light or flare-up lights at short intervals, which shall never exceed fifteen minutes.

A pilot vessel, when not engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall carry lights similar to those of other ships.

Art. 10. Open boats and fishing vessels of less than 20 tons net registered tonnage, when under way and when not having their nets, trawls, dredges, or lines in the water, shall not be obliged to carry the coloured side lights; but every such boat and vessel shall, in lieu thereof, have ready at hand a lantern with a green glass on the one side and a red glass on the other side, and on approaching to or being approached by another vessel such lantern shall be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision, so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side nor the red light on the starboard side.

The following portion of this Article applies only to fishing vessels and boats when in the sea off the coast of Europe lying north of Cape Finisterre :—

to carry and show the lights therein named, shall carry and show the same lights as other vessels under way.

(b) All vessels when engaged in fishing with drift nets shall exhibit two white lights from any part of the vessel where they can be best seen. Such lights shall be placed so that the vertical distance between them shall be not less then 6 feet and not more than 10 feet; and so that the horizontal distance between them measured in a line with the keel of the vessel shall be not less than 5 feet and not more than 10 feet. The lower of these two lights shall be the more forward, and both of them shall be of such a character, and contained in lanterns of such construction, as to show all round the horizon, on a dark night with a clear atmosphere, for a distance of not less than three miles.

(c) A vessel employed in line fishing with her lines out, shall carry the same lights as a vessel when engaged in fishing with drift nets.

(d) If a vessel when fishing becomes stationary in consequence of her gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, she shall show the light and make the fog signal for a vessel at anchor.

(e) Fishing vessels and open boats may at any time use a flare-up in addition to the lights which they are by this Article required to carry and show. All flare-up lights exhibited by a vessel when trawling, dredging, or fishing with any kind of drag net shall be shown at the after part of the vessel, excepting that, if the vessel is hanging by the stern to her trawl, dredge, or drag net, they shall be exhibited from the bow.

(f) Every fishing vessel and every open boat when at anchor between sunset and sunrise shall exhibit a white light visible all round the horizon at a distance of at least one mile.

(g) In fog, mist, or falling snow, a drift net vessel attached to her nets and a vessel when trawling, dredging, or fishing with any kind of drag net, and a vessel employed in line fishing with her lines out, shall at intervals of not more than two minutes make a blast with her fog horn and ring her bell alternately.

Art. 11. A ship which is being overtaken by another shall show from her stern to such last-mentioned ship a white light or a flare-up light.

Sound Signals for Fog, &c.

Art. 12. A steam ship shall be provided with a steam whistle or other efficient steam sound signal, so placed that the sound may not be intercepted by any obstructions, and with an efficient fog horn to be sounded by a bellows or other mechanical means, and also with an efficient bell.* A sailing ship shall be provided with a similar fog horn and bell.

In fog, mist, or falling snow, whether by day or night, the signals described in this Article shall be used as follows; that is to say:—

(a) A steam ship under way shall make with her steam whistle or other steam sound signal, at intervals of not more than two minutes, a prolonged blast.

(b) A sailing ship under way shall make with her fog horn, at intervals of not more than two minutes, when on the starboard tack one blast, when on the port tack two blasts in succession, and when with the wind abaft the beam three blasts in succession.

(c) A steam ship and a sailing ship, when not under way, shall at intervals of not more than two minutes ring the bell.

Speed of Ships to be moderate in Fog, &c.

Art. 13. Every ship, whether a sailing ship or steam ship, shall, in a fog, mist, or falling snow, go at a moderate speed.

Steering and Sailing Rules.

Art. 14. When two sailing ships are approaching one another, so as to involve risk of collision, one of them shall keep out of the way of the other, as follows, viz:—

(a) A ship which is running free shall keep out of the way of a ship which is close-hauled.

(b) A ship which is close-hauled on the port tack shall keep out of the way of a ship which is close-hauled on the starboard tack.

(c) When both are running free with the wind on different sides, the ship which has the wind on the port side shall keep out of the way of the other.

(d) When both are running free with the wind on the same side, the ship which is to windward shall keep out of the way of the ship which is to leeward.

(e) A ship which has the wind aft shall keep out of the way of the other ship.

* In all cases where the regulations require a bell to be used, a drum will be substituted on board Turkish vessels.

Art. 15. If two ships under steam are meeting end on, or nearly end on, so as to involve risk of collision, each shall alter her course to starboard, so that each may pass on the port side of the other.

This Article only applies to cases where ships are meeting end on, or nearly end on, in such a manner as to involve risk of collision, and does not apply to two ships which must, if both keep on their respective courses, pass clear of each other.

The only cases to which it does apply are, when each of the two ships is end on, or nearly end on, to the other; in other words, in cases in which, by day, each ship sees the masts of the other in a line, or nearly in a line, with her own; and by night, to cases in which each ship is in such a position as to see both the side lights of the other.

It does not apply by day, to cases in which a ship sees another ahead crossing her own course; or by night, to cases where the red light of one ship is opposed to the red light of the other, or where the green light of one ship is opposed to the green light of the other, or where a red light without a green light, or a green light without a red light, is seen ahead, or where both green and red lights are seen anywhere but ahead.

Art. 16. If two ships under steam are crossing, so as to involve risk of collision, the ship which has the other on her own starboard side shall keep out of the way of the other.

Art. 17. If two ships, one of which is a sailing ship, and the other a steam ship, are proceeding in such directions as to involve risk of collision, the steam ship shall keep out of the way of the sailing ship.

Art. 18. Every steam ship, when approaching another ship, so as to involve risk of collision, shall slacken her speed or stop and reverse, if necessary.

Art. 19. In taking any course authorised or required by these Regulations, a steam ship under way may indicate that course to any other ship which she has in sight by the following signals on her steam whistle, viz.:—

One short blast to mean "I am directing my course to starboard."
Two short blasts to mean "I am directing my course to port."
Three short blasts to mean "I am going full speed astern."

The use of these signals is optional; but if they are used, the course of the ship must be in accordance with the signal made.

Art. 20. Notwithstanding anything contained in any preceding Article, every ship, whether a sailing ship or a steam ship, overtaking any other shall keep out of the way of the overtaken ship.

Art. 21. In narrow channels every steam ship shall, when it is safe and practicable, keep to that side of the fairway or mid-channel which lies on the starboard side of such ship.

Art. 22. Where by the above rules one of two ships is to keep out of the way, the other shall keep her course.

Art. 23. In obeying and construing these rules due regard shall be had to all dangers of navigation, and to any special circumstances which may render a departure from the above rules necessary in order to avoid immediate danger.

No Ship, under any Circumstances, to neglect proper Precautions.

Art. 24. Nothing in these rules shall exonerate any ship, or the owner, or master, or crew thereof, from the consequences of any neglect to carry lights or signals, or of any neglect to keep a proper look-out, or of the neglect of any precaution which may be required by the ordinary practice of seamen, or by the special circumstances of the case.

Reservation of Rules for Harbours and Inland Navigation.

Art. 25. Nothing in these rules shall interfere with the operation of a special rule, duly made by local authority, relative to the navigation of any harbour, river, or inland navigation.

Special Lights for Squadrons and Convoys.

Art. 26. Nothing in these rules shall interfere with the operation of any special rules made by the Government of any nation with respect to additional station and signal lights for two or more ships of war or for ships sailing under convoy.

Art. 27. When a ship is in distress and requires assistance from other ships or from the shore, the following shall be the signals to be used or displayed by her, either together or separately; that is to say,—

In the daytime—

1. A gun fired at intervals of about a minute;
2. The International Code signal of distress indicated by NC;
3. The distant signal, consisting of a square flag having either above or below it a ball, or anything resembling a ball.

At night—

1. A gun fired at intervals of about a minute;
2. Flames on the ship (as from a burning tar barrel, oil barrel, &c.);
3. Rockets or shells, throwing stars of any colour or description, fired one at a time, at short intervals.

ORDERS IN COUNCIL OF 30TH DECEMBER 1884 & AND 24TH JUNE 1885.

1884—PART I—STEAM VESSELS OF 20 TONS GROSS REGISTER TONNAGE OR UPWARDS.

(1) On or in front of the foremast head and in the same position as the white light which other steamships are required to carry, a lantern showing a white light ahead, a green light on the starboard side, and a red light on the port side; such lantern shall be so constructed, fitted, and arranged as to show an uniform and unbroken white light over an arc of the horizon of four points of the compass, an uniform and unbroken green light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass, and an uniform and unbroken red light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass, and it shall be so fixed as to show the white light from right ahead to two points on the bow on each side of the ship, the green light from two points on the starboard bow to four points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and the red light from two points on the port bow to four points abaft the beam on the port side: (2) a white light in a globular lantern of not less than 8 inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform and unbroken light all round the horizon; the lantern containing such white light shall be carried lower than the lantern showing the green, white, and red lights as aforesaid; so, however, that the vertical distance between them shall not be less than 6 feet and not more than 12 feet.

1884—PART II—SAILING VESSELS OF 20 TONS NET REGISTER TONNAGE OR UPWARDS.

(1) On or in front of the foremast head a lantern having a green glass on the starboard side and a red glass on the port side, so constructed, fitted, and arranged that the red and green do not converge, and so as to show an uniform and unbroken green light over an arc of the horizon of 12 points of the compass, and an uniform and unbroken red light over an arc of the horizon of 12 points of the compass, and it shall be so fixed as to show the green light from right ahead to four points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and the red light from right ahead to four points abaft the beam on the port side: and (2) a white light in a globular lantern of not less than 8 inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear uniform and unbroken light all round the horizon; the lantern containing such white light shall be carried lower than the lantern showing the green and red lights as aforesaid; so, however, that the vertical distance between them shall not be less than 6 feet and not more than 12 feet.

1885.—SAILING TRAWLERS OF ANY TONNAGE.

As regards sailing vessels engaged in trawling, such vessels having their trawls in the water and not being stationary in consequence of their gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, if they do not carry and show the lights required by Article 6 of the Regulations aforesaid, or the other lights of the description set forth in Part 2 of the Schedule to the Order in Council of the 30th of December, 1884, shall carry and show, in lieu of the lights required by Article 6 of the Regulations aforesaid, or the other lights of the description set forth in paragraph 2 of the Schedule to the Order, other lights as follows, that is to say:

A white light in a globular lantern of not less than 8 inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform and unbroken light all round the horizon, and visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, for a distance of at least 2 miles; and also a sufficient supply of red pyrotechnic lights which shall each burn for at least 30 seconds and shall, when so burning, be visible for the same distance under the same conditions as the white light. The white light shall be shown from sunset to sunrise, and one of the red pyrotechnic lights shall be shown on approaching, or on being approached by another ship or vessel in sufficient time to prevent collision.

ORDER IN COUNCIL OF 18TH AUGUST 1892.

MODIFYING THE REGULATIONS CONTAINED IN THE ORDER IN COUNCIL OF THE 11th AUGUST 1884, AS REGARDS THE LIGHTS TO BE CARRIED BY STEAM PILOT VESSELS.

Addition to Article 9:—

A Steam Pilot Vessel exclusively employed for the service of Pilots licensed or certified by any Pilotage Authority or the Committee of any Pilotage District in the United Kingdom, when engaged on her station on pilotage duty, and in British waters and not at anchor, shall, in addition to the lights required for all pilot boats, carry at a distance of eight feet below her white masthead light a red light visible all round the horizon, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles, and also the coloured side lights required to be carried by vessels when under way.

When engaged on her station on pilotage duty and in British waters and at anchor, she shall carry, in addition to the light required for all pilot boats, the red light above mentioned, but not the coloured side lights.

When not engaged in her station on pilotage duty, she shall carry the same lights as other steam vessels.

SCREENING OF SIDE LIGHTS.

Addition to Article 3:—

(e) To ensure that the red and green side lights shall show an uniform light from right ahead of the ship to two points abaft the beam on the port and starboard sides respectively, and shall not show across the bow of the ship itself, the said lights must be fixed and the screens fitted so that the rays from the red and green lights shall cross the line of the ship's keel projected ahead of the ship at a reasonable distance ahead of the ship.

With regard to all vessels whose lights are inspected by the officers of the Board of Trade, the red or green side light will not be deemed to be fixed and fitted in accordance with the Regulations unless it is so fixed and screened that a line drawn from the outside edge of the wick to the foremost end of the inboard screen of such light shall make an angle of 4 degrees, or as near thereto as may be practicable, with a line drawn parallel with the keel of the ship from the outside edge of the wick.

AIDS TO MEMORY in four verses, by the late Mr. THOMAS GRAY, C.B.

1. Two Steam Ships meeting.

When both side lights you see ahead—
Port your helm and show your RED.

2. Two Steam Ships passing.

GREEN to GREEN—or, RED to RED—
Perfect safety—Go ahead!

3. Two Steam Ships crossing.

Note.—This is the position of greatest danger: there is nothing for it but good look-out, caution, and judgment.

If to your starboard RED appear,
It is your duty to keep clear;
To act as judgment says is proper:—
To port—or Starboard—Back,—or, Stop her.

A Steamer's Starboard Light of GREEN
There's not so much for you to do,
For GREEN to Port keeps clear of you.

4. All Ships must keep a good look-out, and Steam Ships must stop and go astern, if necessary.

Both in safety and in doubt
Always keep a good look-out;
In danger, with no room to turn,
Ease her, stop her, go astern.

DISTRESS AND PILOT SIGNALS.

The following sections of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," relate to Signals of Distress and Signals for Pilots. (See also Order in Council of 11th August 1884—Regulations for preventing Collisions at Sea. Article 27, page 63.) M. S. Act, 1894.

Signals of distress.

431.—(1) Her Majesty in Council may make rules as to what signals shall be signals of distress, and the signals fixed by those rules shall be deemed to be signals of distress.

(2) If a master of a vessel uses or displays, or causes or permits any person under his authority to use or display, any of those signals of distress, except in the case of a vessel being in distress, he shall be liable to pay compensation for any labour undertaken, risk incurred, or loss sustained in consequence of that signal having been supposed to be a signal of distress, and that compensation may, without prejudice to any other remedy, be recovered in the same manner in which salvage is recoverable.

Signals to be displayed by ships requiring a pilot.

615.—(1) Her Majesty may by Order in Council make rules as to the signals to be used or displayed where the services of a pilot are required on any vessel, and those signals are in this Act referred to as pilot signals.

(2) If a vessel requires the services of a pilot, the master of that vessel shall use or display the pilot signals.

(3) If a master of a vessel uses or displays, or causes or permits any person under his authority to use or display, any of the pilot signals for any other purpose than that of summoning a pilot, or uses or causes or permits any person under his authority to use any other signal for a pilot, he shall for each offence be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds.

Signals of Distress.

(As subsequently amended by Order in Council of 11th August 1884.)

When a ship is in distress and requires assistance from other ships or from the shore, the following shall be the signals to be used or displayed by her, either together or separately; that is to say,—

In the daytime—

1. A gun fired at intervals of about a minute;
2. The International Code Signal of distress indicated by NC;
3. The distant signal, consisting of a square flag having either above or below it a ball, or anything resembling a ball.

At night—

1. A gun fired at intervals of about a minute;
2. Flames on the ship (as from a burning tar barrel, oil barrel, &c.);
3. Rockets or shells, throwing stars of any colour or description, fired one at a time, at short intervals.

Signals to be made by Ships wanting a Pilot.

In the daytime.—The following signals, numbered 1 and 2, when used or displayed together or separately, shall be deemed to be signals for a pilot in the daytime, viz.:—

1. To be hoisted at the fore, the Jack or other national colour usually worn by merchant ships, having round it a white border, one-fifth of the breadth of the flag; or
2. The International Code pilotage signal indicated by PT.

At night.—The following signals, numbered 1 and 2, when used or displayed together or separately, shall be deemed to be signals for a pilot at night, viz.:—

1. The pyrotechnic light commonly known as a blue light every fifteen minutes; or
2. A bright white light, flashed or shown at short or frequent intervals just above the bulwarks, for about a minute at a time.

APPENDIX G.

[The Candidate will be required to work out the following questions on either a "true" or "magnetic" chart,* whichever may be handed to him by the Examiner; and also determine whether the chart is a "true" or "magnetic" one, and whether it is for the northern or southern, and eastern or western hemisphere.]

The applicant is to answer correctly at least 12 of such of the following questions as are marked with a cross by the Examiner.

The Examiner's attention is specially called to the importance of Questions 11, 12, 13, 14, and 39, which must be marked in all cases—

1. State briefly the essentials of an efficient Compass.
2. State briefly the chief points to be considered when selecting a position for your Compass on board ship, and what should be particularly guarded against.

* These spaces to be filled in by the Examiners, and frequently varied.
† The Examiners to fill in whether North Atlantic, Bay of Bengal, China Seas, Indian Ocean, &c., &c.

3. What do you mean by Deviation of the Compass, and how is it caused?
4. Describe how you would determine the deviation of your compass—(1) by reciprocal bearings; (2) by figures on the dock walls; (3) by bearings of a distant object; (4) by the bearings of the sun or other celestial body.
5. Having determined the deviation with the ship's head on the various points of the compass, how do you know when it is Easterly and when Westerly?
6. Why is it necessary, in order to ascertain the deviations, to bring the ship's head in more than one direction?
7. For accuracy, what is the least number of points to which the ship's head should be brought for constructing a curve or table of deviations?
8. How would you find the deviation when sailing along a well-known coast?
9. Name some suitable objects by which you could readily obtain the deviation of the Compass when sailing along the coasts of the Channel you have been accustomed to use.
10. Supposing you have no means of ascertaining the magnetic bearing of a distant object when swinging your ship for deviations, how could you find it, approximately from equi-distant compass bearings; and at what distance as a rule should the object be from the ship?
11. Having taken the following compass bearings of a distant object, find the object's magnetic bearing, and thence the deviation—

MAGNETIC BEARING REQUIRED:—

Ship's Head by Standard Compass.	Bearing of distant object by Standard Compass.	Deviation required.	Ship's Head by Standard Compass.	Bearing of distant object by Standard Compass.	Deviation required.
1	2	3	4	5	6
North	S. 4° E.		South	S. 13° E.
N.E.	South		S.W.	S. 23° E.
East	S. 4° W.		West	S. 21° E.
S.E.	S. 1° W.		N.W.	S. 11° E.

Magnetic bearings required.

15. Do you expect the deviation to change; if so, state under what circumstances?
16. How often is it desirable to test the accuracy of your table of deviations?
17. What is meant by variation of the Compass; what is it caused by; and where can you find the variation for any given position?

19. Which end of a magnet (or compass needle) is usually termed the red or "marked" end, and which the blue?
20. What effect has the pole of one magnet of either name on the pole of another magnet?
21. What is meant by transient induced magnetism?
22. Which is the red and which is the blue pole of a mass of soft vertical iron, by induction, and what effect would the upper and lower ends of it have on the compass needle (a) in the Northern hemisphere, (b) in the Southern hemisphere, (c) on the magnetic Equator?

24. Describe the meaning of the expression co-efficient A.
25. Describe the meaning of the expression co-efficient B: its signs and effects.

* The term sub-permanent magnetism in these questions is used in the original sense as proposed by the late Sir G. B. Airy, to denote the character of the permanent magnetism of an iron ship as distinguished from the permanent magnetism of a magnetised steel bar. The terms "sub-permanent" and "permanent" throughout these questions may, therefore, be considered as synonymous.

26. Describe the meaning of the expression co-efficient C; its signs and effects.
27. Describe the meaning of the expression co-efficient D; its signs and effects.
28. Describe the meaning of the expression co-efficient E; its signs and effects.

30. The compasses of iron ships being more or less affected by what is termed the heeling error, on what courses is this error usually at its minimum, and on what courses at its maximum?
31. Describe clearly the three principal causes of the heeling error on board ship.
32. State to which side of the ship in the majority of cases is the North point of the Compass drawn when ship heels over in the Northern hemisphere.
33. Under what conditions (that is, as regards position of ship whilst building, and the arrangement of iron in the ship) is the North point of the Compass needle usually drawn to windward or the high side of the ship in the Northern hemisphere, and if not allowed for, what effect has it on the assumed position of the ship when she is steering on Northerly, also on Southerly courses in the Northern hemisphere?
34. Under what conditions (as in question 33) is the North point of the Compass needle usually drawn to leeward or the low side of the ship in the Northern hemisphere, and, if not allowed for, what effect would it have on the assumed position of the ship when she is steering on Northerly, also on Southerly courses in the Northern hemisphere?
35. The effects being as you state, on what courses would you keep away, and on what courses would you keep closer to the wind in the Northern hemisphere in order to make good a given Compass course (a) when North point of Compass is drawn to windward or the high side of ship; and (b) when drawn to leeward or the low side?
36. Does the same rule hold good in both hemispheres with regard to the heeling error?
37. State clearly how that part of the heeling error due to the permanent part of the magnetism of the ship varies as the ship changes her position on the globe, and what is the reason of this?
38. State clearly how that part of the heeling error due to the induction in transverse iron (which was horizontal when ship was upright) and iron vertical to the ship's deck, varies as the ship changes her position on the globe.
39. Your steering compass having a large error, show by "Boall's Compass Deviascope" how you would correct it by compensating magnets and soft iron (as usually practised by Compass adjusters in the Mercantile Marine) in order to reduce the error within manageable limits. Show also how the heeling error can be compensated.
40. As the co-efficient B (capable of being corrected) usually consists of two parts—one due to the permanent magnetism of the ship, and the other to vertical induction in soft iron, how should each of the two parts, strictly speaking, be corrected when compensating the Compass?
41. If the whole of co-efficient B be corrected by a permanent magnet, as is usually done, what is likely to ensue as the ship changes her magnetic latitude?
42. Provided the needles of your Compass are not so long and powerful, and so near, as to cause the soft iron correctors to become magnetised by induction, would the co-efficient D if properly compensated be likely to remain so in all magnetic latitudes and both hemispheres? If so, state the reason why.
43. State at what distance, as a general rule, the magnets and soft iron correctors should be placed from the Compass needles, and what will be the consequence if they are placed too near the needles?
44. Is it necessary that the magnets used for compensating co-efficients B and C should be placed on the deck? If not, state where they may also be placed, and the rules to be observed in placing them into position.
45. Can the compensation of the heeling error be depended upon when the ship changes her latitude? If not, state the reason.

APPENDIX K.

Compass Adjustment.

Instruction to Examiners.

The Board of Trade are advised that it is of the utmost importance that masters of ships should thoroughly understand the tentative method of Compass Adjustment as generally practised in merchant ships, and Examiners are therefore directed to fully satisfy themselves that all Candidates for Masters' Certificates have this particular knowledge. It should be tested in connection with the Form of Examination ("Exn. 7") by aid of Captain Boall's "Deviascope," by which they will be required to prove—(1) their knowledge of the laws of deviation, and the tentative method of Compass Adjustment; (2) that they understand the practical application of the answers given by them to any of the other questions on Form "Exn. 7" that the Examiner, in the course of the examination, may think fit to touch upon.

A concise statement of the present method of tentative Compass Adjustment is forwarded for the use of Examiners. The Board of Trade wish them, however, distinctly to understand that the Board are not in any way advocating the correction of that part of co-efficient B which arises from vertical induction in soft iron by a permanent magnet instead of by a soft iron bar. The Board have no authority to interfere with the methods in use amongst Compass adjusters for the adjustment of Compasses in iron ships, but instruct the Examiners to satisfy themselves that masters are acquainted with the ordinary method as at present practised.

The TENTATIVE METHOD of COMPASS ADJUSTMENT as generally practised by COMPASS ADJUSTERS in SHIPS of the MERCANTILE MARINE.

Before describing the practice, it will be as well to briefly state the co-efficients used to express the different magnetic forces:—

Co-efficient	A	represents	a constant quantity.
„	B	„	semicircular deviation due to fore and aft magnetic forces.
„	C	„	semicircular deviation due to transverse magnetic forces.
„	D	„	quadrantal deviation due to horizontal induction in soft iron.

SIGNS and EFFECTS OF CO-EFFICIENTS A, B, C, D, and E.

Co-efficient A represents a constant deviation of the same nature and amount on all points of the Compass; + A signifying easterly, and — A, westerly deviation.

Co-efficient + B represents an attraction towards the ship's head, and causes easterly deviations with ship's head in the eastern semicircle of the Compass, and westerly deviations in the western semicircle, attaining a maximum value on the east and west points, decreasing to zero on north and south points, by Compass.

Co-efficient — B represents an attraction towards the ship's stern, and causes easterly deviations with ship's head in the western semicircle, and westerly deviations with the ship's head in the eastern semicircle, with a maximum value on the east and west points, decreasing to zero on the north and south points, by Compass.

Co-efficient + C represents an attraction towards the starboard side of the ship, and causes easterly deviations with ship's head in the northern semicircle, and westerly deviations in the southern semicircle, attaining a maximum value on the north and south points, decreasing to zero on the east and west points, by Compass.

Co-efficient — C represents an attraction towards the port side of the ship, and causes westerly deviations with ship's head in the northern semicircle, and easterly in the southern semicircle, attaining a maximum value on the north and south points, decreasing to zero on the east and west points, by Compass.

Co-efficient + D gives easterly deviations with ship's head between N. and E. and S. and W.; and westerly deviations between S. and E. and N. and W.

Co-efficient — D gives results exactly the reverse to + D.

Note.—Both + D and — D have a maximum value on the four quadrantal points, and become zero on the cardinal points by Compass.

Co-efficient + E gives easterly deviations with ship's head between N.E. and N.W. and S.E. and S.W.; and westerly deviations between N.E. and S.E. and N.W. and S.W.

Co-efficient — E gives results exactly the reverse to + E.

Note.—Both + E and — E have a maximum value on the cardinal points, and become zero on the four quadrantal points, but are usually very small in amount in Compasses placed in the middle line of the ship.

Heeling Error.—The heeling error arises partly from vertical induction in transverse iron, and iron vertical to the ship's deck, and partly from the vertical component of the sub-permanent magnetism of the ship. In the Northern Hemisphere in the majority of cases the N. point of the Compass needle is drawn to windward or the high side of the ship, with, as a rule, a maximum heeling error on N. and S. points, and zero on E. and W. points by Compass. If the Compass is not properly placed in the ship, there may be a sensible heeling deviation on E. and W. courses.

TENTATIVE CORRECTIONS.

To correct co-efficient C.—With ship's head north or south (magnetic) place a bar magnet (or more than one if necessary) horizontally and exactly athwartship, either on the deck or on any convenient platform, with its centre on the fore and aft line passing through the centre of the Compass card, placing its red or marked end to starboard if the N. point of the needle deviates to the starboard side, or to port if it deviates to the port side of the ship, moving the magnet to or from the Compass until it points correctly.

Note.—The deviation represented by co-efficient C varies inversely as the earth's horizontal force, providing the iron is symmetrically arranged on each side of the Compass.

To correct co-efficient B.—With ship's head east or west (magnetic) place a bar magnet (or more than one if necessary) horizontally and exactly parallel to the fore and aft midship line of the ship, either on the deck or on any convenient platform, with its centre on the athwartship line passing through the centre of the Compass, the red or marked end of the magnet being directed aft if the N. point of the Compass needle deviates towards the stern, or forward if it deviates towards the bow, moving the magnet to or from the Compass until it points correctly.

Note.—The co-efficient B consists of two parts; one is due to the permanent magnetism of the ship, which varies inversely as the earth's horizontal force; the other to vertical induction in soft iron, which varies as the tangent of the dip. As ships in the merchant service are rarely built with a view of providing a satisfactory position for the standard Compasses, it is very difficult in many ships to find a position for it where it will not be affected by vertical iron. It follows, therefore, that if this deviation be compensated, as is customary, by a fore and aft permanent magnet instead of by a vertical soft iron bar, the poles of the magnet may in some cases require to be reversed in high southern latitudes.

To correct co-efficient + D.—With ship's head on one of the quadrantal points (magnetic) the + D is generally corrected by boxes of small chain, cylinders of soft iron, or soft iron globes, placed athwartships on the same level, and at equal distances, on the port and starboard sides of the Compass, with the centre of their mass on a level with the Compass needle, move them to or from the Compass till the needle points correctly.

To correct co-efficient — D.—Co-efficient — D, which is of very rare occurrence, is corrected by placing the above correctors on the fore and aft sides of the Compass.

Note.—When once the co-efficient D is properly corrected by soft iron, it is correct for all magnetic latitudes, provided the distribution of the iron in the ship is not materially changed, and provided the magnetism of the soft iron has not been affected by the Compass needles. With short needles having small magnetic power, such, for instance, as Sir Wm. Thomson's, there will probably be no change; but when the needles are long and powerful, one-half the original D may be expected to return when approaching the magnetic equator. See Admiralty Manual, 1882, page 96, as follows:—"When "a compass with long and powerful needles is employed, "soft iron correctors placed very near it become mag- "netised by induction according to the power of the "needles, and the resulting correction will not remain "strictly perfect in all latitudes."

To correct Heeling Error.—The heeling error is corrected for any given magnetic latitude by placing a vertical magnet exactly under the centre of the Compass card, with its N. or red pole uppermost if the heeling error is to windward or to the high side of ship, or its S. or blue end uppermost if to leeward or to the low side of ship, moving the magnet to or from the Compass until the heeling error is corrected.

Note.—The heeling error due to the permanent part of the magnetism varies inversely as the earth's horizontal force, and consequently is greatest in high latitudes, diminishes as the ship approaches the magnetic equator and increases again, still retaining the same name as the ship recedes from the magnetic equator in the Southern Hemisphere. The heeling error due to transverse and vertical soft iron decreases as the ship approaches the magnetic equator, where it is zero, and is of a contrary name in the Southern Hemisphere. It is probable that the poles of the vertical magnet may require to be reversed in high southern latitudes.

A divided scale should be marked or fitted outside the tube or some other convenient place, so as to show the proper position for the correcting magnet as found in any given magnetic latitude, and the same recorded as a guide for approximately placing the magnet in position on any subsequent voyage in the same locality, and especially on the return of the ship to the United Kingdom.

Candidates should understand that the object of tentative adjustment is to bring the deviations within manageable limits, and also to equalise the directive force of the needle so far as is practicable on all courses; but no system of adjustment whatever is sufficiently reliable in character to absolve the navigator from the necessity of using every precaution, and especially of ascertaining the deviation on every available opportunity by observations of the sun by day and the other heavenly bodies by night.

APPENDIX I.

SYLLABUS of EXAMINATION in the LAWS of the DEVIATION of the COMPASSES of an IRON SHIP, and in the Means of compensating or correcting it.

From the 1st of May 1895, the following Syllabus will be substituted for the one at present in use in the examination of all candidates for the voluntary examination in Compass Deviation, and for Extra Master's Certificates. Candidates will be required to give correct written answers to at least 40 of the questions; these will be marked by a cross by the Examiner. They will also be required to prove by "Beall's Compass Deviascope"—(1) their knowledge of the Tentative method of Compass Adjustment, and (2) that they really possess a good knowledge of what they have written, by showing on the Deviascope that they are acquainted with the practical application of the same, or of any other questions in the Syllabus that the Examiner in the course of the examination may think proper to touch upon. Questions 31, 61, 62, 69, 70, 72, and 92 will be marked by the Examiner in all cases. The other questions will be constantly varied :—

1. Describe an artificial magnet, and how a steel bar or needle is usually magnetized.

3. Which is the red magnetic pole of the earth, and which the blue; and give their geographical positions?

5. By applying this law to all magnets, natural as well as artificial, describe what would be the result on a magnetic bar or needle, freely suspended, but by weight or by the nature of its mounting constrained to preserve a horizontal position; and what would be the result, if so mounted, but free to move in every direction; the earth being regarded as a natural magnet?
6. What is the cause of the variation of the compass?
7. What is meant by the deviation of the compass?
8. What is meant by the term "local attraction;" under what circumstances have ships' compasses, from recent careful investigation, been found to be affected by it, and name some of the localities in different parts of the world where this disturbance is to be found, and consequently where increased vigilance is necessary [see Appendix, "Evan's Elementary Manual," 1888].
9. What do you understand by the term "soft" iron; and what are its properties as regards acquiring and retaining magnetism?
10. What do you understand by the term "hard" iron; and what are its properties as regards acquiring and retaining magnetism?
11. Describe the meaning of the term "horizontal force" of the earth; where is it the greatest, and where the least; and what effect has it in respect to the increase or decrease of the directive force of the compass needle?
12. Does the magnetic equator coincide with the geographical equator; if not, state clearly how it is situated?
13. Where can the values of the magnetic dip, the earth's horizontal force, and the variation, be found?
14. State in what parts of the globe lying in the usual tracks of navigation the variation changes very rapidly, and what special precautions should be observed when navigating these localities, also why a "variation" chart is then very useful.
15. Why is a knowledge of the magnetic dip and the earth's horizontal force important in dealing with compass deviations?
16. Describe the meaning of the term "vertical force" of the earth; where is it the greatest and where the least?
17. Would you expect a compass to be the more seriously affected by any given disturbing force when near the magnetic equator, or near the poles? and state the reason.
18. State briefly (a) the essentials of an efficient compass; and (b) what you would consider a good arrangement of the needles (that is, whether long or short, single or double, &c.) with the view to good compensation.
19. In stowing away spare compass cards or magnets, how would you place them with regard to each other, or what might be the probable consequence?

20. State briefly the chief points to be considered when selecting a position for your compass on board ship, and what should be particularly guarded against.

21. What is meant by transient induced magnetism?

22. Which is the red and which the blue pole of a mass of soft vertical iron (or indeed of any soft iron not in a horizontal position) by induction, and what effect would the upper and lower ends of it have on a compass needle in the Northern hemisphere?

23. Which is the red and which the blue pole of a mass of soft vertical iron by induction, and what effect would the upper and lower ends of it have on the compass needle in the Southern hemisphere?

24. What effect would a bar of soft vertical iron have on the compass needle on the magnetic equator?

25. Describe what is usualy termed the sub-permanent* magnetism of an iron ship, and state when and how it is acquired, and which is the sub-permanent red and which is the blue pole, and why it is called sub-permanent magnetism.

26. What is meant by "the composition of forces" and "the parallelogram of forces," and show how the knowledge of these is valuable in ascertaining and compensating the sub-permanent magnetism of an iron ship?

27. Describe the nature of the co-efficients B and C plus (+) and minus (—), and the different magnetic forces they represent; also why they are said to produce semicircular deviations.

28. Can semicircular deviations be produced by any other force than the sub-permanent magnetism of the ship? If so, by what?

29. On what points by compass bearings of the ship's head does + B give westerly deviation, and on what points does it give easterly; also on what points does —B give westerly, and on what points easterly?

30. On what points does + C give westerly deviation, and on what points easterly; also on what points does — C give westerly, and on what points easterly deviation?

31. The value of either co-efficient B or C being given, also the magnetic direction of the ship's head while she was being built, determine by the traverse tables the approximate value of the other co-efficient C or B; and the value of both these co-efficients being given, determine approximately the direction by compass of the ship's head whilst being built, assuming, of course, that these co-efficients resulted altogether from sub-permanent magnetism.

32. Would you expect the greatest disturbance of the needle from the effects of sub-permanent magnetism alone to take place when ship's head is in same direction as when building, or when her head is at right angles to that direction, and in what direction of the ship's head would you expect to find the least disturbance?

33. Describe quadrantal deviation, and state what co-efficients represent it; also on what points of the ship's head, by compass, each of these co-efficients gives the greatest amount of deviation, and why it is called quadrantal deviation?

34. On what points of the compass will each of the co-efficients, D and E, + and —, give easterly, and on what points westerly deviation?

35. What conditions of the iron of a ship will produce +D and what — D?

36. State clearly, then, which end of horizontal iron running athwartship (such as beams, &c.), and of horizontal iron running fore and aft of a ship, acquires red and which blue polarity, by induction, when ship's head is at N.E., S.E., S.W., and N.W. respectively.

37. Describe the nature of the deviation represented by co-efficients + A and —A, and describe the errors in the construction of the compass, and other causes, that frequently produce it.

38. What is the object of compensating the compass by magnets, &c., and what are the general advantages of a compensated compass over an uncompensated one?

39. Before adjusting the compass of an iron ship, what is it desirable to do with the view to eliminating, as far as possible, what may be termed the unstable part of the magnetism of the ship?

40. Describe clearly the tentative method of compass adjustment (that is, the compensation of co-efficients B, C, and D, with ship upright) as generally practised by compass adjusters in ships of the mercantile marine.

41. State at what distance, as a general rule, the magnets and soft iron correctors should be placed from the compass needles, and what will be the consequence if they are placed too near the needles.

* The term "sub-permanent" magnetism in the Syllabus is used in the original sense, as proposed by the late Sir G. B. Airy, to denote the character of the permanent magnetism of an iron ship as distinguished from the permanent magnetism of a magnetised steel bar. The terms "sub-permanent" and "permanent" throughout the Syllabus may therefore be considered as synonymous.

42. Is it necessary that the magnets used for compensating co-efficients B and C should be placed on the deck? If not, state where they may also be placed, and the rules to be observed in placing them into position.

43. Does the B found on board ship usually arise altogether from sub-permanent magnetism, or does part of it usually arise from some other cause or causes?

44. If the part of B due to induced magnetism in vertical soft iron, as well as the part due to sub-permanent magnetism, are corrected by a magnet alone, as is generally the case, what is frequently the consequence on the ship changing her magnetic latitude and hemisphere?

45. How should each of these two parts of B, then, strictly speaking, be compensated?

46. Assuming, for the sake of clearness, that your steering compass is unavoidably placed very near to the head of the sternpost (and other vertical iron at the stern), thereby causing a very large—B from induced magnetism; describe briefly any method by which the approximate position for the compensating vertical iron bar (Flinder's or Rundell's) could be estimated in order to reduce the error; describe also how you would proceed, in order to improve, if not, to perfect, its position after observations have been made on the magnetic equator.

47. State if standard compasses, as well as steering compasses, are generally subject to this disturbance from induced magnetism in vertical iron; also whether the attraction in all cases is found to be towards the stern; and if not, state the conditions under which it might be towards the bow, and how the compensating soft iron bar should then be placed.

48. Generally speaking, does the magnetism induced in vertical iron usually have any effect in producing the co-efficient C, ship upright, or is it generally produced by sub-permanent magnetism alone? State also your reasons for saying so.

49. Provided the needles of your compass are not so long and powerful, and so near, as to cause the soft iron correctors to become magnetised by induction, would the co-efficient D if properly compensated as you have described (Ans. 40) be likely to remain so in all latitudes and both hemispheres? If so, state the reason why.

50. Under what circumstances does the character of A and E so change as to render it desirable that these co-efficients should be disregarded or modified?

51. Supposing your compasses were allowed to remain uncompensated, explain clearly what would be the probable changes (ship upright) in the deviations produced separately, by (1) the sub-permanent magnetism of the ship alone, (2) by the induced magnetism in vertical soft iron; (a) on reaching the equator, (b) in the southern hemisphere?

52. Assuming you were able to arrive at the proper proportions to be corrected, and were then to exactly compensate the sub-permanent magnetism of the ship by means of a permanent magnet, and the induced magnetism in vertical iron by a soft iron bar, would you expect any deviation to take place in your compass as the ship changed her latitude and hemisphere? And state your reasons for saying so.

53. Supposing the co-efficient D from horizontal soft iron were allowed to remain uncompensated, would you, or would you not, expect the D to differ in name or amount on the ship changing her magnetic latitude and hemisphere? And state the reason.

54. Describe how you would determine the deviation of your compass (1) by reciprocal bearings, (2) by figures on the dock walls, (3) by bearings of a distant object.

55. Describe, in detail, how you would determine the deviation of your compass by the bearings of the sun. Also by a star or planet.

56. Describe the uses to which the Napier's diagram can be applied, and its special advantages.

57. Describe clearly how the Napier's diagram is constructed.

58. For accuracy, what is the least number of points to which the ship's head should be brought for constructing a complete curve of deviations, or a complete table of deviations?

59. Nearing land, and being anxious to check your deviations on a few courses you may probably require to steer, what is the least number of points it would be necessary to steady the ship's head upon, if making use of a Napier's diagram, in order to ascertain the deviation on each of the points, say in a quadrant of the compass, and describe clearly how you would do this at sea?

60. Supposing you have no means of ascertaining the magnetic bearing of the distant object when swinging your ship for deviations, how could you find it, approximately, from equi-distant compass bearings; and how far, as a rule, should the object be from the ship when swinging or steaming round?

61. Having taken the following equi-distant compass bearings of a distant object, find the object's magnetic bearings, and thence the deviations:—

(a) MAGNETIC BEARING REQUIRED:—

Ship's Head by Standard Compass.	Bearing of distant object by Standard Compass.	Deviation required.	Ship's Head by Standard Compass.	Bearing of distant object by Standard Compass.	Deviation required.
1	2	3	4	5	6
North.	S. 75 W.		South.	S. 34 W.
N.E.	S. 64 W.		S.W.	S. 81 W.
East.	S. 56 W.		West.	S. 49 W.
S.E.	S. 50 W.		N.W.	S. 71 W.

Magnetic courses—N.N.W., S.S.E., W.N.W., E.S.E.
Compass courses required.

Compass courses—N.N.E., E.N.E., S.S.W., W.S.W.
Magnetic courses required.

Compass bearings—S.E. by S. and N.N.W.
Magnetic bearings required.

62. Assuming the deviations observed with ship's head by compass to be as follow [or as in question 61, whichever may be given], determine the value of the co-efficients A, B, C, D, and E, and from them construct a complete table of deviations (or for as many points as the Examiner may direct).

Deviation at North	[ ]	South	[ ]
N. E.	[ ]	S. W.	[ ]
East	[ ]	West	[ ]
S. E.	[ ]	N. W.	[ ]

63. When swinging your ship, if it be required to construct Deviation Tables for two or more compasses situated in different parts of the vessel, describe the process, and how you would employ the Napier's diagram for this purpose.

64. State your rule for determining whether deviation is easterly or westerly.

65. Is a knowledge of the value of the various co-efficients of any advantage? If so, state why?

66. Describe (a) what is commonly known by the term "retentive" or "retained" magnetism, and how the ship acquires it when in port and at sea; (b) its effect on the compass needle whilst ship's head continues in the same direction; (c) the immediate consequence when the direction of the ship's head is altered, and (d) the special precautions to be invariably observed at sea on the alteration of the ship's course.

67. Describe a "Dumb-card" or "Pelorus," and its use (a) in compensating a compass, (b) in determining the deviation.

68. If you determine the deviation by an azimuth or an amplitude of a heavenly body, it is then combined with variation, which together is sometimes called the correction for the compass. State when the deviation is the difference between the variation and the correction, and when the sum; and when it is of the same name as that of the correction, and when of the contrary name.

69. In observing azimuths of heavenly bodies, the best method is by "time azimuths," since these can be observed without an altitude when the ship is in port, or when the horizon cannot be defined from any cause. Given the sun's declination, the hour of the day, and the latitude, to find the true bearing of the sun.*

70. By night, if it be desirable to observe the correction of the compass. Given the day of the year, and time at ship, also the latitude of the place, to determine what stars will be in good position for this purpose.

71. If your correcting magnets are so mounted that their positions can be altered, describe the process by which on open sea you can place the ship's head correct magnetic N. (or S.), and correct magnetic E. (or W.), and can make the correction perfect.

* The process of finding time azimuths by the ordinary formulæ of spherical trigonometry is tedious, and since on board an iron ship these observations should be often repeated, the Candidate will be allowed to use any table or graphic or linear method that will solve the problem within a half of a degree, the altitude of the heavenly body not being given.

72. Given the name of a star, the time, the place of ship, the variation of the compass, and the bearing of the star by compass. Determine the deviation, and name it east or west.

73. Would you expect any change to be caused in the error of your compassby the ship heeling over either from the effect of the wind or the cargo ?

74. Describe clearly the three principal causes of the heeling error on board an iron ship.

75. Towards which side of the ship would that part of magnetism induced in continuous transverse iron (which was horizontal while ship was upright) help to draw the North point of the needle when ship heels over (a) in the Northern hemisphere, (b) in the Southern hemisphere ?

76. Supposing the compass were placed between the two parts of a divided beam or other athwartship iron, towards which side of the ship would iron so situated help to draw the North point of the needle when ship heels over (a) in the Northern hemisphere, (b) in the Southern hemisphere ?

77. Would you expect that part of the magnetism induced in iron exactly perpendicular to the ship's deck, such as stanchions, bulkheads, &c., if below the compass, to cause any part of the heeling error when ship heels over, and if so, towards which side of the ship (a) in the Northern hemisphere, (b) in the Southern hemisphere ?

78. If an ordinary standard compass placed higher than the iron top sides be compensated whilst the ship is upright, what co-efficient will be affected by heeling ?

79. Under what conditions (that is, as regards position whilst building and the arrangement of iron in the ship) is the North point of the Compass needle usually drawn to windward, or the high side of the ship, in the Northern hemisphere ?

80. Under what conditions, as a rule, is the North point of the Compass needle usually drawn to leeward, or the low side of the ship, in the Northern hemisphere ?

81. State to which side of the ship, in the majority of cases, is the North point of the Compass drawn when ship heels over in the Northern hemisphere; and when this is the case, and it is not allowed for, what effect has it on the assumed position of the ship when she is steering on Northerly and also on Southerly courses ?

82. On what courses would you keep away, and on what courses would you keep closer to the wind in both the Northern and Southern hemispheres in order to make good a given Compass course (a) when North point of Compass is drawn to windward, or the high side of ship, and (b) when drawn to leeward or the low side ?

83. If a ship is beating to windward; when she tacks, under what circumstances will the heeling error retain the same name, and under what circumstances will it take the contrary name ?

84. If a ship is placed on the opposite tack by the change of wind, the ship's course being the same by compass, will the heeling error change its name ?

85. In which direction of the ship's head does the heeling error attain its maximum value, and in which direction does it generally vanish ?

86. Explain clearly how that part of the heeling error due to the permanent part of the magnetism of theship varies as the ship changes her geographical position, and what is the reason of this ?

87. Explain clearly how that part of the heeling error due to the induction in transverse iron (which was horizontal when ship was upright), and iron vertical to the ship's deck, varies as the ship changes her geographical position.

88. What, then, would be the probable nature of the heeling error, that is, whether to high or low side of the ship, and whether the error would be equal to the sum or difference, &c., of the forces given (1) in high North Latitudes, (2) on magnetic equator, (3) in high South Latitudes ? Assuming the polarity of the sub-permanent magnetism of the ship under, and affecting, the Compass, to be as given below; the vertical induction in soft iron, of course, obeying the ordinary laws in the above geographical positions (1), (2), (3)—

(a) In cases where the effect of red vertical sub-permanent magnetism is equal to that of the vertical induction in the soft iron of the ship.

(b) Where the effect of red vertical sub-permanent magnetism is greater than that of the vertical induction in the soft iron.

(c) Where the effect of red vertical sub-permanent magnetism is less than that of the vertical induction in the soft iron.

(d) Where the effect of blue vertical sub-permanent magnetism is equal to that of the vertical induction in the soft iron.

(e) Where the effect of blue vertical sub-permanent magnetism is greater than that of the vertical induction in the soft iron.

(f) Where the effect of blue vertical sub-permanent magnetism is less than that of the vertical induction in the soft iron.

89. Can the heeling error be compensated ? If so, state the means to be employed, and how the compensation may be effected.

90. Can the compensation of the heeling error be depended on in every latitude ? If not, state the reason.

91. Do the soft iron correctors used for compensating the co-efficient + D have any effect on the compass needle when the ship heels over, and if so, do they draw the needle towards the low or the high side of the ship, and do they counteract, or otherwise, the effect produced by the vertical induction in the soft iron; (a) in the Northern hemisphere, (b) in the Southern hemisphere; and what is the reason of this?

92. Given the heel, the direction of the ship's head by compass, and the heeling error observed, to find the approximate heeling error, with a greater or less given heel, and with the ship's head on some other named point of the compass, the ship's magnetic latitude being in both cases the same.

93. Describe any instrument to show the ship's heel (generally called a clinometer), and state how and where it should be fixed.

94. Should the Clinometer be observed when the ship is swung to determine the deviation when the ship is upright? If so, state the reason why.

95. Would you expect the Table of Deviations supplied by the compass adjuster from observations made in swinging the ship to remain good during the voyage, or would you expect the deviations to change? If so, state under what circumstances.

96. Is it desirable that a record of your observations for deviations should be kept as a guide for any subsequent voyage in case the ship should be in the same locality, or for further correction of the compass? If so, describe some suitable form for keeping such record.

97. Would you under any circumstances consider it a safe and proper procedure to place implicit confidence in your compasses, however skilfully they may have been adjusted? If not, what precautions is it your duty to take at all times?

APPENDIX M.

DEVIATION OF THE COMPASS.

(For Masters' Certificates for Home Trade Passenger Ships.)

[The Applicant must answer in writing, on paper given him by the Examiner, all the following questions, numbering his answers to correspond with the numbers of the questions.]

1. When taking a Meridian Altitude, how do you know when the sun is on the meridian; or, in other words, when it is noon?
2. How does the sun bear (true) when on the meridian of an observer in these latitudes (Home Trade Limits)?
3. What do you mean by deviation of the Compass, and how is it caused?
4. Having determined the deviation, how do you know when it is easterly, and when westerly?
5. Supposing the sun when on the meridian bore by your Compass_____ what would be the deviation of that Compass for the direction of the ship's head at the time, the variation given on the Chart being _____?
6. How could you find the deviation of your Compass when in port, or when sailing along a coast?
7. Name some suitable objects by which you could readily obtain the deviation of your Compass, when sailing along the coasts of the Channel you have been accustomed to use?
8. The bearing of two objects when in a line with each other was found on the Chart to be_____ magnetic, but when brought in a line on board they bore_____ by your Compass; required the deviation of your Compass for the direction of the ship's head at the time?
9. What means are there for checking the deviation of your Compass by night?
10. Supposing the North Star (Polaris) bore_____ by your Compass, what would be the deviation (approximately) of that Compass for the direction of the ship's head at the time, supposing the variation given on the Chart to be_____?
11. Do you expect the deviation to change? If so, state under what circumstances.
12. What is meant by variation of the Compass, and what is the cause of it?

APPENDIX N.

Particulars of Examination in Sumner's Method by Projection.

Candidates are required to compute their longitudes by chronometer worked with two assumed latitudes.

They are to mark off on the chart the two positions ascertained by the first altitude, and are then to connect them with a straight line, termed the line of position, or the line of equal altitude which will show the bearing of any land it may intersect.

They will then be required to correct the first line of position for the ship's change of station, in the interval between the two observations, to project the line of position corresponding to the second observation on the chart, showing by its intersection with the first line of position, as corrected for change of station, the position of the ship at the time of the second observation.

The longitudes corresponding to the two latitudes by the second observation are no longer furnished by the Examiners. The Candidates are consequently required to work out the whole of the problem for themselves (in place of the explanation recently required), and must be prepared to find the sun's true bearing by projection at the time of taking either the first or second observation; and when necessary, to produce the lines of positions on the chart in order to make them cut one another, should the position of the ship happen to be outside the parallels of the two assumed latitudes given in the question. Outline charts, extending from 46° to 49° and from 49° to 52° of latitude respectively, are furnished by the Board of Trade to the different Examiners for this purpose.

APPENDIX O.

EXAMINATION OF A MASTER OR MATE IN STEAM.

The regulations under which these examinations are conducted are printed at pages 26 to 28.

A Candidate for this examination is required to have a thorough grasp of the construction of the steam-engine and boiler, to enable him to understand the nature and importance of any defect which may be reported to him by the engineer, and work in harmony with the engineer in affording time and facilities for disconnexions, inspections, adjustments, and repairs.

To have a looking-on knowledge of what the principal repairs are which are needed in engines and boilers and pipes, and how these repairs are accomplished.

To be able to form an independent opinion as to a breakdown and the consequent propriety or impropriety of proceeding under steam with temporarily repaired or defective machinery. To understand how to estimate approximately the reduction of fuel required for reduced speed, and consequently to sanction such reduction of speed as may seem to him to be warranted by the report of the engineer, and to satisfy himself before leaving port that there is sufficient coal for the voyage.

To have an intelligent grasp of the general run of pipes and connexions in the engine-room, the marking of cocks, the opening and closing of cocks and valves, how mistakes of importance may be made in the confusion of an accident, and how best to guard against such mistakes.

To be capable of being left in charge of the feeding of a set of boilers, to understand the working of the water-gauge, and to be able to guard against being misled by false indications of the gauge-glass.

To understand about blowing down and surfacing, the reasons for doing so, and the danger which may result from the neglect of these under certain circumstances. A master or mate presenting himself for examination in steam must be understood to have made up for his want of practical experience by reading up about the steam-engine. He ought, therefore, to show that he has given his mind to intelligently understanding the rationale of the action of the steam-engine. Under this head he should, therefore, be able to state approximately the quantity of heat required in the formation of steam, the remarkable relation of "latent" heat to "sensible" heat, how much steam can be raised by the combustion of one pound of coal, what horse-power measure is, what indicated horse-power is, what is the action of the slide-valve, the course of the steam through the engine, and the advantage of working expansively, and how the expansive action is shown by the indicator diagram.

The Candidate has to answer in writing 16 out of 20 questions selected from the book of Elementary Questions.* Selections for this examination are given on the alphabetic sheet for "Steam." Generally, these answers are given by Candidates as learned by rote from a book; the Candidate should therefore be asked such viva voce questions as will necessitate his giving his answers in different words, so as to discover whether he has the root of the matter in him.

The principal part of the viva voce is the examination on board a steamer, preferably one with which he is unacquainted. He is told to look about and try to find out the run of the machinery without the assistance of any one; the Examiner to be in the engine-room to see that this independent examination is properly carried out. When the Candidate reports that he thinks he knows the whole arrangement of the machinery, the Examiner will then question him on the uses of the parts, get him to point out the different cylinders, pumps, valves, condenser, &c. He must show that he understands the run of the pipes in the bilges, not necessarily that he has gone over every one of them, but he ought to be directed to trace, at least, one important range of pipes, and to thoroughly satisfy the Examiner that he could be safely trusted to manipulate the valves or cocks in connection therewith. It will not often be practicable for the candidate to be asked to actually work engines under steam, but he must satisfy the Examiner that he knows how to do so, and that he is aware what precautions have to be taken in regard to water in the cylinder, &c. It is most important that a Candidate should show that, in the event of an accident depriving him of the assistance of engineers, he knows what to do to safely take his vessel to an anchorage, or to stop the engine and proceed under sail alone.

The examination of a mate in steam is the same as that of a master. The knowledge required has no reference to the mate's position. A mate may be examined, but such examination implies that the mate will one day be a master, when the possession of the knowledge will be an advantage to him in the discharge of his duties as master.

APPENDIX P.

SOUND SIGNALS.

1. The Examiners already understand that they are to be very careful (in examining all applicants for Certificates of Competency) to satisfy themselves that the applicants understand the Rule of the Road at Sea, and should decline to pass every applicant who does not understand it.

2. As a serious misapprehension, however, arises in cases in which Sound Signals are made by a steamer under way in thick weather, contrary to the express wording of Articles 12*a* and 19 of the Regulations, it is more than ever incumbent on Examiners not to pass any applicant unless the Examiner is satisfied that the applicant understands that the Signals named in Article 19 are purely optional, and are only allowed to be made in cases in which the weather is so clear that the ship making them has the other vessel in sight.

3. Any Master using these optional Sound Signals, even when the other vessel is in sight, does so in every case on his own responsibility; but if he uses them when the other vessel is not in sight, he commits a very serious act of disobedience to the Regulations, and must abide the consequence of his illegal act.

4. Applicants must be made to understand that the compulsory Sound Signal which must be made by a steamer under way in a fog is a prolonged blast under Article 12*a*, and no other Sound Signal.

5. In examining an applicant on the application of Articles 12 and 13, the Examiner should, by answers to questions, ascertain that the applicant understands that it is his duty to go at a moderate speed in fog, while, as regards Article 24, the Examiner should impress on the applicant that an "ordinary precaution" to be observed in the navigation of a steam-ship in a fog, is to get the way off his own vessel immediately he hears the Sound Signal of another steamer, and then he should go ahead very slowly, blowing the "prolonged blast" at intervals, and feeling his way until all danger of collision is passed.

APPENDIX T.

Form Vision, Colour Vision, and Colour Ignorance Tests.

The following are the Rules relating to the Form Vision and Colour Tests:—

(1) Examinations for Form Vision, Colour Vision, and Colour Ignorance are open to all persons serving or intending to serve in the Mercantile Marine, and all such persons are recommended to take the earliest opportunity of ascertaining by means of these examinations whether their vision is such as to qualify them for service in that profession.

(2) The examination consists of three parts:—

(a) Form Vision Test (see Note A).
(b) Colour Vision Test (see Note B).
(c) Colour Ignorance Test (see Note C).

No candidate will be examined in the Colour Vision Test until he has passed the Form Vision Test, or in the Colour Ignorance Test until he has passed the Colour Vision Test.

(3) Any person serving or intending to serve in the Mercantile Marine, if desirous of undergoing the Form Vision, Colour Vision, and Colour Ignorance Tests only, must make application to the Superintendent of a Mercantile Marine Office on the Form Exn. 2A, and must pay a fee of One Rupee.

This fee will be payable on each occasion upon which a candidate is examined in Form Vision and Colours only.

(4) Every candidate for a Certificate of Competency who is not already in possession of such a certificate will be required to pass the three tests mentioned in Rule (2) before he can proceed to the examination in Navigation and Seamanship for the certificate which he desires to obtain, even though he may have passed the tests on some previous occasion.

(5) Every candidate who is already in possession of a Certificate of Competency, and who desires to obtain a certificate of a higher grade, will be required to pass the three tests mentioned in Rule (2) before he can proceed to the examination in Navigation and Seamanship for the Certificate of a higher grade.

That is to say, no candidate will be permitted to proceed with the examination in Navigation and Seamanship for a higher certificate if he fails to pass the three tests.

(6) If a candidate fails to pass any of the three tests, a note of the fact of his having done so will be written across the face of the certificate which he already possesses before the certificate is returned to him.

(7) If a candidate who undergoes the Form Vision, Colour Vision, and Colour Ignorance Tests only [See Rule (3)] is in possession of a Certificate of Competency, he must hand in his certificate before the examination commences, and if he fails to pass any of the three tests, a statement of his failure will be written on the certificate before it is returned to him.

(8) Candidates who fail to pass the Form Vision Test or Colour Ignorance Test can be re-examined at intervals of three months, but candidates who fail to pass the Colour Vision Test cannot be re-examined. It is open, however, to any candidate who has failed to pass that test to appeal to the Government, who may, if they think fit, remit the case to a special examiner or body of examiners for final decision.

(9) The expenses of candidates who are examined by the special examiners, and are reported by them to have passed the three tests, will, under certain circumstances, be paid by the Government, at a rate which will be notified to the candidate; but no payment whatever will be made towards the expenses of candidates who upon their own application are examined by the special examiners and are reported by them to have failed. The special examinations will be held in Calcutta only.

(10) When a Candidate fails to pass the Colour Test, the examiner will point out to him the conditions under which he can appeal. Appeals are to be made through the examiner, and forwarded to the Government with the examiner's remarks.

(11) The holder of a certificate which bears on it a statement of failure in the first test (Form Vision) or in the third test (Colour Ignorance) can have the statement removed by passing after the prescribed interval the test to which it refers, but the instruction in the last paragraph of Rule (2) must be followed.

(12) The fee paid for examination for a Certificate of Competency includes the fee of One Rupee for examination in Form Vision, Colour Vision, and Colour Ignorance, and if the candidate fails to pass those tests, will, with the exception of One Rupee, be returned to him.

(13) Only examiners who have themselves passed the Colour Test are to undertake these examinations.

NOTE A.

Form Vision Test.

(1) The test for Form Vision is the first test which the candidate is required to undergo, and until he has passed this test he cannot be allowed to proceed further with the examination. (See Rule 2.) — Test for Form Vision to be passed first.

(2) The tests to be used are Snellen's Letter test for candidates who can read, and the "Dot" tests for those who cannot read. — Tests to be used.

The sets of tests which have been supplied to the examiners consist respectively of eight sheets of Snellen's letters and two sheets of dots.

(3) The chief object of the tests for Form Vision is to show whether the candidate possesses eyesight of sufficient strength and range, or in other words they are means of discovering whether the candidate has good or bad sight. — Object of the tests.

They also afford a means of detecting whether a candidate is suffering from that form of colour-blindness which is caused by the excessive use of tobacco, and by illness or similar affections. All candidates who are suffering from colour-blindness arising from causes of that nature will be found to be in capable of passing the tests for Form Vision.

(4) Candidates may use both eyes or either eye when being tested, but they must not be allowed to use spectacles or glasses of any kind. — General conduct of the tests.

The set of tests is to be hung on the wall, in a good light, at a height of about five or six feet from the ground.

(5) If the candidate can read, he should be placed at a distance of 16 feet from the Letter Test sheets, and exactly opposite them. The distance should be carefully measured, and the candidate should not be allowed to approach within 16 feet of the test sheets. — Conduct of the Letter Test.

One of the eight sheets of letters should then be exposed, and the candidate should be asked to read the letters, beginning at the top and going downwards. If he can read correctly three of the five letters in the fifth line from the top (third from the bottom), or four of the letters in either of the two lines below, he may be considered to have passed the test. If he cannot do so he should be treated as having failed. Candidates should be tested with at least two of the sheets of letters, and the same two sheets should not be used for all candidates.

Meaning of the numbers on the Letter Test sheets.

(6) The number printed over each row of letters shows the distance in feet at which a person possessing ordinary sight should be able to read the letters in the row.

Conduct of the Dot Test.

(7) If the candidate cannot read, he must be tested with the sheets of dots. For this test he is to be placed at a distance of precisely eight feet from the test sheets, and exactly opposite them. One of the sheets of dots is then to be exposed, and the candidate should be asked to name the number of dots in one or two of the lines of groups. Lines and groups of dots can be formed by holding a piece of white paper over part of the sheet, but care must be taken that when this is being done the candidate's view is not obstructed, or the light on the test sheet in any way obscured.

The examiner must make sure that the candidate understands what he is required to do.

If the candidate answers the questions put to him by the examiner with complete or very nearly complete accuracy, he should be treated as having passed. If he does not answer with very nearly complete accuracy, he should be treated as having failed.

Tests to be varied.

(8) The examiner must take care, by varying the tests in Form Vision, and by every other means, to guard against the possibility of any deception on the part of the candidates.

Result of tests to be reported.

(9) The result of every test in Form Vision is to be reported to the Government, on the Form Exn. 2, and to the Port Officer on the Form Exn. 14, when the candidate is up for examination for a Certificate of Competency, and to the Government on the Form Exn. 2*a*, when the candidate is up for examination in colours only.

All cases of failure to pass the test are also to be reported to the Port Officer on Form Exn. 17B.

NOTE B.

Colour Vision Test.

Nature of the tests.

(1) The Colour Vision of candidates is to be tested by means of Holmgren's wools.

The wools are always to be kept in the tins provided for the purpose, except when in use at an examination, in order that they may not become faded or dirty. Each set contains about 135 skeins of wool.

General instructions.

(2) Before the examination commences the skeins should be separated from one another, but each separate skein should be kept tied up as when first received.

The three test skeins are labelled respectively I. (light green), II*a*. (pink or light purple), and II*b*. (red), and they are always to be used in the order mentioned.

Care must be taken that the labels do not get detached.

The Colour Vision Test should be held only by daylight. If a good natural light is not obtainable and artificial light has to be used, the test must be postponed. When the weather is dark or foggy, and a candidate cannot be examined in colours before his examination in Navigation commences, he may be allowed to proceed with the examination in Navigation, provided he is examined in colours on the first available opportunity.*

Full instructions as to the conduct of the examination will be found on pages 10 to 21.

Course to be followed if incorrect selections are made by candidates.

(3) The examiner, as the examination proceeds, should carefully place on one side the skeins, the selection of which by the candidate seems to indicate a defect in Colour Vision, taking care to discriminate between those selected as matching the first test skein, those selected as matching the second test skein, and those selected as matching the third test skein.

The skeins, which have been correctly selected, should be returned to the general heap on the completion of each of the three tests.

Pieces of the wools incorrectly selected by a candidate who fails are to be sent to the Principal Examiner of Masters and Mates.

(4) In every case in which the examiner rejects a candidate, or is in doubt as to whether he should reject him or not, he is, when the examination is finished, to cut a small piece (say, an inch) off every one of the actual skeins incorrectly selected by the candidate, and to stitch the pieces cut off on to Form Exn. 17*c*, keeping the pieces cut off the skeins selected as matches to the first test skein in one line, the pieces cut off the skeins selected as matches to the second test skein in another line, and the pieces cut off the skeins selected as matches to the third test skein in a third line on the Form. The Form (Form Exn. 17*c*), with the pieces of wool attached to it, is then to be forwarded to the Port Officer, with the examiner's report, on Form Exn. 17B.

The greatest care must be taken that the pieces forwarded are cut off the actual skeins selected by the candidate, in order that there may be a reliable record of the actual selections made by the candidate if any question should subsequently arise.

Pieces need not be cut off the test skeins, but only off the skeins incorrectly selected by the candidate.

* When the examination in Navigation precedes the Colour Tests the candidates should be informed that the examination in Navigation will count for nothing if they should fail to pass the Colour Tests.

(5) In cases in which the candidate passes the test, pieces need not be cut off the skeins he has selected. If the candidate passes, pieces of the wools need not be cut off.

(6) When the candidate makes incorrect matches the examiner should, after each of the three tests, hold up the skeins selected, and ask the candidate if he is satisfied that they all match the test skein. If he is not satisfied he may be allowed to withdraw any of the skeins he pleases. Candidates should be given the opportunity of correcting their mistakes.

(7) During the test for colour-blindness the examiner should avoid naming the colours of any of the wools, and should explain to the candidate that he does not require them to be named to him. Candidates are not required to name the colours of the wools.

In the test for colour ignorance the candidate has to name three colours. (See Note C.)

(8) As soon as any skein becomes discoloured, or unduly reduced in size (say by one-third), owing to pieces having been cut off it, the matter should be reported to the Government. Course to be taken when the skeins of wool become reduced in size or discoloured.

(9) In the remarks which follow, reference is made to different kinds of colour-blindness (red-blindness and green-blindness), but the examiner is not required to form any conclusion as to the kind of colour-blindness from which the candidate suffers, and should not offer the candidate any opinion on this point. Examiners are not required to decide from what form of colour blindness an unsuccessful candidate is suffering.

All that is required is that the examiner shall conduct the examination according to the rules laid down, and from the wools selected judge whether the candidate is or is not colour-blind, the nature of his colour-blindness being immaterial.

(10) The result of every test should be reported to the Government on the Form Exn. 2, and to the Port Officer on the Form Exn. 14, when the candidate is up for examination for a Certificate of Competency, and to the Government on the Form Exn. 2*a*, when the candidate is up for examination in colours only. Result of tests to be reported.

All cases of failure should also be reported to the Port Officer on Form Exn. 17B, to which should be attached Form Exn. 17*c*, containing the pieces of the wools incorrectly selected by the candidate. (See paragraph 4.)

Holmgren's Method of Testing for Colour.

The method of testing consists in asking the candidate to select from variously coloured objects those which appear of the same colour as one which the examiner selects. The most suitable objects and at the same time the most readily obtainable are skeins of wool, which can be procured of almost every desired hue and tone. An advantage of skeins of wool, besides their portability, is that, owing to their want of gloss, they appear of approximately the same tone from whichever side they are viewed. The colours of the skeins to be selected include reds, oranges, yellows, yellowish-greens, pure greens, blue-greens, blues, violets, purples, pinks, browns, and greys. Several shades of each colour, with at least five gradations of each tint, are provided, from the deepest to the lightest greens and greys. Varieties of pinks, blues, and violets, and of light grey, together with shades of brown, yellow, red, and pink, are well represented. The test skeins with which the examinees are to compare the other skeins are three in number:—(1) a light green; (2) a pink or pale purple; and (3) a bright red. These three colours will suffice to indicate approximately the amount and kind of colour-blindness which may exist. The light green skein, which is a tolerably pure green mixed with a large proportion of white, is chosen as the colour which closely matches the spectrum colour which the red and green-blind distinguish as white or grey. It is chosen of a pale tint, as it then becomes puzzling to the colour-blind to distinguish its colour by luminosity. A light grey or drab skein will present the same brightness to him that this pale colour does, and although he may be trained to distinguish bright colours by their relative luminosities, in the case of these pale varieties he will be unable to do so. The pink or light purple is chosen for similar reasons, and in fact it is nearly a complementary colour to the green. The purple is, according to the Young-Helmholtz theory, a mixture of two fundamental colours, the blue and the red, and as in the green-blind it excites both the blue and red sensations, it may be confused with grey or with a green. In the red colour-blind it excites in excess the blue sensations mixed with what they call white. A blue or violet may therefore be matched with it.

Method of Examination and Diagnosis.

The wools are placed in a heap on a large table covered by a white cloth or white paper, and in broad daylight. The first test skein is taken from the pile, and l ar enough away from the others not to be confounded witl m during the examination. The person examined is requc to look carefully at the test skein and then to select other ns from the pile most nearly resembling it in colour, and to them by the side of the sample. At the outset, it is necessa at he should thoroughly understand that he is required to search the heap for the skeins which make an impression on his chromatic sense or sense of colour, similar to that made by the test-skein, and quite independently of any name he may give the colour. The examiner should explain that resemblance in every respect is not necessary; that there are no two specimens exactly alike; that the only question is the resemblance of the colour; and that, consequently, the candidate must endeavour to find something similar in shade and something lighter and something darker of the same colour. If the person examined cannot succeed in understanding this by a verbal explanation, resort must be had to action. The examiner should himself pick out the skeins, thereby showing in a practical manner what is meant by a shade, and then restore the whole to the pile, except the sample skein. As it would require too much time to examine every individual in this way, it is advisable, when examining large numbers, to instruct them all at once, and to ask them to attentively observe the examination of those preceding them so as to become more familiar themselves with the process. This saves time, and there is no loss of security, for no one with a defective chromatic sense will be able to find the correct skeins in the heap the more easily from having a moment before seen others looking for and arranging them. He will make the same characteristic mistakes; but the normal observer, on the other hand, will generally accomplish his task much better and more quickly after having seen how it has to be done.

The coloured plate shows the test colours and some of the mistakes likely to be made by colour-blind people. The colours in the plate are of two characters:

1st. The colours for samples (test colours); that is, those which the examiner presents to the persons examined; and

2nd. The "confusion colours"; that is to say, those which the colour-blind may select as matches with the sample.

The first are shown on the Plate as horizontal bands, and are distinguished by Roman numerals (I, II*a*, and II*b*), the second as vertical bands, under the test colours, and are distinguished by Arabic figures (1, 2, 3, &c.).

As to the similarity between the confusion colours of the Plate and the wools which the colour-blind take from the heap, reliance must be placed simply on the hue, and not on their brightness or degree of colour saturation. The confusion colours shown in the Plate are only to illustrate the mistakes which the colour-blind may make, and for this purpose they serve perfectly. Having made this explanation, we can pass directly to the test itself. The following are the directions for conducting it, and for making a diagnosis from the results:—

Test I.—The green test skein which is labelled Test No. I. in the bundle is exhibited to the candidate. This sample is the palest shade (the lightest) of very pure green, which is neither a yellow-green nor a blue-green to the normal eye, but fairly intermediate between the two, or at least not verging upon yellowish-green.

Rule.—The examination must continue until the examinee has placed near the test skein several other skeins of the same colour, or else, with these or separately, one or more skeins of the class of "confusion colours" such as 1 to 5 in the Plate, or until he has sufficiently proved that he can easily and unerringly distinguish the confusion colours, or else has given unmistakeable proof of a difficulty in accomplishing it.

Diagnosis.—An examinee who places with the test skein "confusion colours," such as 1 to 5—that is to say, finds that they resemble the "test colour"—is colour-blind, whilst if he evinces a manifest disposition to do so, though he does not absolutely do so, he has a feeble chromatic sense, or sense of colour.

Remark.—We might have taken more than five colours for "confusion"; but we must remember that we are not taking into consideration every kind of defective colour sense.

Test II.—The pink or light purple skein, which is labelled No. II*a*, is shown to the examinee. The colour is midway between the lightest and darkest. It only approaches that given as II*a* of the Plate, as the colour of the wool is much more brilliant and saturated and bluer.

Rule.—The trial must be continued until the examinee has placed all or the greater part of the skeins of the same colour near the test skein, or else, together or separately, several skeins of the "confusion colours," such as 6-9. If he is colour-blind he will probably select either the light or deep shades of blue and violet, especially the deep (6 and 7), or the light or deep shades of one kind of green or grey inclining to blue (8 and 9).

Test III.—The red skein labelled No. II*b* is presented to the examinee. It is necessary to have a vivid red colour, like the red flag used as signals on railways. The colour should be that of II*b* of the Plate, rather towards yellowish-red.

Rule.—This test should be continued until the person examined has placed beside the test skein the greater part of the skeins belonging to this hue, or else several "confusion colours" (10–13).

Remark.—Every case of comparatively complete colour-blindness does not always give precisely the same mistakes. Instances occur of persons who are not completely colour-blind, or of completely colour-blind persons who have been practised in the colours of signals, and who endeavour not to be discovered. They usually confound at least green and brown, but even this does not always happen.

Mono-chromatic Vision.—The absence of every colour sensation, except one, will be recognized by the confusion of all the hues, which will appear to be of the same intensity of light or brightness.

Dr. Joy Jeffries, in his book on colour-blindness, gives a translation of Holmgren's special directions for conducting the examinations. The examinations to which Holmgren refers were for employés on the Swedish railways, but the remarks which follow are applicable to examinations for officers and seamen in the Mercantile Marine.

Special Directions for Conducting the Test.

The method plays an important part in an examination of this kind, not only from the principles upon which it rests, but also from the manner in which it is used. The best plan for directing how to proceed is by oral instructions and de visu, but here we are obliged to accomplish this by description. Now, this is always defective in some respects, especially if we wish to be brief. What has been said would evidently suffice for an intelligent and experienced physician; but it may not be superfluous to enter still further into detail to provide against any possible difficulties and loss of time. The object of the examination is to discover the nature of a person's chromatic sense, or sense of colour. Now, as the fate of the candidate and that of others depend upon the correctness of the judgment pronounced by the examiner, and as this judgment should be based upon the manner in which the candidate stands the trial, it is of importance that this trial should be truly what it ought to be, a trial of the nature of the chromatic sense, and nothing else; an end that will be gained if our directions are strictly followed. It is not only necessary that the examiner should carefully observe them—which does not seem to us difficult—but that he also should take care that the individual examined does thoroughly what is required of him. This is not always as easy as one might suppose. If it were only required to examine people familiar with practical occupations and especially with colours, and with no other interest connected with the issue of the examination than to know whether they are colour-blind or not, the examination would be uniform and mechanical; but it is required to examine people of various degrees of culture, all of whom, besides, have a personal interest in the issue of the examination. Different people act very differently during the examination for many reasons. Some submit to it without the least suspicion of their defect; others are convinced that they possess a normal sense. A few only have a consciousness, or at least some suspicion, of their defect. These last can often be recognised before examination. They will keep behind the others, and attentively follow the progress of the trial, and, if allowed, will willingly remain to the last. Some are quick, others slow. The former approach unconcernedly and boldly, the latter with over anxiety and a certain dread. Some have been, perhaps, already tested and have practised in preparation for the trial; others have never been familiar with colours. Among those already tested some may be colour-blind. Some of these latter are uncertain about their Colour Vision, and act with great care, whilst others, again, having been practised in distinguishing signals, conclude that their colour sense is perfect. They make the trial quickly and without thought, of course regularly making the mistakes characteristic of their special form of colour-blindness.

The majority, however, desire to perform their task as well as possible, that is, to do what the normal-eyed does. This, of course assists in testing them, provided it does not lead to too great care, as then the testing is more difficult, the trouble being that much time is wasted.

Only a very small part have a contrary desire, namely, to pass for colour-blind, though normal eyed. We will speak of these later, and now only concern ourselves with those who stand the test in good faith with the desire to appear normal, though perhaps they are colour-blind.

The trial generally goes on rapidly and regularly. We will only mention those hindrances and peculiarities which most frequently occur. The examiner must watch that no mistake is made from not understanding. The names of the colour need never be used, except to ascertain if the name hides the subjective colour sensation, or to find the relation between the name the colour-blind employs and his colour perception.

The person examined who thinks more of names than the test itself (this being generally a sign of school learning) selects not only the wools of the same hues—that is, those of the same colour to his eye—but all which generally have the name of this colour; for instance, in the first test, I, not only the green like the sample, but all that are green; and with the second test, not only the purple (and what are generally called red), but all which look reddish, scarlet, cinnabar, or sealing-wax red. This is of no importance, for those who only do this have scarcely such defective chromatic sense as that with which we are concerned.

Under any circumstance it is better to correct the mistakes just mentioned, when arising from misunderstanding, and it is even necessary, in reference to the mistakes we explained might occur with the first test. It might be said that it was sufficient if the examined confounded the test colour with green only; that it was indifferent whether he distinguishes carefully between the various kinds of green. But, in fact, this is not so unimportant. We must give full weight as to whether the confusion arises from misunderstanding, or lack of practice with colours, or, finally, from a true chromatic defect. To include all that is green would render the test tedious and unpractical. In fact, no little judgment has been exercised in the selection of the very lightest shade of the green proposed as a test colour, for it is exactly what the colour-blind most readily confounds with the colours (1-5) of the Plate. If the examinee were allowed to depart from the narrow limits, every shade of green could be included, the result of which would be that he would prefer to select all the vivid shades, and thus avoid the dangerous ground where his defect would certainly be discovered. This is why it is necessary to oblige him to keep within certain limits, confining him to pure green specimens, and, for greater security, to recommend him to select especially the lightest shades ; for, if he keeps to the darker shades, as many try to do, he readily passes to other tones, and loses himself on foreign ground, to the great loss of time and of the certainty of the test. What we have just said of green applies also, of course, to purple. (Test II*a*.)

The principle of our method is to force the examinee to reveal, by an act of his own, the nature of his chromatic sense.

Now, as this act must be kept within certain limits, it is evident that the examiner must direct him to some extent. This may present, in certain cases, some difficulty, as he will not always be guided, and does either too much or too little. In both cases the examiner should use his influence, in order to save time and gain certainty, and this is usually very easily done. This intervention is, of course, intended to put the examinee in the true path, and is accomplished in many ways according to the case in point.

We will here mention some of the expedients we have found useful :—

(A) Interfering when the Candidate selects too many Colours.

It is not always easy to confine the candidate within the proper limits. In the first test he easily slips a yellow-green or blue-green skein among the others, and, as soon as there is one, others follow usually ; and it thus happens that in a few moments he has a whole handful of yellow-green, a second of blue-green, a third of both these shades at the same time. Our procedure has assisted us in more than one case of this kind.

(a) When the person examined has begun to select shades of one or several other colours than those of the sample, his ardour is arrested by taking from him the handful of skeins he has collected and asking him whether his eye does not tell him there are some which do not match the others, in which case he is told he may restore them to the pile. He then generally proceeds in one of the following manners :

1. He rejects, one after the other, the incorrect skeins, so that only the correct remain, which is often only the sample skein. He is shown what mistake he has made, and he is told only to select skeins of the same hue as the specimen, although they may be lighter or darker. If his first error arose only from a misconception or want of practice in handling colours, he begins generally to understand what he has to do, and to do properly what is required of him.

2. Or else he selects and rejects immediately the test skein itself. This proves that he sees the difference of colour. He is then shown the test skein as the only correct one, and is asked to repeat the trial in a more correct manner. He is again put on the right track as just before, and the trial proceeds rightly, unless the error arose from a defect in colour sense. Many seem, however, to experience a natural difficulty in distinguishing between yellow-green and blue-green, or the dull shades of green and blue. This difficulty is, however, more apparent than real, and is corrected usually by direct comparison. If the method requiring the name of the colour to be given is used, a number of mistakes may be the result. If a skein of light green and light blue alone are presented to him, and he is asked to name them, he will often call blue green and green blue. But, if in the first case, a blue skein is immediately shown him, he corrects his mistake by saying "this is blue" and "that green." In the last case the same thing happens mutatis mutandis. This is not the place for an explanation. It must suffice to say that the error is corrected by a direct comparison between the two colours.

(b) Another Process.—If the candidate place by the side of the sample a shade, for instance, of yellow-green, the examiner places near this another shade, in which there is more yellow, or even a pure yellow, remarking at the same time that if the first suit the last must also. The candidate usually dissents from this. He is then shown, by selecting and classing the intermediate shades, that there is a gradation, which will diverge widely if logically carried out as he has begun. The same course is followed with colours of the blue shades, if the blue-green were first selected. He sees the successive gradations, and goes through with this test perfectly if his chromatic sense is correct.

To ascertain further whether he notices the tints of yellow and blue in the green, we can ourselves take the yellow-green and blue-green and ask him if he sees any difference in colour between them. We can judge by his answer of his sense with regard to these shades, and the object of this investigation is accomplished.

It results from all this that many who are finally considered to have a normal chromatic sense may occasionally cause embarrassment. In the main, the normal observer of this kind causes greater loss of time than the colour-blind. It is astonishing to see with what rapidity the colour-blind betray their defect. At least it is found, in the majority of the cases examined by us, that the first skein of wool selected from the pile by the colour-blind in the first test was one of the "colours of confusion."

(B) Interfering when the Candidate selects too few Wools.

Those who evince too great slowness also require the interference of the examiner in another manner. We can lay aside here those cases in which, at the sight of the complex colours of the heap of wool, the candidate finds it difficult to select a skein resembling the sample in a collection where all the particular colours seem to differ from each other, and in consequence declares immediately that he can find none resembling the specimen. He is then told that an absolute resemblance is not demanded, and that no one asks impossibilities; that time is limited, many are waiting, &c. But there are people who—from natural slowness, from being unaccustomed to such business, from fear of making mistakes, especially if they have been previously examined and been suspected of colour-blindness, or from many other motives—proceed with the greatest caution. They do not even wish to touch the wool; or they search, select, and replace with the greatest care all the possible skeins without finding one corresponding with the sample, or that they wish to place beside it. Here, then, are two cases: on one hand, too much action with the fingers, without result; on the other, too little action. The examiner is forced to interfere in both cases.

(a) In the case of too much manual action, without corresponding practical result, the examiner must be careful that the eye and hand of the candidate act simultaneously for the accomplishment of the desired end.

Some people forget that the hands should be subservient to the eye in this trial, and not act independently. Thus they are often seen to fix their eyes on one side while their hands are engaged on the other. This should be corrected, so as to save time and avoid further labour. The candidate should be told to cross his hands behind his back, to step back a pace, and quietly consider all the skeins, and, as soon as his eye has met one of those for which he is looking, to extend his hand and take it. The best plan is to advise him to look first at the sample, and then at the pile, and to repeat this manœuvre until his eyes find what he is looking for.

This plan generally succeeds when nervousness from over anxiety causes his hands to tremble; but it is not always easy to induce him to keep his hands behind his back until the moment for taking the skein in question.

(b) In cases of great caution, the trial is hastened if the examiner come to the assistance of the candidate, by holding above the pile one skein after the other, and requesting him to say whether it resembles the colour of the sample or not.

In cases where any one suspected of colour-blindness has remained some time to see the trial of others, and where, as often happens, he has remarked the skeins belonging to a required shade, he may of course profit by it in his own trial. But this can be prevented by shuffling the skeins.

It may be regarded as an advantage of this method that it has at command a great variety of resources We have by no means mentioned all; and yet many who have only read this description will probably reproach us with having devoted ourselves too much to details which seems to them puerile. But we believe that those who have examined the colour sense of a great number of persons, and acquired thereby considerable experience, will think differently.

We are convinced that time is saved by the means we have described and a more certain result obtained; whilst a practised surgeon, who has become to a certain degree a virtuoso, will accomplish his object quicker and surer by such means than one who neglects them. Recent experience fully confirms this. All those who have familiarized themselves with this method, and have had experience with colour-blindness, and of whose competence there can be no doubt, report, without exception, that it is to be fully depended on—the most practical and the best.

An advantage of the method was shown to be that those who were to be examined could be present and see each individual tested, without this interfering in the least with the certainty of the result. The individual test is even hastened thereby. The colour-blind, and even the normal-eyed who are not familiar with colours, are generally rather shy about being tested, in whatever way it is done. As the method, however, is carried out, they have more confidence. The majority are even amused. The old adage holds true here, that it is easier to find fault than to do it yourself. The surgeon, who watches not only the examined, but also those around, can often see from their faces how closely the latter observe the person being tested, when he takes out the wrong colours, as also when he neglects the right ones under his eye. This gives those looking on confidence and assurance, till their turn comes, when they appear as uncertain as before they were confident. There is something attractive in the process, stimulating the interest, and not without benefit.

From this we see that our judgment of a person's colour sense is made, not only by the material result of the examination—the character of the wools selected—but often also by the way the examined acts during the test. We should mention a very common manner of persons on trial, which, in many cases, is of great value in diagnosis. Often, in searching for the right colour, they suddenly seize a skein to lay it with the sample, but then notice it does not correspond, and put it back in the heap. This is very characteristic; and if an examiner has often seen it, he can readily recognise and be assured that it is an expression of difficulty in distinguishing the differences in the colours. We frequently see this in the first test, with shades of greenish-blue and bluish-green. Here it means nothing important; but it is quite the reverse, however, when it concerns the grey or one of the confusion colours (1-5). Uncertainty and hesitation as to these colours, which the colour-blind do not distinguish from the test colour, even when directly comparing them, is positive proof of mistake, implying defective chromatic vision of the complete colour-blind type. No doubt the form of chromatic defect which we have called incomplete colour-blindness exists in several kinds and degrees. This is not the place to further discuss our experience on this point; and, for the practical purpose we have in view, it is not necessary. As we have explained, there are, among this class, forms of colour-blindness gradually approaching normal colour sense. How they are distinguished has been described. We designated them as possessing feeble colour sense.

It is, perhaps, not easy to detect these special forms by any other method, or even by our own; we therefore give the following as a means of so doing. The only way of getting at it is by determining at what distance the candidate can distinguish a small coloured surface. We have to deal, in fact, with a feeble colour sense, which does not prevent the colours from being distinguished, but only renders it difficult. We may suppose, in comparison to the normal that the feeble colour sense is due either to a weaker response to the stimulation of the colour-perceptive organs of the retina, or else to a stimulation of a relatively smaller number of these organs. In either case this method would give us the same result, judging from our experience in testing the eccentric portions of the field of vision with the perimeter.

The method we here speak of shows us also the effect of habit and practice on the colour perception, and it is worth while to dwell on this point. It not unfrequently happens that a person who by test No. I has been noted "incomplete colour-blind," after they know of their mistake and have practised themselves in distinguishing colours, will so comport themselves at a second trial that we have to simply mark them as of "feeble colour sense." The same will sometimes happen with test No. II, and it is explainable by what we have said, namely, that between the complete lack of some one colour sense and the incomplete there is a series of gradations, and that in such cases practice would affect the result of examinations.

All the examples given prove that many seeming trifles and plans are of value in making the examination—amongst others the keeping the sample a little way off from the heap of worsteds, as also the removal of everything which can cause the examined doubt and uncertainty. We must not therefore let them do what many want to do, namely, hold a number of the worsteds in the hand at once. We must make the person being examined place each skein, as he takes it up, either with the sample or else back on the heap. Many who are not clear whether the skein is like the sample or not, instinctively put the shades most resembling the test sample at the side of the heap towards it, and thus gradually form a little bridge, but which for correctness they will not vouch for. No such half measures must, however, be allowed.

NOTE C.

Colour Ignorance Test.

Object of test for colour ignorance.

(1) The object of this test is simply to ascertain whether the candidate knows the names of the three colours—red green, and white—which it is important of every seaman to be acquainted with, and the test is to be confined to naming those colours.

Manner in which the test is to be conducted.

(2) One or two of the purest red and green skeins should be selected from the set of wools, and the candidate should be required to name their colours. He should also be required to name the colour of any white object, such as a peice of white paper.

Grounds in which candidates should be treated as having passed or failed.

(3) If he answers correctly, he could be considered to have passed the test. If he makes any mistake, he should be tried with the lantern which was formerly used for colour test, the plain glass, and the standard red, and the green glasses being employed for the purpose. If he does not name these glasses correctly, he should be reported as having failed to pass the test.

Result of test to be reported.

(4) The result of every test should be reported to the Government on Form Exn. 2, and to the Port Officer on the Form. Exn. 14, when the candidate is up for examination for a Certificate of Competency, and to the Government on the Form Exn. 2*a*, when the candidate is up for examination in colours only.

All cases of failure should be reported to the Port Officer on Form Exn. 17*b*.

Correspondence with, and reports from, the Government of Bombay and Messrs. Thomas Cook & Son on the arrangements made by the latter in connection with the conveyance of pilgrims to and from the Hedjaz from 1888 to 1894.

RESOLUTION.

IN the Resolution of the 21st January 1886, cited above, it was stated that in October 1884 a communication had been received from Messrs. Thomas Cook & Son expressing the readiness of that firm to undertake the conveyance of Muhammadan pilgrims between India and the Hedjaz. The success which had attended the extensive schemes of Messrs. Cook & Son for lessening the difficulties and increasing the comfort of travellers in different parts of the world seemed to the Government of India to afford an assurance that that firm would be successful in placing the arrangements for the conveyance of pilgrims between this country and Arabia on a footing more satisfactory to the Government, and more convenient to the pilgrims themselves, than had hitherto been found possible. After carefully considering the matter in personal communication with Mr. J. M. Cook, the Governor-General in Council came to an agreement with the firm by which they were to be appointed pilgrim agents for the whole of India. Local officers and officers in charge of treasuries were instructed to assist the firm in making known the terms of through conveyance to Jeddah and back, and in disposing of through tickets; and the Government of Bombay were requested to make over to the representatives of the firm the issue of passports in Bombay after they had been signed by the proper authorities, and to instruct the Protector of Pilgrims to work in harmony with the firm and to render them every assistance. On their part Messrs. Cook & Son agreed to arrange with the railway administrations, steam-ship proprietors and others concerned for the conveyance of the pilgrims, at through fares, from all the chief stations in India to Jeddah and back, and to do all in their power to secure the transit of the pilgrims in satisfactory ships supplied with proper accommodation in accordance with the regulations laid down by the Government. The firm were prepared to provide the requisite agency for the work, Muhammadans being appointed for that purpose in all cases where necessary; to establish a special pilgrimage office in the most convenient position in Bombay, and possibly also at Jeddah; and to make all detailed arrangements in connection with the issue of the necessary announcements, forms of tickets, etc. They also expressed their readiness to comply with the requirements and regulations which might be laid down from time to time by the Government of India in the same manner as though they were in the service of the Government.

2. During the winter of 1886-87 Mr. F. H. Cook made a tour in India with the view of personally working out the details of the scheme in communication with the Government of India, and of explaining to the Muhammadan community what the firm proposed to do. In their Resolution of the 3rd May 1887, the Government of India announced the detailed arrangements which had been completed with Messrs. Cook & Son. These were to last for three years from the beginning of 1887 and to be terminable at the end of that period at the option of either the Government or Messrs. Cook & Son. In the event of the Government withdrawing after three years from the scheme, Messrs. Cook & Son were to be at liberty to continue it as a private enterprise. It was explained that, though the Government gave their countenance and assistance to Messrs. Cook & Son's enterprise, they had no desire to constitute a monopoly in favour of the firm. As, however, the firm engaged to convey pilgrims to Jeddah at a fair charge, to protect them while on the journey from extortion and ill-treatment, and to provide them with comforts and facilities in the way of supplies of food and banking arrangements, the Government were, it was stated, satisfied that pilgrims would do well to take advantage of the firm's arrangements. The prices of single and return steamship fares were fixed on the representation of Mr. F. H. Cook and the advice of the Government of Bombay. Tickets, inclusive of the railway and steamer fares, were to be kept for sale at the office of the Collector or Deputy Commissioner of every district in India, and district officers were instructed to give the widest publicity to the advantages to be secured which were set forth in a prospectus approved by the Government of India. A guarantee against actual loss in the execution of these arrangements, up to £2,000 for the first year and £1,000 for each of the two following years, was given by the Government of India, on the understanding that Messrs. Cook & Son should furnish their accounts for audit by the Accountant-General of Bombay.

3. The report of Messrs. Cook & Son on the arrangements carried out by them in connection with the Hajj of 1887 showed that, out of a total of 9,839 pilgrims, who sailed from ports in British India for Jeddah and Yembo, 1,936 (or 19·8 per cent.) were booked by the firm. The chief advantage which the pilgrims had secured was stated by the firm to be that of through booking at fixed rates, inclusive of landing and baggage charges. Messrs. Cook & Son were endeavouring to charter vessels themselves for future voyages in order to be able to furnish improved accommodation on board. The accounts of the firm showed a loss of £2,592, and the sum of £2,000 guaranteed by Government was accordingly paid to them.

4. On the 27th February 1888, Messrs. Cook & Son reported that they had chartered for the coming season four steamers from Bombay to Jeddah and two from Jeddah to Bombay. The dates of departure of these vessels were published in the Gazette of India, and the Local Governments and Administrations were requested to give every publicity to them. The report on the working of the arrangements during 1888 showed that 13,532 pilgrims left Bombay for the Hajj in 16 steamers, of whom 3,961 (or 29·3 per cent.) were conveyed by Messrs. Cook & Son in four steamers. A loss was incurred by the firm above the amount of the guarantee of £1,000, and the guaranteed sum was accordingly paid by Government. In his letter dated the 17th April 1889, Mr. J. M. Cook stated that, from the experience they had gained, Messrs. Cook & Son were convinced that it was quite impossible for them to convey the pilgrims in the way they were doing at existing rates for a profit, and that, unless the Government of India expressed satisfaction with, and appreciation of, the past working of the arrangements, they did not consider that they would be justified in incurring the great responsibility and personal labour involved. The Home Secretary's letter of the 18th October 1889 conveyed the reply of the Government of India to the effect that, after making enquiries from the Local Governments and Administrations, they were assured that the conditions under which Indian pilgrims could proceed to the Hedjaz had been materially improved, particularly in the reduction of opportunities for extortion, since Messrs. Cook & Son had undertaken the work, and that the Governor General in Council believed that this was not only the case in the ships by which pilgrims proceeded with the firm's tickets, but also that the example set on the vessels charted by the firm had raised the standard of comfort on the vessels belonging to other firms. The Government of India accordingly indicated their willingness to continue the arrangements with Messrs. Cook & Son for the years 1890 and 1891, with a guarantee against loss up to £1,000 in each year. Mr. J. M. Cook, the Managing Partner of the firm, when replying to this letter on the 9th December 1889, took exception to some of the criticisms contained in the reports of the local authorities, and stated that he would leave the decision as to the acceptance of a continuance of the arrangements for the years 1890 and 1891 to his son, Mr. F. H. Cook, who was then proceeding to India. On the 15th January 1890, the latter gentleman intimated that he had decided to continue the arrangements for at least the period of two years during which the Government had offered to continue its assistance.

5. The report on the working of the arrangements during 1889 showed that 11,544 pilgrims left Bombay for the Hajj, in 15 steamers, of whom 4,460 (or 38·6 per cent.) were conveyed in the four steamers chartered by Messrs. Cook & Son. The amount of compensation claimed by the firm was Rs. 3,266 on account of the losses sustained in connection with the pilgrim traffic to the Hedjaz in 1889, and Rs. 4,969 representing the losses incurred in previous years, which had not been covered by the guarantee. The former sum was paid to Messrs. Cook & Son, but the Government of India did not consider the firm to be entitled to the latter sum.

6. The report on the arrangements made in 1890 showed that of 9,953 pilgrims who left Bombay for the Hedjaz in eleven steamers, 4,220 (or 44⅓ per cent.) were conveyed in the four steamers chartered by Messrs. Cook & Son. The statement of account submitted by the firm showed a claim against the Government of Rs. 12,761-15-4, which sum included Rs. 6,272 on account of losses incurred in previous years. In Home Department letter dated the 25th August 1891, the Government of India sanctioned the payment of the sum of Rs. 6,489-13-10, being the amount of actual loss sustained during 1890.

7. On the 29th June 1891, the firm again addressed the Government of India regarding the question of continuing the arrangements. They expressed their conviction that the business of conveying pilgrims to the Hedjaz under the conditions proposed by them and accepted by the Government of India could never be made self-supporting, and enquired whether the Government was prepared to guarantee them against actual monetary loss. They stated that to enable the arrangements to be carried out in a satisfactory manner, it would be necessary to put on a special service of steamers to compete with the shippers who had been in the trade for many years, and that an increase in the amount guaranteed would be necessary. The Government of India were reluctant to withdraw from the scheme without a further trial of it, and expressed their willingness to continue existing arrangements for a further period of two years (1892 and 1893). This was eventually arranged on condition that the Government of India should pay to the firm the sum of Rs. 6,272 claimed as losses over the sums guaranteed in previous years, and should continue the indemnity and allow losses accruing to the firm in 1892 to be carried on to the accounts for 1893, provided that the total indemnity for those two years should not exceed £2,000. These terms were accepted by the firm in their letter dated the 21st April 1892.

8. The report of the arrangements for the year 1891 showed that out of a total of 12,032 pilgrims who left Bombay for the Hajj in 18 steamers, 4,485 (or 37·2 per cent.) were conveyed in four steamers chartered by Messrs. Cook & Son. The amount of compensation paid to the firm for the losses of the year was Rs. 14,471-8-5.

9. The report on the pilgrim traffic for the year 1892 showed that 12,466 pilgrims left Bombay for the Hedjaz in 19 steamers, and that only 2,939 (or 23·5 per cent.) were carried by Messrs. Cook & Son in three steamers chartered by them. In addition to these the firm conveyed 732 pilgrims in one steamer from Calcutta. The Government of India sanctioned the payment to the firm of the sum of £1,000 towards the loss of Rs. 36,147-2-9 (=£2,259-3-9) sustained by them during the year.

10. In a letter dated the 20th July 1893, Messrs. Cook and Son enquired what were the intentions of the Government of India as to any further continuation of the arrangements with the firm for the conveyance of pilgrims to the Hedjaz, and the Government of India consulted the Government of Bombay upon the matter. The report of the Government of Bombay showed that during the official year 1892-93 the number of pilgrims embarked from Bombay was 11,896, of whom only 1,656, or not quite 14 per cent., were booked by Messrs. Cook & Son. The Bombay Government considered that the influence of Messrs. Cook & Son on the working of the pilgrim traffic was diminishing, and were unable to recommend that the existing arrangements should be continued. The Government of India came reluctantly to the conclusion that they would not be justified, in view of the diminishing number of pilgrims carried through the agency of Messrs. Cook & Son, in continuing the subsidy to Messrs. Cook & Son after 1893. This decision was intimated to the firm and communicated to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

11. The report of Messrs. Cook & Son on the working of the arrangements during 1893 has now been received and considered by the Government of India, and the accounts for the year have been audited by the Accountant-General. The report shows that, in 1893, 18,468 pilgrims left Bombay for the Hedjaz in 29 steamers, but Messrs. Cook & Son only conveyed 1,767 (or 9·5 per cent.) in two steamers. These figures, it appears to the Government of India, are sufficient in themselves to justify the decision come to in October 1893 to terminate the arrangements with Messrs. Cook & Son. The accounts of the pilgrim traffic for that year show that the receipts to the firm from all sources amounted to Rs. 65,636-10, and the expenditure to Rs. 61-348-2-11. There was thus a net gain of Rs. 4,288-7-1 on the year. In pursuance of the conditions accepted by the firm in 1892, the Government of India have to make good the losses of the two years 1892 and 1893 together up to the limit of £2,000. The payment of Rs. 16,023-10-10 has accordingly been sanctioned. With the payment of this sum Messrs. Cook & Son will be recouped for all losses shown in their accounts and admitted on audit by the Accountant-General of Bombay, which have been incurred by the firm since 1887 in connection with their transactions for the conveyance of Indian pilgrims to and from Arabia.

12. In sanctioning the above payment the Governor-General in Council has thought fit to review the history of the arrangements, which were brought to a termination last year, between Messrs. Cook & Son and the Government of India. His Excellency in Council fully recognizes the good work done by the firm in improving the conditions under which Indian pilgrims during the last few years proceeded to the Hedjaz. Its influence has in his opinion been especially manifested in the reduction of the opportunities for extortion. The Governor-General in Council is aware that difficulties were encountered by Messrs. Cook & Son in the opposition of the shippers interested in the traffic, but His Excellency in Council was not without hope that the popularity of the vessels of so influential a firm would have been so great that in time the continuance of the arrangements would not have necessitated a guarantee. This hope has not been realized, and the reports for recent years show that the firm's vessels have lately been less popular as compared with those of other charterers than they were. In these circumstances the Governor-General in Council was forced to conclude that the experiment which had been fully and fairly tried was not likely to be more successful in future, and that the time had come for the discontinuance of the annual subsidy.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to all Local Governments and Administrations, to the Foreign and Financial Departments, and to Messrs. Thomas Cook and Son, Bombay, for information.

Ordered also that the Resolution be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India for general information.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h., 10h., 16h., and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

Explanation.—... indicates that no rain has fallen. If the return for any day has not been received, the corresponding space is left blank. If any of the returns are wanting, the corresponding spaces in the total rainfall columns are left blank. With reference to the column of rainy days, the definition of a rainy day is when at least 0·10 inch of rain has fallen.

CALCUTTA, the 19*th February* 1895.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING 8 A.M., SATURDAY, THE 16TH OF FEBRUARY 1895.

At the close of the previous week the north-east monsoon conditions were rather strongly pronounced in Bengal, and weather was decidedly cooler and drier than usual. On the 10th, or the first day of the week under review, pressure had risen slowly in Bengal, while a brisk to rapid increase of temperature had occurred, the increase in the mean temperature at many stations equalling from 3° to 5°, while humidity had also generally increased. On the 11th pressure had commenced to fall, but the increase in temperature and humidity continued. A very slight disturbance also which had been affecting the weather in Baluchistan and the frontier districts for some days had on the 11th passed eastwards across Northern and Central India, and was affecting the western districts of the province and the north-eastern districts of the Central Provinces, and a few rain showers were reported in Chota Nagpur and Bihar also on the 11th. On the 12th pressure had again fallen slightly to briskly over the province, and the feeble disturbance was apparently lying over Bengal, where skies were lightly to moderately clouded, and a few local showers were reported. On the 13th pressure had risen slowly to moderately, showing the disturbance was either slowly filling up or passing away, but still a considerable number of stations reported light rain, and skies were moderately clouded; temperature also was very high and considerably above the normal. On the 14th a brisk to rapid increase of pressure occurred over Bengal, and the disturbance completely passed away, so that skies again became almost cloudless and rainfall practically ceased, while a brisk fall of temperature and humidity also occurred on this day. On the 15th pressure again began to fall moderately in Bengal, though it was still in considerable excess, while temperature and humidity fell generally and fine settled weather prevailed. On the 16th or the last day of the week pressure had again fallen rather rapidly in Bengal, the usual fall equalling from 0·06″ to 0·08,″ and pressure became in small defect over the whole province. Temperature, on the other hand, was not very far removed from the normal, as slight excess amounts were registered at the northern stations and slight defects at the central and southern stations. Weather, however, continued generally fine and settled.

Pressure.—The average pressuref or the week has been not very far removed from the normal, and at the great majority of stations slight excess amounts, usually of a few thousandths of an inch only, have been registered. On the other hand, very slightly defective pressures have been generally registered in parts of Bihar and East Bengal.

Temperature.—The variations of temperature during the week have been rather large, but the average mean temperature has been in excess by 0·7°, the largest excess of 1·5° being registered in Bihar, while a normal temperature has been registered in South-West Bengal.

The actual temperatures registered during the week, and their variations from the normal temperature of the present season, are clearly seen in the table below, where the average maximum, minimum, and mean temperatures for the week at nine typical stations in different districts of the province are compared with the normal values for the same period. The variations, it will be seen, have been generally small in the day or maximum temperatures, though the night temperatures show rather a larger variation, moderate defects being shown at some stations and moderate excess amounts at others.

Rainfall.—The only division which has received any important rainfall is Orissa, which has averaged 0·86 inch. In South-West Bengal, East Bengal and Chota Nagpur also a few local falls have been received, but they have been of no practical importance.

RULES FOR THE APPOINTMENT OF SUB-INSPECTORS OF POLICE.

THE next divisional examination of candidates to fill vacancies in the rank of Sub-Inspector of Police will be held on the 22nd and 23rd July 1895, at the following centres:—at Calcutta for the Presidency, Rajshahi, and Burdwan Divisions; at Bankipore for the Patna, Bhagalpur, and Chota Nagpur Divisions; at Dacca for the Dacca and Chittagong Divisions; and at Cuttack for the Orissa Division. The following classes of candidates will be admissible to the examination:—

(a) Persons who have passed the Entrance Examination of the Calcutta University, provided they are not less than 21 nor more than 25 years of age.

(b) Persons now serving as head-constables and writer-constables in the police, who have obtained the permission of the District Magistrate to appear at the examination, provided that they are not more than 30 years of age, and are of not less than two years' standing in the Department. This permission will only be given to persons who satisfy the conditions laid down in Rule 2.

2. No person will be deemed qualified who does not satisfy the following conditions:—

I.—That he has no disease, constitutional affection or bodily infirmity unfitting him, or likely to unfit him, for police duties, and that he is up to the physical standard prescribed for the area in which he wishes to serve.

NOTE.—"Stuttering or stammering" is a constitutional defect, and represents a physical disqualification.

II.—That he is of good moral character.

III.—That he belongs to a respectable family.

IV.—That he produces a certificate of ability to ride signed by a district officer.

3. Applications for permission to appear at the examination must be submitted, not later than one month before the date fixed, to the Magistrate of the district in which the candidate resides, stating the place at which he desires to appear for examination. Each application from class (a) candidates must be accompanied by a fee of Rs. 5. All candidates will be required to satisfy the conditions specified in Rule 2 above. The certificate of health should be signed either by the Civil Surgeon of the district in which the candidate ordinarily resides, or in Calcutta by one of the Professors of the Calcutta Medical College. Forms of application are available in the offices of District Superintendents of Police.

The Magistrate should require a personal identification of each candidate by some known person, whose name should be recorded, and satisfy himself that the certificates of respectability and moral character refer to the individual applying for permission to appear at the examination, and send him to the District Superintendent for certificate as to physical fitness. This certificate should contain the applicant's descriptive roll, thumb impression, signature and address for purposes of identification. The District Superintendent will then obtain a health certificate, the fee for which will in all cases be Rs. 4 from the Civil Surgeon, and send it, together with the certificate of physical fitness, to the Magistrate, who will, after subjecting the candidate to an examination in riding and noting the fact, grant a written permission to appear at the examination.

As these certificates form the verification rolls of candidates, they should be very carefully examined and enquiries made when necessary.

The above papers with the examination fee will be forwarded without delay by the Magistrate of the district in which the candidate resides to the Magistrate of the centre at which the candidate wishes to be examined.

The Examination Committee before the examination will compare the descriptions, thumb impressions, duplicate impressions being taken for the purpose, if necessary, and signatures, and satisfy itself about the identity of the person appearing.

At the examination the candidate will be required to sign the papers in every subject, writing his father's name and his own address on them to avoid confusion arising out of a similarity of names.

After the result of the examination is known, the certificates of passed candidates will be forwarded to the Inspector-General's Office, and will then be treated as verification rolls.

The certificates of unsuccessful candidates will be returned if asked for within two months or destroyed at the end of that period.

4. The subjects of examination will be as follows:—

I.—Dictation, letter-drafting, précis-writing, and a short translation from Bengali, Uriya or Hindi into English. Europeans and Eurasians will be allowed to choose one out of these three languages to be examined in. No candidate failing to obtain half-marks in this paper will be considered qualified for appointment.

II.—Paper on general knowledge. The questions will be set so as to test the general information and intelligence of candidates.

III.—Mathematics, including arithmetic and algebra, and account-keeping.

IV.—Law, including the Penal Code, the Criminal Procedure Code, and the Evidence Act.

N.B.—Class (b) candidates will be exempted from passing in algebra.

2.	General knowledge	...	...	... 200
3.	Mathematics	...	...	... 200
4.	Law	...	...	... 200

6. The number of candidates to be selected by the Examiners for each Range will be notified in the Calcutta Gazette on or before the 19th June 1895. This number will be determined by the Inspector-General of Police with reference to the number of vacancies existing or estimated as likely to occur within the course of the following year.

7. After the results of the examination have been ascertained, a list will be prepared for each Division of the candidates selected for appointment during the year. Those who have not obtained half-marks in dictation and language, and one-third marks in the aggregate of the remaining papers, may be struck out as ineligible for appointment. Of the remaining candidates a list will then be composed as follows—(a) one-half of the candidates who stand highest on the list in order of merit; (b) one-half of candidates selected from among those candidates who have obtained not less than one-third of the marks. At least two-thirds of the appointments will, if qualified candidates are available, be given to outsiders.

No. 524G., dated Calcutta, the 20th February 1895.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Public Works Department.

Engineer Establishment. Revised cadre numbers for 1895 for regulating promotions of Executive and Assistant Engineers.

READ—

Public Works Department Resolution No. 2523G., dated the 28th September 1893.

OBSERVATIONS.—In paragraph 9 of the Resolution read above, the Government of India published a series of cadre numbers and limiting scales for the promotion of Executive and Assistant Engineers attached to the several lists; and decided that these cadre numbers and scales should take effect from the 16th August 1893, and should, subject to reconsideration, under certain circumstances which were explained, regulate the promotions on each list up to the end of 1894. Under this proviso the cadre number and limiting scale of the lists shown in the margin were revised during the year.

Railway.
Bengal.
Punjab, and Local Administrations.

RESOLUTION.—The Governor-General in Council is now pleased to fix the cadre numbers and limiting scales of the several lists for the year 1895, or, pending further orders, as below—

LISTS.	Cadre number for 1895.	LIMITING SCALE.
		Exe. Engineers.			Asst. Engineers.
		1	2	3	1	2	3
Madras	72	18	11	7	14	11	11
Bombay	78	19	12	8	16	11	12
Bengal	52	13	8	5	10	8	8
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	86	21	13	9	17	13	13
Punjab	109	27	17	10	22	17	16
Local Administrations	120	30	18	12	24	18	18
Railways	194	48	30	19	39	29	29

2. The following rule is also laid down for regulating temporary promotions to the 3rd grade of Executive Engineers under the above scales; namely, that no more promotions of that class shall be made than suffice to bring up the total strength of Executive Engineers present on duty to half the actual strength charged against the above limiting scales, or to the number of posts, in the sanctioned scale of each list, allotted for Executive Engineers, as shown in the margin, whichever of these two numbers is the greater.

Madras	31
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	34
Local Administrations ...	54

This rule is not intended to prevent the promotion of officers to officiate as Executive Engineers for those absent on privilege leave or deputation, when necessary.

Nor will it be enforced in cases where it would operate to prevent the promotion of men qualified for promotion to Executive Engineer, 3rd grade, under the time rule. In such cases promotions may be made up to the full number allowed by the limiting scale.

In cases where temporary promotions made up to the end of 1894 are in excess of those allowed by this rule, no further promotions should be made until the temporary scale is adjusted in accordance with the rule; but officers already promoted will not be reverted in consequence of the rule.

ORDER.—Ordered that the above Resolution be circulated to the Local Governments and Administrations and Officers noted on the margin for information and guidance, and that it be published in Part I of the Gazette of India.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third Publication.]

GORDON LEITH,
Assistant Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.
Legislative Department.

No. III OF 1895.

A draft Bill to provide for the segregation of pauper lepers, and the control of lepers exercising certain trades.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the segregation of pauper lepers: and to regulate the exercise by lepers of certain trades or callings: It is enacted as follows:—

Preamble.

1. This Act may be called "the Lepers Act, 1895." It shall come into force from the date on which it may be published in the Calcutta Gazette with the assent of the Governor-General.

Short title. Commencement.

"Leper."

"Pauper leper" means a leper (a) who has in a public place solicited alms, exposed or exhibited any sores, wounds, bodily ailment or deformity with the object of exciting charity, or of obtaining alms, or (b) who is at large without any ostensible means of subsistence.

"Pauper leper."

3. The Local Government may, from time to time, by notification published in the Calcutta Gazette, declare any place to be a leper asylum, and may define the local areas from which lepers may be sent to such asylum, and may alter or cancel such notification.

Local Government may create leper asylums.

4 (1). Notwithstanding anything in any enactment with respect to the purposes to which the funds or other property of a local authority may be applied, any Council, Board, Committee, Corporation or other body having authority over such local fund may—

Power of local authorities to expend funds and appropriate property to asylums.

(a) Establish or maintain, or establish and maintain, or contribute towards the cost of the establishment or maintenance, or the establishment and maintenance of a leper asylum.

(b) With the previous sanction of the Local Government and subject to such condition as that Government may prescribe, appropriate any immovable property vested in such body, and either retain and apply it or transfer it by way of gift or otherwise, as a site for, or for use as, a leper asylum.

(2). Any money placed by any enactment for the time being in force at the disposal of a Local Government for the purpose of the establishment or maintenance of hospitals, dispensaries, lunatic asylums or other institutions for affording medical relief, may, notwithstanding anything in such enactment, be applied to all or any of the purposes mentioned in sub-section (1), clause (a).

Appointment of Inspectors of Lepers and Superintendents of Asylums.

5. The Local Government may appoint any Medical Officer, either by name or by virtue of his office, to be an Inspector of Lepers and any person to be a Superintendent of a Leper Asylum, with such establishment as may be necessary, and such persons shall be deemed to be public servants within the meaning of section twenty-one of the Indian Penal Code.

Appointment of Board.

6. The Local Government shall appoint for every leper asylum a Board consisting of not less than three members, one of whom at least shall be a medical officer.

Arrest of pauper lepers.

7. Within any local area which has been notified under section three of this Act, any police officer may arrest without a warrant any person who appears to him to be a pauper leper.

Person arrested how to be dealt with.

8. Any person so arrested as a pauper leper shall forthwith be taken before an Inspector of Lepers, who,

(a) if he finds that such person is not a leper, within the meaning of section two, shall give to him a certificate in the form (A) provided in the schedule, and he shall forthwith be discharged;

(b) if he finds that such person is a leper, within the meaning of section two, shall give to the person in whose custody the leper is a certificate in the form (B) provided in the schedule, and the leper shall, without unnecessary delay, and within twenty-four hours, exclusive of the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Inspector of Lepers, and thence to the Magistrate's Court, be taken before a Magistrate having jurisdiction under this Act.

Procedure with regard to pauper lepers.

9. When it appears to any Magistrate, authorized in this behalf by the Local Government, upon the certificate in writing, in the form (B) provided in the schedule, of an Inspector of Lepers, that any person is a leper; and if it further appears to such Magistrate that such person is a pauper leper, he shall, after recording the evidence and his order thereon, send such pauper leper in charge of a police officer together with an order, in writing, in the form (C) provided in the schedule, signed by him and bearing the seal of the Court, to a leper asylum, where such pauper leper shall be detained until discharged by order of the Board.

Inspection by Board.

10. Two or more members of the Board, one of whom shall be a medical officer, shall, once at least in every month, together inspect the leper asylum for which they are appointed, and see and examine, as far as circumstances will permit, every pauper leper therein, and the order for the admission of every pauper leper admitted since the last visit of the Board, and shall enter in a book to be kept for the purpose any remarks which they may deem proper in regard to the management and condition of the asylum and the pauper lepers therein.

Order of discharge by Board.

11. It shall be lawful for three members of the Board of any leper asylum, of whom one shall be a medical officer, at any time, by an order in writing, in the form (D) provided in the schedule, signed by them, to direct the discharge of a pauper leper from a leper asylum.

Power of Commissioners to make bye-laws with regard to lepers.

12. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners of any Municipality at a meeting, from time to time, to make, repeal and alter bye-laws, subject to the confirmation of the Local Government, prohibiting any person who is reasonably believed to be a leper from carrying on any specified trade or calling within the limits of, or any specified limits within, the Municipality, unless and until he has obtained from an Inspector of Lepers a certificate in the form (A) provided in the schedule. On conviction before a Magistrate of a breach of such bye-law, a fine may be inflicted not exceeding rupees twenty, and a fine of rupees ten for each day during which the offence is continued after conviction for such offence. The provisions of the Act under which the Commissioners are appointed and elected relating to bye-laws shall apply to any bye-law made and confirmed under this Act.

Power of Inspector of Lepers to inspect suspected persons.

13. It shall be lawful for an Inspector of Lepers to require any person, whom he has reason to believe to be a pauper leper, or a leper carrying on any trade or calling within a municipality which a leper is prohibited from carrying on, to afford him reasonable opportunity of satisfying himself whether such person is a leper or not, and he shall be legally bound to afford an Inspector of Lepers such opportunity.

Appeals.

14. Any person other than a pauper leper, in respect of whom an Inspector of Lepers has issued a certificate in the form (B) provided in the schedule declaring him to be a leper, or has refused to issue a certificate in the form (A) provided in the schedule, may appeal to such officer as may be appointed by the Local Government to hear such appeals, and the decision of such officer shall be final.

Power of the Local Government to make rules.

15. It shall be lawful for the Local Government from time to time to make, repeal and alter rules which shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette, (a) for the guidance of all or any of the officers discharging any duty under this Act, (b) for the management of and maintenance of discipline in a leper asylum, and (c) generally for carrying out the purposes of this Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE expediency of segregating pauper lepers under proper safeguards, and of forbidding lepers generally from exercising certain trades and callings connected with human food, drink, and clothing, was urged by the Leprosy Commission which visited India in 1890-91. Experience in Bombay having shown that these recommendations can be successfully carried into effect, the accompanying Bill has been prepared to legalise the introduction of similar measures in Bengal.

2. The Bill defines as "lepers" persons suffering from the disease of leprosy, in whom the process of ulceration has commenced, and as "pauper lepers" those lepers who have no ostensible means of subsistence, and who have solicited public charity. Next it deals with the arrest, examination, segregation in a properly constituted leper asylum, and discharge of pauper lepers who have been certified to be such by duly qualified authorities: it also enables local bodies to assist in providing for the maintenance and medical treatment of pauper lepers while so secluded. Lastly, it treats of the restraints to be placed on lepers who are not paupers, and enables the Commissioners of a Municipality, with the sanction of Government, to make rules and bye-laws under the Act by which it is constituted, forbidding lepers to engage in certain specified trades and occupations of the character above described.

J. A. BOURDILLON.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

We, the undersigned members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the Public Demands Recovery Act, 1880, was referred, have considered the Bill and papers subsequently received, and beg to submit the following report:—

2. As the Bill purports to repeal the Acts of 1880 and 1891, the title of the original Bill, which indicated only the amendment of the Act of 1880, has been altered so as to show that the Bill deals with the amendment of the whole law relating to the Recovery of Public Demands.

3. In section 1, sub-section (2) of the Bill, we have excluded the district of Angul from its operation. A recent Regulation (I of 1894) contains a special procedure for the Recovery of Public Demands in that district.

4. Proceedings under Act VII (B.C.) of 1880 have been mainly carried out, under the general control of the District Collector, by an officer specially appointed for the purpose of performing the functions of a Collector. No little confusion has arisen from this nomenclature, and the specially appointed officer has in practice been designated the Certificate Officer. It has been thought desirable now to make the law conform with the practice. The two terms, District Collector and Certificate Officer have therefore been defined in section 4. It is intended that a District Collector should be able to exercise the powers of a Certificate Officer when he desires to do so: and that a District Officer should be able to appoint Certificate Officers with the sanction of the Commissioner without referring to Government. A Sub divisional Officer will ex-officio be a Certificate Officer. In sections 18, 19 and 24 of the Bill powers of control are reserved to the District Collector: but in all other places the words "Certificate Officer" have been substituted for "Collector." We have also defined the term Local Authority (taken from the General Clauses Act, 1 of 1887) for the purposes of section 7, clause (g) of the Bill.

5. Section 6, sub-section (2) has been changed to make it as far as possible like section 15 of the Bill. The period within which a civil suit must be brought has been reduced from a year to six months in both of these sections. But we have decided to leave untouched the substantial difference of procedure (viz., payment of the demand before a suit can be brought) applicable to demands under section 5 as compared to those under section 7.

6. In section 7, sub-section (c), it has been considered unnecessary to set out the sections of other laws to which this sub-section of this Bill applies. With the single exception of the Zamindari Dâk cess, the demands under the Bengal Council Acts enumerated are in each case recoverable under Act VII (B.C.) of 1868, and are not made more easily recoverable by being enumerated here. The demands under the Acts of the Governor General in Council mentioned are recoverable under sub-section (a) of this section.

In the proviso to sub-section (f) the language of Act VII (B.C.) of 1880 has been restored, as it is difficult to ensure that the laws quoted in this proviso in the original Bill are quoted exhaustively.

In sub-section (g) the words "or any local authority" have been introduced to provide (for instance) for the recovery of demands on account of pounds leased out by a local authority. These are unquestionably public demands, though not due to Government direct. Towards the end of section 7 it has been made legal to include in the same certificate of arrears of demand any interest which may be chargeable, to obviate the necessity hitherto experienced of filing another certificate for the interest.

7. In section 11 we have considered whether the provisions of section 256 of the Code of Civil Procedure should not be introduced, but have thought it unnecessary to do so, as the present law gives sufficient power for attaching moveable property when really required. It has been thought that the Certificate Officer should record his reasons for being satisfied that action under this section is necessary before he directs an attachment of moveable property.

8. In section 12, sub-section (2), we have provided for verification of the petition of objection in accordance with the Code of Civil Procedure, to discourage frivolous objections, and if necessary make the petitioner liable to the consequences attaching to incorrect verifications. Similarly, to discourage objections filed for the purpose of gaining time, &c., it has been made lawful for a Certificate Officer to require a deposit before entertaining a petition of objection: but this is not considered necessary when full payment of the demand is alleged in a legally verified petition.

9. The idea of referring hard cases to a Civil Court, which found place in the proviso to section 13, sub-section (2) of the original Bill, has been maintained in the corresponding provision of this Bill, but it is considered necessary to limit to six months the period within which the opportunity of bringing a suit may be taken.

10. We have in section 15 allowed the judgment-debtor the option, which he already possesses under section 6, sub-section (2), of filing a suit in the Civil Court without first filing a petition of objection.

11. Provision has been made in section 16 for a certificate becoming absolute, if no suit is brought under section 13, sub-section (2) [as in the case of a suit not being brought under section 15 of the Bill].

12. We have thought it reasonable and proper that the Civil Court, besides having power to cancel a certificate on certain grounds, should have power to modify it on certain other grounds; that is, if it was never wholly due, or if part has been paid but not credited. Section 17 has been amplified accordingly.

13. In section 18 power has been reserved to a District Collector to retransfer petitions to the Certificate Officer. It may be useful, as a matter of convenience, for a District Collector to have such power, though he may not often require to use it.

14. Section 19, sub-section (1) is meant to provide clearly that an appeal may be made from an original order of the District Collector to the Commissioner. Section 19, sub-section (2), has been enlarged by the transfer to it of the latter portion of section 31 of the original Bill. It appears necessary in section 19, sub-section (2), to empower the officers specified to exercise appellate powers under the circumstances and to the extent indicated. As this is the appropriate place for such a provision, it is unnecessary to repeat the substance of it in section 32 of this Bill.

15. In sections 18, 19, 20, 24, 31 and 32 the words "Extra Assistant Commissioner" have been struck out, as no such officers are to be found or are likely to be appointed in Bengal.

16. In section 21, sub-section (1), clause (b), we have provided that the penalty shall in no case be less than a rupee. We have also introduced some words into sub-section (2) to show that the cancelment of a certificate and annulment of a sale are to be at the discretion of the Certificate Officer. In the event of annulment, any money paid or deposited by the purchaser on account of the purchase is to be paid back to him.

We have great doubts of the advisability of retaining any portion of section 21 of this Bill. It was introduced at the instance of the High Court in 1891, but in a modified form, owing to the suggestions of the Board of Revenue approved by the Local Government. Since that time, however, section 310A has been introduced into Chapter XIX of the Civil Procedure Code by Act V of 1894. It is open to question whether the provisions of section 310A, Code of Civil Procedure, would not override any modifications thereof introduced into the present Bill.

17. In section 23 it has been proposed, in the reports received, to enumerate every section of Chapters XIX and XX of the Code of Civil Procedure that might possibly apply. The object of the proposals has been to meet the difficulty which arose in the case of Sadhusuran Singh vs. Panchdeo Lal, I. L. R. 14, Cal. 1, decided by the High Court in April, 1886. We have thought it preferable to provide that the whole of the procedure prescribed in these two Chapters, so far as it is applicable, shall be followed in execution proceedings to enforce certificates and realize amounts recoverable.

18. In section 26 we have provided that the Register of Certificates kept in a Collector's office shall be open for inspection during office hours for not less than two hours daily, leaving it to the Collector to fix the two hours.

19. In section 33 we have taken advantage of the latest provision of law regarding the service of notices by introducing section 45 of Act I of 1894 mutatis mutandis. This provides for personal service, substituted service, and alternative service by registered letter. We are not prepared to go further than this recent enactment, and make service by registered letter compulsory in every case in addition to other service.

NOTE OF DISSENT.

1. Section 7, clause (f).—I am of opinion that in the case of claims falling under this clause, the wholesome restrictions now imposed by executive order should be embodied in the law itself by adding a proviso to the effect that the certificate procedure shall not be employed for the realisation of demands due to these estates until after they have been subjected to proper survey and settlement, and that no certificate shall issue in any case where a question of right or title is involved.

2. Section 10.—I think a notice ought to be served on the debtor before and not after a certificate is filed, and such notice should call upon him to pay the amount claimed or to show cause why a certificate should not be filed against him.

3. Section 19, sub-section (2).—Although it is not very likely that a Collector would transfer to any Certificate Officer any appeal from his own order, still I think it would be better to guard against any possible error by adding the following words at the end of the sub-section:—"Other than the officer against whose order such appeal is preferred."

4. Section 33.—Service of notice by peons being extremely unsatisfactory, I think in every case where the judgment-debtor has not been personally served, the notice should be sent to him by registered post.

Certain provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure to apply to the inquiry.

14. (1) The Certificate Officer shall have full power to direct that the costs or any part of the costs of such petition and of the hearing thereof shall be paid by the petitioner, or if his finding is in favour of the petitioner, then by the Secretary of State for India in Council or the Court of Wards, as the case may be.

Judgment-debtor may bring a suit in the Civil Court to contest the certificate.

Provided that no such suit shall be entertained if such judgment-debtor has omitted to state in his petition of objection, if any, the ground upon which he claims to have such certificate cancelled or modified, and cannot satisfy the Civil Court that there was good reason for such omission.

16. When no suit is instituted by the judgment-debtor within the period specified in section thirteen or section fifteen, or if any such suit having been instituted is finally decided against such judgment-debtor, such certificate shall become absolute, and shall have to all intents and purposes the same force and effect as a final decree of a Civil Court.

CALCUTTA ;
The 25th February, 1895.

GORDON LEITH,
Assistant Secretary to Govt. of Bengal,
Legislative Department.

The following Report of the Select Committee, together with the Bill as amended by them, is, by order of the President, published for general information:—

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

WE the undersigned being the Select Committee appointed to report on the Bill to facilitate the construction of drainage works for improving the sanitary condition of local areas beg to submit the following report:—

PART I.

We have altered section 1 so as to exclude all municipalities from the operation of the Act. We have done so, because the new sections 37A to 37K of the Municipal Act [IV of 1894 (B.C.)] empower municipalities to take action in cases of obstructed drainage, and also provide the machinery for conducting such operations beyond municipal limits in conjunction with District Boards. We consider that it would only create confusion if two Acts covered the same ground, and we have therefore excluded all municipalities from the provisions of the Act. We believe that in all cases in which drainage within municipalities has become obstructed the first steps are likely to be taken by Municipalities, and the procedure will then fall under the provisions of the Municipal Act and not of this Act.

2. In section 2(1) we have omitted the words "revenue or," as under the Bengal Tenancy Act all payments by raiyats to Government are now reckoned as rent.

3. In clause (8) of the same section we have restricted the jurisdiction of Collectors to their own districts. The definition in the Bill, as introduced into Council, was taken from the Drainage Act. We hold that, for the purposes of the Act, it is better that each Collector should deal with the land in his own district.

4. We have made a verbal alteration in clause (9) of the same section in order to bring this definition into agreement with the changes made in section 3 of the Bill.

5. We have altered section 3 so as to make it clear that no general drainage of the marshy lands and rice fields of the country is contemplated, and have made it clear that the Act is to be applied only in cases where the drainage has been deteriorated by obstructions, and the sanitary condition of the local area has been affected by such deterioration.

The change made will, we believe, remove many of the objections which have been brought against the original Bill.

We have also given the power of initiating proceedings under the Act to the District Board as representing the people affected. We have provided that not less than half the number of Commissioners shall be members of the District or Local Boards, and that these members shall be elected by the District Board. Looking at the representative character of many District Boards, we think that they may be fairly held to represent public opinion, so far as regards the initial steps to be taken under the Act. We also consider that as the initiative is now left to them, and as they are made responsible for the cost of survey, &c., in the event of the scheme not being carried out (section 12) that they are entitled to have the preponderance we propose to assign to them. At the same time we hold that those most affected, and on whom so much of the cost as is not borne by public or local funds will fall, should also be represented, and we therefore propose that holders of estates or tenures or their managers should constitute a strong minority of the Commissioners, and that these should be appointed by Government. We have also provided that the Commissioners may elect their own Chairman.

6. We have added a section (4) to cover cases in which the local area extends over more than one district.

7. We have altered section 4 of the original Bill, so as to adapt it to the changes made in section 3, and have also struck out the word "remove," as it does not appear necessary for the Local Government to have such a power.

8. We have struck out sections 6 to 10 as well as the words "and conduct of business" from the heading of the chapter, as we consider that the conduct of business can more properly be dealt with by rules.

PART II.

9. We have altered section 11, now section 6, so as to bring it into accordance with the alterations made in section 3. We have also enlarged the scope of the report of the Commissioners, and provided that it shall be accompanied by a map, and shall show the way in which the drainage became obstructed, and state the cost of maintenance, as well as the opinion of the Commissioners on the scheme. We have also provided that the report shall be submitted within a term to the District Board which took the initiative.

In connexion with this section, we considered the question which has been brought prominently to notice by several officers and local bodies consulted, as to whether a clause should be introduced dealing with obstructions caused by railways, roads, and other such causes. We consider that the provisions of Chapter III of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, provide fully for the necessary drainage, and give local authorities power to move for increased facilities when necessary in the case of railways, while roads are already under the District Boards, with whom the initiation rests under the Bill as now amended. We did not therefore think it necessary to insert any such clause.

10. We have added a section enabling the Commissioners to call upon the Collector to give them the information necessary for the preparation of the report, and empowering the Collector to obtain that information when it is not in his office.

11. We propose in the revised section 8 to give the District Board the power of rejecting the scheme at this stage, and if they adopt it, we have provided for the issue of a general notice and the filing of objections. We have provided that these objections shall be filed in the office of the District Board, as they have a known office, and the establishment necessary to deal with them, but we think that they can be best reported on by the Commissioners who have more local knowledge. We consider that by this means local public opinion will be fully consulted.

12. We have retained section 17 of the original Bill as section 12, with a slight verbal alteration to cover cases in which no advance is made by Government.

13. We have provided in section 10 that the District Board by a majority of two-thirds may override any objections made by the Commissioners or by a majority of the holders of estates and tenures, and that the scheme shall then be sent to Government. In the original Bill the scheme had to be considered by Government no less than three times, once on the original proposal, once under section 11, and again under section 18. Under our proposals it will only go twice before Government—once on the original proposal, and again when its adoption is finally recommended. We have also provided in this section that the District Board shall state at this stage what sum they will contribute.

We observe that in cases when the District Board proposes to contribute, it would be necessary first that Part E of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act 1885 should be extended to the district.

14. Section 11 corresponds with the last part of section 18 of the original Bill, and gives Government the power of approving, modifying, or rejecting the scheme, and a clause has been added allowing Government at this stage to intimate any contribution which it may be willing to make.

15. In section 13, which corresponds with section 19 of the original Bill, we have given the District Board, and not the Commissioners, the power of modifying the scheme under certain restrictions, but have not thought it necessary to provide that such alteration, when immaterial, shall entail fresh proceedings.

When the change is material, the issue of fresh notice under section 8 is provided for as well as a fresh reference to Government.

16. We have modified section 14, which corresponds with the original section 21, by adding that compensation shall not be given for lands which were surveyed as watercourses unless they shall have been more than 12 years under cultivation.

17. In section 15 we have provided that the work shall ordinarily be carried out by the District Board or Boards, and have given the Local Government the power of distributing the work, and in special cases of ordering the work to be executed by a special officer. This agrees with section 22 of the original Bill.

18. We have omitted the chapter relating to compensation for damage as not required in the Act, as now modified.

19. We have provided in section 16 that the cost of the scheme may be met from advances from the public funds as provided in sections 28 and 29 of the original Bill, but we have also given the District Board power to make advances, as we think it possible that cases may occur in which that body would prefer to do so.

20. We have provided, section 17, that the report on the progress of the work, which, under section 31 of the original Bill, was to be made to the Commissioners shall be made to the District Board, and have further provided that a copy of the report shall be forwarded through the Commissioner of the Division to the Local Government.

21. In section 18 we have added the capitalized value of the cost of maintenance, and the interest on advances to the total cost of the works, and have provided for the deduction of sums granted by the District Board or Government, or contributed by the public.

22. In section 19 we have provided that the Collector and not the Commissioners shall apportion the amount of the cost of construction. We hold that the work will be more quickly and efficiently done by him than by the Commissioners, as proposed in section 33 of the original Bill.

The nature of the work is also such that it can be best done by an officer of Government, and the Collector has also the necessary papers in his office.

We have considered the various suggestions for distributing the cost over the whole population, but have failed to discover any more practical method of doing so than that contained in the Bill. This Act is only intended to take effect in rural areas, and the whole population of such areas are practically engaged in agriculture and will have to pay.

23. In section 20 we have provided for the possibility of any sum having been omitted from the original apportionment, and in the following sections for an appeal to the Commissioner of the Division and for the final publication of the apportionment after the disposal of all appeals. These sections correspond generally to sections 32 to 39 of the original Bill, but are, we consider, more simple, and the Collector takes the place of the Commissioners in making the apportionment and hearing objections.

We have made the sums to be payable in equal annual instalments extending over a period not exceeding 30 years in accordance with rules to be made by Government. In this we have followed the procedure now in force regarding repayment of loans made by Government to local authorities.

PART III.

24. We have amalgamated sections 40 and 41 of the Bill into one section, which has become section 26.

25. In section 27, which is the equivalent of section 42, we have altered the rate of interest due on arrears from 12 to 6¼ per cent., as we hold the former rate to be too high, and the latter is easily calculated.

26. Sections 28 and 29 of the revised Bill represent sections 43 and 44 of the original Bill with only verbal alterations.

PART IV.

27. Section 30 of the revised Bill is section 45 of the original Bill, with a slight verbal alteration.

28. The following section 31, original section 46, has been the cause of considerable discussion. We have added the words "so as to obstruct public drainage," and "upon conviction before a Magistrate," and have fixed the maximum penalty at Rs. 200. We have also given the court power to remove the obstruction.

We recognise that the power given by this section is very wide, and that it is only limited by the words "without lawful authority," and by the drainage being public. At the same time we feel that the evil which it is sought to remedy is one which can only be arrested by a comprehensive clause, such as that now proposed, leaving each case to be dealt with on its merits by the Magistrate who tries the case. We observe that the special attention of the Government of India was drawn to this section in paragraph 13 of Mr. Bourdillon's letter of the 6th September 1893, and that the Government of India accepted the principle of the section. We are unable to suggest any alteration which will not defeat the object aimed at, and we have therefore accepted the section with the modifications above referred to We have had before us the reports of the Civil Surgeon of Chittagong and the Sanitary Commissioner of Bengal and the opinions of the Legal Remembrancer on the Chittagong cases, and we annex extracts from these papers to this report as showing the nature of the cases this section will affect.

29. We have in section 32 placed the control and administration of all lands taken under the provisions of this Act in the District Board, as that body has been made the executive agency under the previous provisions of the Bill. In the Bill as drafted, section 47, such lands were vested in the Collector on behalf of the State.

30. We have provided for the maintenance of drainage works in the original estimate, the capitalised value of such works forming part of the cost of maintenance of the scheme, section 48 of the Bill therefore becomes unnecessary and has been omitted.

31. We have adopted the procedure for service of notice which has the latest sanction of the Imperial Legislative Council, viz., section 45 of Act I of 1894 (Land Acquisition Act). Some of our number would prefer that the proviso should come first, and that service by registered letter should first be attempted, and that the service provided in clauses (1), (2) and (3) should only be adopted when the addressee's receipt of the registered cover cannot be obtained. The alteration is not very material, as Collectors have the power to do this in the first place under the Land Acquisition Act procedure.

The effect of the proposed change would be to give greater prominence to the alternative.

32. Section 35 has been curtailed and slightly altered from the original section 53. We consider that the section as now proposed affords all necessary safeguards.

33. We have omitted section 54 of the original Bill, as the Local Government have already been given full power to modify any scheme.

34. Section 58 of the original Bill was taken from the Drainage Act, and is not in our opinion applicable to the Bill now being dealt with. We have therefore altered the section, and have provided for errors on the part of the officers responsible for the estimates. Such errors do at times occur, and we think that in such cases provision should be made for reconsideration of the whole scheme.

35. We have added considerably to the section dealing with rules. The first clause of the original Bill is omitted, as the work of apportionment will be done by the Collector under well known conditions.

As stated in paragraph 8 of this report, we have provided that the conduct of business at meetings of the Commissioners shall be regulated by rules, and we have also provided that the conduct of business by two or more District Boards shall be similarly dealt with. The conditions of different schemes are likely to vary so greatly that we think that this matter can best be dealt with by rules which can be altered without legislation.

We have also provided that the arrangements for the payment of instalments, and the investment of funds for maintenance, shall be dealt with by rules.

We also propose that rules shall be published before adoption, thus giving the public an opportunity for criticism.

36. The schedules have been altered to suit the various changes above detailed.

37. We think that the Bill has been so altered that it should be republished.

NOTE OF DISSENT.

I SIGN this Report subject to the dissent which I herewith append. I think it would have been altogether more preferable if, instead of a separate Act being passed, Act III of 1885 (the Local Self-Government Act) were modified to provide for sanitary drainage and the supply of pure drinking-water.

2. The principle of local option has been practically recognized in the Bill. Under the Bill the District Board will have to make a contribution in respect of all schemes which it initiates. It is, however, left optional with the Government to make a contribution or not as it pleases. I think this should be an obligation recognized by Government and provided by law.

3. The Select Committee observe:—

"We consider that the provisions of Chapter III of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, provide fully for the necessary drainage, and give local authorities power to move for increased facilities when necessary in the case of railways, while roads are already under the District Boards, with whom the initiation rests under the Bill as now amended. We did not therefore think it necessary to insert any such clause."

But there may be cases in which a Municipality causing obstruction to drainage may refuse to carry out works which may be necessary to remove such obstruction. I think power should be taken to provide for such cases.

With reference to the question of the distribution of the cost of drainage schemes, I reserve to myself the right of moving any amendments that I may consider necessary.

SURENDRANATH BANERJEE.

NOTE OF DISSENT.

1. I believe railways are largely responsible for the obstruction of the natural drainage of the country, and therefore I do not think it would be fair to throw the whole expense of drainage schemes on the people without any provision for compelling Railway Administrations to make such contributions as may be justly due from them. But as the Bengal Legislature has no power to deal with Railway Administrations, I do not see how the difficulty can be got over unless it is dealt with by the Supreme Legislative Council.

2. I am also of opinion that it would not be equitable to cast the entire burden upon holders of estates and tenures and cultivating raiyats, and although I agree with the majority that it is not easy to discover any unobjectionable method of distributing the cost on the general community, I reserve to myself the right of raising the question in Council.

L. GHOSE.

I SIGN this Report, reserving the right of moving amendments in Council.

APPENDIX REFERRED TO IN PARAGRAPH 28 OF THIS REPORT.

Extract from the Quarterly Report of the Civil Surgeon of Chittagong for the quarter ending 30th September, 1893, embodied in his No. 1400, dated the 1st December, 1893, to the Sanitary Commissioner, Bengal.

* * * * * * * *

"In the district the measures taken to prevent the damming of small streams by the villagers with its necessary consequence of blocking up the drainage failed.

The convictions which had been obtained were quashed on appeal owing to the fact that it could not be shown that the evil effects to the health of the people following the practice were immediate in sequence. If this is the state of the law, the sooner it is amended the better it will be for the health of this district, intersected as it is in every direction by small streams and khals which, it is absolutely essential, should be kept open if good natural drainage is to be maintained." * * * * *

Extract from No. 35, dated the 11th January 1894, from the Sanitary Commissioner for Bengal, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Municipal Department.

* * * * * * * *

"I have the honour to invite the attention of Government to the remarks made by that officer (the Civil Surgeon of Chittagong), regarding the bunding up of small streams and drainage channels, and to say that, although immediate evil effects to the health of the people in consequence of the blocking up of the channels may not be apparent, the practice is most objectionable from a sanitary point of view, and cannot fail ultimately to have a very prejudicial effect upon the health of the public.

"As pointed out by the Civil Surgeon, the district of Chittagong is intersected in every direction by small streams and khals, which it is absolutely essential should be kept open, if free drainage is to be maintained." * * * * *

The Government of Bengal forwarded the above to the Legal Remembrancer and enquired whether, under any existing law, it was possible to put a stop to the damming of small streams and channels in Chittagong, alluded to in the correspondence. The Legal Remembrancer in his No. 1193, dated the 17th Febuary 1894, replied as follows:—"I am not aware of any law under which the damming of small streams can be prevented, where it cannot be shown that the dams cause a common injury, danger or annoyance to the people in general who occupy property in the vicinity, or must necessarily cause injury, obstruction, danger or annoyance to persons who may have occasion to use a public right; section 268, Penal Code.

In the cases sent up from Chittagong, the people made no complaint. There was merely an official witness who deposed to having seen the dam, and the Civil Surgeon who said that such dams, by obstructing natural drainage, were bad for the public health. The High Court upon such evidence declined to hold that a public nuisance had been committed, and set aside the convictions." * * * * *

FIRST SCHEDULE.

SECOND SCHEDULE.

A Bill to facilitate the construction of drainage works for improving the sanitary condition of local areas.

WHEREAS it is expedient to facilitate the construction of drainage works for improving the sanitary condition of local areas within the territories subject to the government of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal; It is enacted as follows:—

PART I.

CHAPTER I.

Preliminary.

Title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Bengal Sanitary Drainage Act, 1895.

(2) It shall extend to all the territories subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, which are not included within the limits of any Municipality or Cantonment.

(3) And it shall come into force from the date on which it may be published in the Calcutta Gazette with the assent of the Governor-General.

Definitions.

2. For the purposes of this Act, the terms hereinafter mentioned shall, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context, have the meanings hereinafter annexed to them,—

(1) "annual value" means the total rent which is payable, or if no rent is actually payable, would on a reasonable assessment be payable during the year by all the cultivating raiyats of any local area or by any other person in the actual use and occupation thereof:

(2) "cultivating raiyat" means a person cultivating land and paying rent therefor, not exceeding one hundred rupees per annum:

Explanation.—Where rent is payable in kind, the money value thereof shall, for the purposes of this Act, be taken to be the annual value of the landlord's share of the crops calculated on an average of the three years next preceding any valuation or re-valuation under Act IX of 1880.

(3) "the engineer" means the district engineer or any engineer especially appointed by the Local Government to perform the functions of an engineer under this Act:

(4) "estate" means land included under one entry in the general registers of revenue-paying lands and revenue-free lands, prepared and maintained under the law for the time being in force by the Collector of a district, and includes also—

(a) any land, other than the holding of a cultivating raiyat, the revenue or rent of which may be payable directly to the Collector or any person specially appointed by him to collect the same;

(b) any land acquired under any rules issued by, or under authority of, Government for the sale, grant, lease or clearance of waste lands:

(5) "holder of an estate or tenure" means all or any of the holders thereof, and where two or more persons are joint-holders thereof, they shall be jointly and severally liable under this Act:

(6) "local area," in relation to the Commissioners, means the local area throughout which such Commissioners are authorised to exercise the functions conferred on them under this Act:

(7) "tenure" includes every interest in land, whether rent-paying or not, save and except an estate as above defined, and save and except the interest of a cultivating raiyat:

(8) "the Collector" means the officer in charge of the revenue jurisdiction of the district within which the lands which form the subject of a scheme under this Act are situated:

(9) "the Commissioners" mean the Drainage Commissioners under this Act.

CHAPTER II.

Appointment of Commissioners.

Appointment of Commissioners.

3. Whenever there is reason to believe that the sanitary condition of any local area has been deteriorated by obstructed drainage, and that it can be improved by restoring or improving such drainage, the Local Government may, if it think fit, on an application in writing made to the Collector by the District Board, define the limits of the local area and declare the number of persons, not less than nine, who shall be Drainage Commissioners, for carrying out the provisions of this Act, of whom not less than half shall be members of the District or Local Board elected by the District Board, and the remainder shall be holders of estates or tenures within such local area, or managers on behalf of such holders appointed by the Local Government. The Commissioners shall elect one of their number to be Chairman.

Procedure when two districts are interested.

4. When a local area referred to in the last preceding section is part of more than one district, an application under that section may be made by any District Board within whose jurisdiction any portion of such local area is situated, and the Commissioners shall be appointed and elected from both, or all, of such districts, with due regard to the area of each or all of such districts comprised in the local area.

Resignation of Commissioners.

5. The Local Government may from time to time accept the resignation of any of the Commissioners, or may add to the number of the Commissioners, and in the event of any Commissioner dying, retiring, or ceasing to reside in the district or districts in which such local area is situated, the vacancy so caused shall be filled by the appointment or election, as the case may be, of another person, the conditions of the original appointment or election being in such case observed:

Provided that not less than half the number of the Commissioners shall always be members of the District or Local Board or Boards, as the case may be.

PART II.

CHAPTER I.

Drainage Scheme.

Commissioners to direct survey, &c., and forward with a report to District Board.

6. When Commissioners have been appointed under section three, they shall, without delay, direct the engineer to prepare a survey, plans and estimates (hereinafter called "the survey") for the restoration or improvement of the drainage of the local area concerned, and shall, within a period to be fixed by the District Board who made the application (hereinafter called "the District Board"), forward the same to such District Board, together with a report signed by them containing—

(a) a statement descriptive of the proposed undertaking, and showing how the drainage was obstructed, with a map of the local area;

(b) a statement showing the holders of estates and tenures and the cultivating raiyats within such local area, and the annual value of the same;

(c) an estimate of the total cost of the undertaking, including the cost of any land to be acquired under section fourteen;

(d) an estimate of the cost of maintaining the works;

(e) an estimate of the incidence of the cost of the proposed undertaking on the holders of estates and tenures and on the cultivating raiyats based on the annual value of the local area;

(f) their advice as to the adoption or rejection of the scheme.

Collector to furnish information from returns.

7. In order to the preparation of the survey and report referred to in the last preceding section, the Commissioners may call upon the Collector or Collectors to furnish them with information in regard to estates and tenures within the local area, and in the obtaining of such information, the Collector or Collectors shall apply, so far as may be, the provisions of Chapter II, Act IX (B.C.) of 1880 (The Cess Act, 1880).

District Board to cause notification to be published.

8. If the District Board reject the scheme, it shall be abandoned, but if they adopt it, they shall, within one month after receipt of the survey and report, call upon the Collector or Collectors to publish a notification in the language of the district in every village in which may be situated any portion of the land to be affected by the proposed undertaking. Such notification shall be in the form in the first Schedule hereto annexed, and may be published by posting the same in some conspicuous part of the village and at the Court of the Munsif within whose jurisdiction, and at every police-station and post-office within the limits of which such village, or any part thereof, is situated.

Commissioners to be required by District Board to consider objections and report generally on the scheme.

9. As soon as practicable after the expiry of the period fixed by such notification, the Chairman of the District Board shall forward to the Commissioners the petitions of objection, if any, received by him, and call upon them to consider and, within a specified time, report upon the objections, if any, raised, as well as upon the state of public feeling in regard to the scheme.

District Board to submit the scheme to Local Government.

10. If the District Board, acting in accordance with the advice of the Commissioners, or if a majority of not less than two-thirds of the District Board acting against the advice of the Commissioners, or against the objections of a majority of the holders of estates and tenures, adopt the scheme, they shall thereupon decide upon the sum which they will contribute towards the scheme, and shall within one month from such decision forward the survey and report through the Commissioner of the Division to the Local Government for consideration, otherwise the scheme shall be abandoned.

Local Government to consider report, &c., and return to District Board.

11. The Local Government shall consider the survey and report, and may approve or modify or reject the same; and if it approve or modify them shall thereupon return them so approved or modified to the District Board through the Commissioner of the Division, with an intimation of the amount, if any, which the Local Government will contribute towards the scheme.

Cost of survey, &c., payable by District Board in certain cases. Remedy in case of default.

12. If the District Board or the Local Government reject the scheme, the cost of the survey, and the salary of the Engineer directed to prepare the same, shall be paid by the District Board. In case of default, when advances have been made from the public funds under section sixteen, the Local Government may attach the District Fund and deal with it as if it had been attached under the provisions of section six of Act XI of 1879 (the Local Authorities Loans Act, 1879).

District Board may reconsider scheme, &c., adopted by them.

13. (1) The District Board may, with the previous assent of the Local Government, at any time reconsider any survey and report adopted by them, and add to, alter or modify the same, but not so as to add materially to the cost thereof; and if any addition, alteration or modification is thereupon made by them, they shall lay before the Local Government the survey and report so added to, altered or modified, and the Local Government may sanction the same or any portion thereof: and thenceforth the provisions of this Act shall apply to the scheme as ultimately sanctioned by the Local Government.

(2) Every material addition, alteration or modification made by a District Board to, or in, any survey or report after the adoption thereof, shall be published by them in the manner provided in section nine and the provisions of sections ten to twelve (both inclusive), shall apply.

Land required for drainage works how to be acquired.

14. Any land, likely to be needed in carrying out any scheme, sanctioned by the Local Government under this Act, may be acquired under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, or any similar Act for the time being in force for the acquisition of land for public purposes:

Provided that no compensation shall be paid for land recorded as a water-course in the last Revenue Survey map published under section four of Act IX of 1847 or any similar enactment for the time being in force, unless it be proved that such land has been under cultivation for a period of not less than twelve years.

Local Government may order execution of drainage works by an officer appointed by it.

15. (1) Drainage works under this Act shall be executed by the District Board unless the Local Government order them, or any portion of them, to be executed by more than one District Board or by an Engineer appointed in that behalf by itself.

(2) Any person duly authorized to execute any drainage works under this Act may himself, or by his agents and workmen, enter into or upon any lands and perform such works thereupon as may be required.

CHAPTER II.
Expenditure and Apportionment.

What amounts should be included in cost for construction of works.

16. All amounts paid—

(a) as compensation for any lands taken for the purposes of this Act;

(b) as salaries of the engineer, officers, servants or establishments specially employed by the Collector, the Commissioners or the District Board for the purposes of this Act;

(c) for any surveys, plans, estimates, valuations and incidental expenses connected therewith, whether antecedent or subsequent to the adoption of the scheme,

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 21st February, 1895:—

No. 6 of 1895.

A Bill to amend the Indian Ports Act, 1889.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Indian Ports Act, 1889; It is hereby enacted as follows:— X of 1889.

1. (1) In section 6, clause (o), of the said Act, the word "and" shall be omitted, and after clause (p) of the same section the following shall be added, namely:— Amendment of section 6, Act X, 1889.

(q) for securing the protection from heat of the officers and crew of vessels in any such port by requiring the owner or master of any such vessel—

(i) to provide double awnings and curtains for screening the quarters occupied by the officers and crew from the sun's rays;

(ii) to erect windsails so far as the existing port-holes or apertures in the deck admit of their being used for ventilating the quarters of the officers and crew;

(iii) when the deck is made of iron and not wood-sheathed, to cover the deck of the vessel with wooden planks;

(iv) when the quarters used by the crew and the galley are separated by a thin iron bulkhead only, to furnish a screen of some suitable non-conducting material between such quarters and the galley."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE want of suitable arrangements for the ventilation and protection from the heat of the sun of the forecastle and officers' quarters in certain vessels, mainly cargo vessels, visiting Indian ports was brought to the notice of Government in 1892, and the Board of Trade was addressed on the subject through the Secretary of State. The Board expressed their readiness to alter their regulations so as to remedy deficiencies of the kind indicated, but they pointed out at the same time that, without legislation, of which there seemed to be no immediate prospect, to give retrospective effect to such alterations, they would be confined in their application to vessels inspected by their surveyors on initial registration or re-registration under section 9, sub-sections (4) and (7), of the Merchant Shipping Act of 1867 (see now the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, Sixth Schedule, regulations (3) and (5)). It was accordingly suggested that, pending legislation in England, the Indian Ports Act, 1889, should be amended so as to provide for the framing of rules requiring the necessary arrangements to be made on board ships while in Indian ports. The object of this Bill is to give effect to that suggestion.

ASSAULT BY MR. BEATSON-BELL.

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRANATH BANERJEE asked—

Whether the attention of the Government has been called to an assault alleged to have been committed by Mr. Beatson-Bell, Joint-Magistrate of Tippera, upon an Indian Deputy Magistrate of the place? Whether the matter has formed the subject of any official correspondence? If so, will the Government lay on the table the correspondence which has taken place in this connection?

The Hon'ble MR. LYALL, in the absence of the Hon'ble MR. COTTON, replied:—

"The attention of Government was drawn to this matter, but it has not formed the subject of official correspondence, and no papers therefore can be laid on the table.

"The facts of the case are briefly as follows:—Athletic sports were being held at Comilla on New Year's Day, and were attended by a large crowd: Mr. Beatson-Bell, while engaged in keeping the course clear, gave a push to a Deputy Magistrate, who was among the crowd and was not known to him at the time, and that gentleman unfortunately stumbled and fell, dislocating his shoulder. No one can regret this incident more deeply than Mr. Bell does, and the Deputy Magistrate, whose conduct is very creditable to him, has been the foremost to acknowledge the accidental character of the injury he sustained."

STOPPAGE OF A RELIGIOUS CEREMONY AT PAKOUR.

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRANATH BANERJEE asked—

Whether the attention of the Government has been called to the proceedings of the Subdivisional Officer of Pakour in the Sonthal Parganas, as published in the Murshidabad Hitaishi of the 7th November, 1894, which says that the Subdivisional Officer stopped a particular religious ceremony observed from time immemorial, on the occasion of the annual Kali Puja, by the Goalas of that part of the country, and thus hurt the religious feelings of the local public, and caused great dissatisfaction among the orthodox Hindus of the locality? Will the Government be pleased to order an enquiry, and adopt such measures as it may think fit with a view to prevent such interference in future?

The Hon'ble MR. COTTON replied:—

"The attention of Government was attracted to the paragraph in the Murshidabad Hitaishi referred to, and enquiry was made on the subject. It was ascertained that it was an old custom among the Sonthali cowherds on occasion of the Kali Puja to cast a pig among a herd of cattle, by whom it is gored to death in a brutal manner. Mr. McLaren Smith, the Subdivisional Officer of Pakour, considering this custom to be a breach of the law for the prevention of cruelty to animals, prohibited it by executive order in 1893 and again in 1894. The cowherds represented the matter to the Commissioner when he recently visited the subdivision, but Mr. Toynbee declined to interfere. The Lieutenant-Governor approves Mr. McLaren Smith's action, and declines to believe that the prohibition of this barbarous and disgusting custom can have hurt the religious feelings of any orthodox Hindus."

THE LEPERS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. BOURDILLON moved for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the segregation of pauper lepers, and the control of lepers exercising certain trades. He said:—

"MR. PRESIDENT—In accordance with the List of Business of the day, I have now to move for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the segregation of pauper lepers and the control of lepers exercising certain trades; and in conformity with the practice of this Council, I have now to introduce the Bill by concisely giving the history of its origin, and by explaining at somewhat greater length than could be done in the brief Statement of Objects and Reasons what its chief objects are, and what means Government propose to adopt in order to carry them out. Any discussion which may be thought desirable in respect of the principles on which it is based will take place when I next move on a subsequent occasion to refer the Bill to a Select Committee.

"It is unnecessary for me to lay before this Council any elaborate history of leprosy in India, to quote instances from Indian history to prove its existence from the earliest times, or to depict the treatment of lepers at various epochs. Let it suffice to say that the leper has always evoked the sympathy of the benevolent, and sometimes the antipathy of the ignorant, while he has from time to time attracted the fitful attention of the ruling power. But whatever has been done for the relief of lepers has been done in a desultory fashion; and although shelters are believed to have been erected in various places, and the Calcutta Asylum was established in 1811, yet no concerted scheme to better their condition has ever been carried into effect in Bengal, and no actual steps, so far as I know, have ever been taken to enforce the segregation of pauper lepers while providing them gratuitously with food, shelter and medical treatment.

"Of late years, however, public interest in the condition of lepers has been aroused in many countries. The National Leprosy Fund was started under the presidency of the Prince of Wales in 1889, and the attention of educated India was attracted to the subject at about the same time. In 1888, the Government of India, in a Resolution dated the 26th September, encouraged the grant of medical and charitable relief to lepers in voluntary hospitals and leper asylums. In the following year, the Governor General found reason to again consider the subject, and under his orders another Resolution was recorded on the 15th June, 1889, in which it was laid down that, in the opinion of His Excellency in Council, further measures might with advantage be taken with the object of promoting the establishment of asylums or retreats for lepers, and of giving legislative sanction to the retention of lepers in such retreats. With this Resolution a draft Bill was circulated to Local Governments for report, and they were invited to consult the best available opinion on the matter, both official and non-official. The main provisions of this Bill did not differ very greatly from those which are contained in the Bill now to be laid before Council, but it contained a clause allowing lepers voluntarily to seek admission into a retreat or asylum, either for life or for a term of years: it provided for the punishment of lepers who escaped from retreats, insisted on the separation of the sexes among segregated lepers, and gave general powers to Government to make rules for the management and discipline of asylums: it did not lay down, with the precision of the present Bill, the distinction between pauper lepers and others, nor did it make any provision for the prohibition of lepers not paupers from engaging in certain trades or callings which would bring them into immediate contact with the food, drink and clothing of their fellow-men. No less than forty-one non-official bodies and leading officials were consulted, and their opinions were communicated to the Government of India with Sir John Edgar's letter of the 23rd January, 1890. Sir Steuart Bayley accepted generally the provisions of the Bill, but pressed the necessity of prohibiting those coming under the definition of lepers, under penalty of compulsory detention in an asylum, from engaging in trades which involve the preparation and sale of food or clothing, or as washermen, or barbers, and from the use of public tanks, possibly also of travelling by public conveyance. He also proposed to authorise Local Governments to compel contributions from municipalities for the lepers found in such municipalities asking for alms or wandering about without ostensible means of subsistence.

"Not many months after the despatch of this report, the Secretary of State agreed to the proposal of the Executive Committee of the National Leprosy Fund to appoint the Leprosy Commission, which in due course visited India in 1890 and 1891, and submitted a report in the year 1893. While the enquiries of this Commission were proceeding, the Government of India took no action in the matter; but on the 15th September, 1893, the Supreme Government forwarded to the Government of Bengal certain papers received from the Executive Committee of the National Leprosy Fund commenting upon the report of the Leprosy Commission, together with a memorandum by the Surgeon-General with the Government of India, and requested the Lieutenant-Governor to favour them with his recommendations for giving practical effect to the conclusions of the Leprosy Commissioners.

"At the time that these orders were received, Sir Antony MacDonnell was officiating as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and under his instructions a Resolution was recorded (No. 608T.M. of the 31st October, 1893), in which he reviewed the existing state of the law as regards the control over lepers, and the power of isolating them, whether in Calcutta, in mufassal municipalities or in rural areas generally, and sketched in general terms the measures which he considered to be at once desirable and practicable for the amelioration of the condition of the lepers themselves, and for the protection of the general public. Copies of this Resolution were forwarded for opinion to those persons and public bodies who seemed most likely to make suggestions of value, or who were most closely concerned with the subject, and when the replies were received, it was found that they displayed a general consensus of opinion in favour of a modified system of compulsory segregation and of rigid prohibition from the pursuit of certain trades and callings, while the Legal Remembrancer, who was one of those consulted, advised that these ends could not be compassed without recourse to legislation. In accordance with these recommendations the Government prepared a draft Bill, which was forwarded to the Government of India on the 19th June last for approval, and sanction to its introduction into the Bengal Legislative Council was received on the 7th instant.

"The Bill divides itself naturally into three parts. The first part, consisting of sections 1 to 6 and section 15, lays down some necessary definitions, and gives to the Local Government certain essential powers. The second part (sections 7 to 11) deals with the segregation of pauper lepers; while the third part (sections 12 to 14) treats of the restraints to be placed upon lepers who are not paupers, in respect of the exercise of certain callings.

"Turning back to the first group of sections, it will be observed that the definition of leprosy for the purposes of this Act is made to turn upon the question of ulceration. The Lieutenant-Governor is advised that whatever the class of leprosy, whether tubercular, anæsthetic, or a combination of the two, the period of possible contagion is not reached till ulceration has set in, and for this reason he proposes to make the presence of that condition the test of leprosy. The definition of pauper leper, on the other hand, is based upon the provisions of section 70 of the Calcutta Police Act [IV (B.C.) of 1866] and of section 3 of Bombay Act VI of 1867. Section 3 of the Bill also follows to some extent section 1 of Bombay Act VI of 1867, and empowers the Local Government to declare any place to be a Leper Asylum, and to notify the local areas from which lepers may be sent to it. Section 4, which is taken from section 3 of the draft Bill originally propounded by the Government of India, empowers local authorities to expend funds on, and appropriate property to, leper asylums. Section 5 gives the Lieutenant-Governor the necessary power of appointing Inspectors of Lepers and Superintendents of Leper Asylums with the necessary establishment, and section 6, following the analogy of section 2 of Act XXXVI of 1858, empowers him to appoint a Board for each Leper Asylum, as he can now do for each Lunatic Asylum in the Province. Section 15 bestows on the Local Government the necessary authority to make rules for carrying out the purposes of the Act.

"Sections 7 to 11 deal with the arrest and examination of pauper lepers within duly defined local areas for which a leper asylum has been provided, as well as for their detention and inspection in, and discharge from, such asylums. Section 7 follows sections 70 and 72 of Act IV (B.C.) of 1866, which already in Calcutta empower any police officer to arrest without warrant any person begging in a public place or exhibiting sores in order to excite charity, and it also follows, with slight modifications, section 54, Act X of 1882. Sections 8 and 9 provide that a person who is suspected of being a pauper leper shall be brought without delay before an Inspector of Lepers, and then before a Magistrate duly authorized under this Act, and the procedure laid down in both these sections has been made as summary and simple as possible. Briefly, the Inspector of Lepers will decide whether the person brought before him by the police as a pauper leper is a leper or not; if he is not, he will be discharged with a certificate to that effect; if he is, he will be forwarded to the Magistrate, and the latter will decide whether he is a pauper leper or not. Sections 10 and 11 provide for the periodical inspection of lepers by the Asylum Board after their admission to an asylum, and for their discharge whenever such a course is possible: the provisions of the Lunatic Asylums Act (XXXVI of 1858, sections 3 and 9) have been closely followed.

"The control of lepers other than paupers, and of their connection with certain trades and callings, is dealt with in sections 12 to 14. The object of these sections is to prevent lepers from engaging in trades which are closely connected with the food, drink and clothing of their fellow-men. Therefore section 12 enables Municipal Commissioners, by bye-laws under the Municipal Acts, duly made and approved by the Local Government in that behalf, to prohibit any person who is reasonably believed to be a leper from carrying on any of certain specified trades or callings within defined limits until he has proved that he is not a leper. In order to make this section still further effective, section 13 empowers an Inspector of Lepers to examine (with proper safeguards) persons suspected to be lepers, while an appeal to the Local Government against a certificate of leprosy is provided by section 14 for lepers other than pauper lepers. The latter can present themselves constantly before the Visiting Board, and no further right of appeal seems required in their case.

"The schedule to the Act prescribes the necessary forms of certificate of leprosy and non-leprosy, of warrant for detention in a Leper Asylum, and of discharge.

"In the foregoing remarks I have indicated the leading features of the Bill, and I have now to say only a few words as to the extent to which Government propose to introduce its provisions, the number of persons likely to be affected by it, and the experience gained in Bombay by those who have been administering a similar measure for some years.

"From the first it has been recognised as probably desirable that legislation should be resorted to in order to enforce the segregation and regulate the conduct of lepers in towns only, and that no attempt should be made to interfere with the movements of lepers in rural areas. This policy has not been lost sight of in the preparation of the present Bill, and there is no intention of extending its provisions to rural areas. The portion which deals with the arrest and detention of pauper lepers cannot come into force anywhere until, under section 3, the Lieutenant-Governor has notified a place to be a Leper Asylum, and has under the same section notified and defined the local areas from which lepers may be sent to such asylum. It is the intention of the Government to notify under this section no local areas except municipalities, so that the powers given to the Police by sections 7, 8 and 9 will be exercised in municipalities only, for the Lieutenant-Governor thinks that it would be unwise to give such power of arrest to the district police in villages and on country roads. The portion of the Bill (sections 12—14) dealing with lepers who pursue certain trades will extend, on the passing of the Act, to all municipal areas; but the bye-laws, without which these provisions of the Bill will remain inoperative, will require the sanction of the Local Government, and an appeal will lie against any order passed by an Inspector of Lepers under section 12.

"Of the number of persons who would at once be affected by the passing of this Act, it is impossible to give any estimate. The published statistics of the Census of 1891 do not show separately the lepers in municipalities and those in the country. Moreover, even did they do so, some additions would probably have to be made to the figures on account of incomplete enumeration, especially in the case of females, and large deductions would be necessary to allow for those who are either pauper lepers or who do not carry on any of the forbidden trades. In regard to pauper lepers, the number who would at once be affected by the provisions of sections 7 to 11 of the Act is greatly restricted by the fact that until a duly constituted asylum is provided, and local areas are defined from which lepers may be sent to it, the Police cannot exercise the powers of arrest and so forth given them by sections 7, 8 and 9 of the Act. As far as Government are aware, the Asylum in Calcutta is the only public asylum in Bengal which could now be notified under the Act, and the consequence is that for the present, at any rate, the provisions of sections 7—11, if they become law, will apply to Calcutta alone, and to such municipalities within a convenient distance of it as Government may see fit to notify under section 3. The Committee which sat in 1890 91 to consider the question of removing the Calcutta Leper Asylum found that the number of pauper lepers in Calcutta in September, 1890, was 365, and it may be assumed that the number at present is about the same.

"In Bombay proposals were made so long ago as 1883 for the segregation of pauper lepers, but it was not till 1889 that active measures were adopted to seclude lepers of this class. In that city a resort to legislation was unnecessary, as the existing laws empowered the Local Government to declare a place to be a leper asylum, and to declare black leprosy to be an infectious disease dangerous to life, and Resolutions to this effect having been passed by Government, the Health Officer of the Port of Bombay was able, under Bombay Act VI of 1867, to cause to be conveyed to a house of detention and there to be detained any person suffering from black leprosy. In 1890, Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit contributed the sum of one lakh of rupees towards the scheme on certain conditions, and another lakh of rupees having been raised by the indefatigable exertions of Mr. Acworth, the Municipal Commissioner, and a strong Committee, a site was selected and work commenced on the 19th August of that year. By the 17th June, 1891, the buildings were completed and occupied, accommodation being provided for 270 lepers in the dry and 250 in the rainy season. The asylum is maintained at the joint cost of Government and the Bombay Corporation, and according to my information it has proved a most unqualified success. The streets of Bombay are cleared of the miserable lepers who used at one time to infest them, and these poor sufferers are well cared for and supplied with all reasonable comforts in large and healthy quarters. I have myself visited the institution, and gladly take this opportunity of again recording my admiration for the work done—a sentiment which I believe to be shared by every visitor to the place, and I have no hesitation in saying that, if every member of this Council had enjoyed a like opportunity, this Bill, in so far as it aims at providing similar institutions for Calcutta and Bengal, would be passed without a dissentient voice.

"I have now to move that the Bill be introduced in Council: I will only urge once more that the measure is admittedly tentative and cautious, and that it is believed to command the general approval of all classes of the community: it embodies no scheme for the general arrest and incarceration of lepers: its provisions, so far as pauper lepers are concerned, will be confined to municipal towns, for the lepers found in which a suitably equipped Leper Asylum has been provided, and for the present there is only one recognized public Leper Asylum in the Province. Lastly, those provisions of the Bill which regulate the trades of lepers, and which, on the passing of the Bill, may be enforced in any municipality as soon as proper bye-laws have been passed, have, it is believed, been fenced about with all the safeguards necessary to prevent abuses and persecution on the one hand, and on the other hand to protect the public as far as may be from the risk, whether real or imaginary, of contracting a disease which has by all nations and in all ages been regarded with peculiar loathing and abhorrence."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. BOURDILLON also applied to the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business.

The Hon'ble THE PRESIDENT having declared the Rules suspended—

The Hon'ble MR. BOURDILLON introduced the Bill, and moved that it be read in Council.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

CALCUTTA AND SUBURBAN POLICE ACTS, 1866, AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN LAMBERT moved that the Bill to further amend the Suburban Police Act, 1866, and the Calcutta Police Act, 1866, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble MR. COTTON, the Hon'ble MAULVI ABDUL JUBBAR KHAN BAHADUR, the Hon'ble BABU SURENDRANATH BANERJEE, the Hon'ble MR. GHOSE, the Hon'ble MAULVI MUHAMMAD YUSUF KHAN BAHADUR and the Mover.

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRANATH BANERJEE said:—"With your Honour's permission I desire to make a few observations upon the Bill, which is now about to be referred to Select Committee. I must say that I cannot approve of the principle of the Bill in the shape and form in which it has been presented to us. I object to section 5 of the Bill and the principle which underlies that section. I object to the enlargement of the powers of the Police contemplated under that section. I am sorry to find myself in this matter in opposition to the hon'ble member to my right (MAULVI MUHAMMAD YUSUF), who, when the Bill was introduced at the last meeting, was not only pleased to speak in support of its provisions, but even went to the extent of observing that it did not go sufficiently far. My contention is different. My contention is, that the Bill goes a great deal too far. That it goes further than what is safe for us as a Legislature to provide, that it involves a dangerous principle, that it contains a menace to the interests of personal liberty held out in the name of Purity and Morality. I do not wish to be misunderstood. I am friendly to the Purity party, and to the movement which that party have inaugurated in this city. I sympathize with their aims and aspirations. I think they are doing a noble and a splendid work. I will even go further and say that no right-minded person, feeling the least concern in the well-being of the youthful section of the community, can withhold from them the tribute of his respect and admiration; they desire to place a lofty ideal of purity before our young men, and they wish to save them from those temptations to which they are specially exposed in a city like Calcutta. But great as may be my respect for the devoted men connected with the work, unstinted as may be the measure of my admiration for their ardour and self-sacrifice, I feel even a greater degree of solicitude for the maintenance of the rights of personal liberty against the abuse of power. I hope I shall not be accused of importing into this Council a new spirit, so far as our present deliberations are concerned, if I venture to affirm, even in the presence of the Hon'ble SIR JOHN LAMBERT, that the one department of the State which gives the least satisfaction is the Police; that it is capable of considerable improvement, specially as regards the material with which the subordinate ranks of the Police are manned. And yet it is gravely proposed under section 5 of the Bill to confer upon police officials, above the rank of constable, the power to arrest without warrant any person who is presumed in their presence to be making solicitations to immorality. I say that this is a dangerous power to confer upon subordinate police officers. Why, even in England, the exercise of this power has been attended with grave abuse. Hon'ble members will remember the case of Miss Cass. Here was a respectable young lady arrested by a police constable, hauled up before a Police Magistrate, and ignominiously placed upon her trial upon a charge than which it is impossible to conceive a fouler charge as against a young lady. Thanks to the spirit of British justice which prevails in England, she was acquitted. The police constable got his dues. He was tried for perjury, was convicted, and sentenced to imprisonment. This happened in England, in a country where public opinion is strong, where it affords a sufficient safeguard against the extravagances of power, and where the Police are remarkable for their discipline, their devotion to duty, and their freedom from corruption.

"If, under these favourable conditions, a case like this could occur in England, what may we not expect in a country like India, where the Police is what it is, and where public opinion is feeble even to the verge of impotency? What is the justification for this section? The hon'ble member has himself told us that so far as he is personally concerned, he does not think the evil complained of has assumed grave proportions. I may be allowed to premise. I think I do him no injustice if I assume that if the hon'ble member was left to himself, if he was left to his own unaided impulses, he would not have recommended a provision like this for the consideration of the Council.

"The justification of the Bill is therefore to be sought for, as the hon'ble member himself has told us, in some representations made by certain respectable Native and European gentlemen. I have had an opportunity of discussing the matter with one of the most influential of these gentlemen—the Hon'ble SIR ROMESH CHUNDER MITTER, and I have his authority to say that he strongly condemns this provision of the Bill; he said that he did not want such a provision; that his party did not want such a provision; that they have not got what they wanted, and their memorial fully confirms this view of the matter. I have before me a copy of the memorial which was presented to the Government. The memorial consists of 13 paragraphs, and of the 13 paragraphs, 7 are devoted to the question of the suppression of brothels in this city. The memorialists say that the law on the subject is inadequate; they pray for an enlargement of the provisions of the law in this respect, and they recommend that the Indian law on the subject should be placed upon the same footing with the English law. There is only one paragraph devoted to a request for the suppression of solicitations to immorality. The Bill does not say a single word in reference to that which constitutes the chief prayer, the burden, if I may so call it, of the memorial. But it introduces a matter, which is a subsidiary matter so far as this petition is concerned. I will read this paragraph from the memorial:—

'That your memorialists beg also to point out that there is no provision in the Calcutta Police Act for dealing with open solicitations to immorality, and your memorialists pray that such solicitations may be made distinctly punishable by an enlargement of the scope of section sixty-eight of the said Act, which deals with indecent behaviour, or of section sixty-six of the said Act, which provides against sundry public nuisances, or such otherwise as to your Honour may seem fit.'

"It will be seen from the extract which I have just read that the procedure which is followed in the Bill is not the procedure which they recommend. They pray for an enlargement of section 2 of Act II of 1886, which has superseded section 68 of the Calcutta Police Act. They pray for an enlargement of that section, and not for an enlargement of the powers of the Police, and I think all that it is necessary to do is to add an explanatory note regarding the meaning of the words 'indecent behaviour,' so that they should include solicitations to immorality. This, I think, will satisfy the memorialists, and it is certainly the view of the Hon'ble SIR ROMESH CHUNDER MITTER. These and other matters will no doubt receive the earnest attention of the Select Committee, and I hope and trust that they will see their way to omit section 5 of the Bill altogether. In the endeavour to promote morality, let us not jeopardise the interests of personal liberty. But should the balance of opinion prevail against the view which I have ventured to put forward, I have yet another recommendation to make in this connection—a via media, which, I think, will reconcile conflicting opinions: I recommend that the principle of local option be recognised in this section, that the section should not be extended to any locality except upon the application of, say, a hundred or more of the most respectable inhabitants of the place, or of those who resort to it for business purposes. Without some such safeguard, I am afraid the section in its practical operation will be attended with great abuse: it will be a fearful instrument of oppression in the hands of unscrupulous men, and the Bill itself will awaken the gravest public dissatisfaction."

The Hon'ble MR. GHOSE said:—"I am afraid, Sir, this Bill will have to undergo very material modifications before it can be safely passed by this Council or before it can be accepted by the general public. It has already evoked adverse criticism in the columns of the public press, and I find myself in entire sympathy with much of that criticism. If it was found necessary to invest the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill with additional powers in his capacity of Commissioner of Police, for the purpose of abating nuisances arising in connection with the existence of disorderly houses in respectable neighbourhoods, I should have heartily supported such a proposal. Then there is another evil which has sprung up of late years, and which is certainly not of indigenous growth— I allude to the ostentatious flaunting of vice in places generally resorted to by the public during their evening drive, but so far as I am able to see this Bill does not profess to deal with that. No doubt it would be a difficult matter to prevent persons of any particular class from going to places of public resort so long as they do not misconduct themselves; but at the same time I do not see that there is any difficulty in dealing with the class of men who import these women, and live upon their earnings. But the present Bill proposes to deal with the evil of solicitation in public places, and it proposes to confer upon the Police special powers to repress it. Now the question which first arises is this: Does this evil exist to such an extent as to call for special legislation? My hon'ble friend, the Member for the Corporation, has pointed out that the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill told us, when asking for leave to introduce the Bill, that, speaking for himself, he did not think this evil had attained any considerable magnitude in this city, and I came to the same conclusion, namely, that if the hon'ble mover were left to himself he would probably not have considered it necessary to introduce any special measure. But be that as it may, the present Bill proposes to confer the most plenary powers upon all police officers above the rank of native constable in order to enable them to charge any woman with the offence of solicitation and to arrest her, if necessary, without any complaint whatever having been made by anybody. I am strongly opposed to any such measure. I believe it will lead to a system of wholesale and habitual blackmailing, and, as will not unfrequently be the case, to gross outrage and oppression towards respectable women of the humbler classes who may be charged with this offence.

"The higher and more opulent classes may be safe enough, but how about the poorer classes? Suppose a poor woman of perfect respectability, who is walking along the streets, stops for a moment to speak to a male friend or acquaintance, or even accosts a stranger, to direct her on her way to a particular place, and that she is watched by a police officer from the opposite side of the road; now if this Bill is passed into law, there will be nothing to prevent the police officer, if he were dishonest, from making the grave charge that she had been committing this offence? What would be the position of a respectable young woman under these circumstances? The question is not whether she would be eventually able to prove her respectability and innocence, but the shame and horror of such a charge would be overwhelming, and I think hon'ble members will agree with me that most respectable young women would submit to part with anything they possessed rather than let it be known that they had even been suspected of such conduct. It will be idle to say that no such cases are likely to occur.

"My hon'ble friend, the Member for the Corporation, has pointed out that such cases have happened even in England, and he has alluded to the case of Miss Cass, who fortunately was able to conclusively disprove the charge brought against her. But it would be impossible to exaggerate the horror of her position when she was charged with this offence, and the agonies of shame she must have suffered during and for a long time after the trial was over. You cannot even breathe upon the reputation of a woman, however lightly, without leaving some stain behind, and it seems to me that the shame and the stigma of such a charge would long cling to her, even after a triumphant acquittal. There is nothing on earth which could afford any adequate compensation to a woman who has been subjected to such an outrage. But in the case of a complaint you have some safeguard—you have, at any rate, some person who will be responsible for initiating such proceedings, and who, in the event of the charge being a false one, could be prosecuted under the Penal Code. You propose to do away with even that safeguard, so that if the woman succeeds in proving her entire innocence, all that the police officer has to say is that he made a mistake, but that he really believed she was soliciting. Now I respectfully submit that this is a state of things which the Legislature ought not to countenance.

"I am speaking now not on behalf of any particular class. If the Bill is passed into law, it will affect Europeans and Indians alike. There is a large and growing class of shop-girls in this city, European and Eurasian, who will be affected by this measure just as much as their Indian sisters, and when they come to realise the situation, I apprehend that the European and Anglo-Indian Defence Association will have something to say on the subject. But then it is said that respectable men ought to be spared the trouble and annoyance of having to appear in Court in connection with such cases. I confess I was astonished when I heard this. Are we seriously asked in this Council to have a more tender regard for the susceptibilities of men, however fastidious or squeamish, than for the overpowering sense of shame and for the irreparable wrong that may be caused to innocent women under your present proposal? I trust that the chivalry of hon'ble members will rebel against such a proposition.

"I have heard with very great pleasure that the Hon'ble SIR ROMESH CHUNDER MITTER, at least, has seen the danger to which this measure is liable. For my part, whenever any measure is introduced into this Council for the purpose of enforcing decency and order, I shall always be able heartily to approve of it. But with regard to the present Bill, I see in it elements of grave danger and abuse, and I feel it my duty to point it out at this the only stage at which the principle of a measure can be discussed. I trust the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill and others who support it will not allow their hands to be forced by a number of estimable and well-meaning, but utterly unpractical persons, who still seem to entertain a childlike faith in the exploded doctrine that immorality can be suppressed by Act of Parliament. The social evil has existed in every age and in every country, and I do not believe that a problem, the solution of which has hitherto eluded the grasp of the wisest and most far-sighted statesmen, is likely to be set at rest by undertaking hasty, sentimental and dangerous legislation at the bidding of irresponsible persons."

The Hon'ble MAULVI MUHAMMAD YUSUF KHAN BAHADUR said:—"I have one or two observations to make. As regards section 5, I see that the police officers who have to take action under it must be officers above the rank of a constable, that is as it should be. The point which occurs to me is, whether it will be wise, and whether the balance of convenience or inconvenience points to the direction that police officers should take cognizance of the offence dealt with by this Bill without a complaint. As at present advised, I submit that it will be hazardous in the extreme, if police officers are allowed to take cognizance of this offence without complaint. What I mean by complaint is not a formal complaint to be lodged at the Police Court, for that course would amount to trifling with the Bill, and would frustrate and defeat the very object of the Bill, which aims at a speedy and easy means to enable the party aggrieved to have his redress for the insult offered to him whilst the insult is fresh in his mind. What I mean by complaint is, information given orally at the very moment to the police officer who is authorised to take cognizance of the offence.

"The second observation which I have to make is this: I said on the last occasion that this Bill did not go far enough—an expression which has been repeated in a deprecating tone by one of the learned speakers. But the truth of what I said on that occasion has been fully borne out by the discussion that has even now taken place, and instances and illustrations which the hon'ble member who spoke last has given regarding the shortcomings of the Bill are sufficient to show how the Bill might be extended in its scope and object, and how its provisions might be made to go a little farther. Another instance which occurs to me is this: In a quarter of the town where respectable people live, a house might fall vacant; it might thereupon be hired by women of doubtful character, and they might, with some degree of publicity, so misbehave themselves that their acts would be an outrage on morality, and would offer temptations to innocent population. Gradually other houses in the locality might become vacant, and in course of time they might also come to be occupied by such women. This state of things should, if possible, be remedied, and I throw out as a suggestion, for the consideration of the Select Committee, whether or not opportunity should be taken, now that this Bill is before the Council, to provide some remedy for the evil which I have spoken of—an evil which, I submit, is not of a mere imaginary character, but which actually exists in real life not only in one quarter of the town, but in various quarters, and which respectable people, beyond any manner of doubt, really feel, but in respect of which there is at present no remedy, the case not amounting to one of public nuisance."

The Hon'ble SIR CHARLES PAUL said:—"It is always a matter of sincere gratification to me to listen to the fervid eloquence of my hon'ble friend, BABU SURENDRANATH BANERJEE, or to the silvery language of my respected friend, MR. LALMOHAN GHOSE. But on the present occasion, I may point out to this Council that all their eloquence is pointless, and that the many wise and proper observations which they have submitted have really been wasted. The motion before the Council is to submit this Bill, which was read in Council on the last occasion, to a Select Committee, and the only issue which is open to any member of the Council on this occasion is to submit reasons and considerations why this Bill should not be so submitted to a Select Committee, or in other words, to show fairly and clearly, in order to reverse the opinion of the Council, which was impliedly expressed on the last occasion when they gave leave to read the Bill in Council, that there is no sufficient foundation for any legislative action.

"Now, it cannot be doubted for a single moment that these annoyances, in reference to which adverse criticism has been made, viz., these solicitations to immorality, are of a very disturbing character to society, and no one can be aware better than the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill of the existence of this nuisance. It is said, however, that the hon'ble gentleman made an admission on the last occasion that the nuisance had not grown to any very considerable extent. I apprehend that that observation might be perfectly true, but yet that observation would not remove the ground of the Bill. The ground of this Bill is to ascertain and enquire into the existence of the nuisance, and the object of the Bill is to check its growth, and to see that it does not grow to any considerable extent. This Council is constituted for the making of laws for the peace and good government of the country, and if that be so, I think a sufficient foundation has been laid by the Hon'ble SIR JOHN LAMBERT for the initiation of this measure; and as that is the only question now before the Council, I say without fear of contradiction that neither of the hon'ble gentlemen who have been heard on the other side have laid the axe to the tree at all; and that in fact their observations have been altogether misdirected.

"Now, as to the next set of propositions which my friends have thrown out, no doubt, with considerable warmth and force, and it does considerable credit to themselves, because every member of society should have a tender regard for the liberty of the subject, and those observations have my deepest and warmest sympathy. But here I must point out to your Honour and the Council that the view which they have taken is a mistaken one. We are now proposing that the Council should commit this Bill to the Select Committee, and any proposal as to the form which the Bill should take is merely a matter of procedure to be dealt with hereafter.

"The provisions contained in the Bill are, if I may so say, rough indications for the consideration of the Select Committee, and the gentlemen who will sit on the Committee, particularly my hon'ble friend, MR. GHOSE, will be able to warm up his associates to a proper sense of their duty, and to show why any of these provisions should not be modified. Therefore, the second branch of both my hon'ble friends' observations on this occasion are irrelevant at present, and have nothing to do with the question whether the Bill should be submitted to a Select Committee.

"Then, as to the third point, it often occurs in this Council, and on one occasion His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor particularly called the attention of an hon'ble member who took objection to a certain measure. His Honour said that, if the hon'ble gentleman had taken the trouble to read the Bill before coming to the Council, he would have been able to assist the Council in their deliberations. So I say now that if the hon'ble gentlemen who have spoken on the present occasion had only read section 5 of the Bill, they would have seen that the Police are only to be empowered to arrest a person who is soliciting another to immorality, 'if the name and address of such person be unknown to him and cannot be ascertained by him then and there.' What is the difficulty? If any person of respectability should be arrested by a police officer on a charge of solicitation, what would be the difficulty in that person giving his name and address? What are the strong powers with which the Police are to be armed under this Bill? I further say that a great portion of the observations which have been addressed to the Council about the liberty of the subject would have been justified if the clause to which I have referred had not existed in section 5.

"I do not wish on the present occasion to anticipate the action of the Select Committee, the members of which are all very well conversant with the subject; they may take evidence on any point, or make any enquiries which they think fit. But I will just say one word about the absence of complaint. No doubt it would have been better if action should be taken upon complaint, but if any one driving on the course were solicited in this way, it would be very hard if he had to complain and dance attendance in the Police Court. If such a clause existed, and a formal complaint was necessary, the value of the Bill would probably be rendered nil. When you are passing a legislative measure, it should be passed in such form as to have full force and effect, but to pass it in a manner which will take away a good deal of its force would be to legislate in an imperfect way. I think that we should allow this Bill to be referred to a Select Committee."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cotton said:—"I feel bound to make one observation with regard to the remarks which have fallen from the learned Advocate-General. It appears to me that he has gone out of his way to find fault with the procedure adopted by my hon'ble friends, the Hon'ble Babu Surendranath Banerjee and the Hon'ble Mr. Lalmohan Ghose, in objecting to their comments on the Bill now before the Council. I must point out that under Rule 33 of the Rules for the Conduct of the Business of the Bengal Council, it is laid down that on the day when the motion is made for referring a Bill to a Select Committee, or on any subsequent day to which the discussion is postponed, the principle of the Bill and its general provisions may be discussed; and I do not think the observations of my learned friends went at all beyond the comments which they were amply justified in making on the principle of the Bill now before the Council and on its general provisions; and it seems to me that the hon'ble and learned Advocate-General was himself conscious that my hon'ble friends were not really exceeding the right of discussion, inasmuch as a very considerable portion of his own speech was devoted to discussing the principle of the Bill and its general provisions. If the principle of the Bill is not to be discussed when a Bill is referred to a Select Committee, then there is no time when the principle of a Bill can be discussed. On the occasion of the introduction of a Bill the measure has not been sufficiently long before the Council to enable hon'ble members to form a judgment upon it. If the discussion is delayed until the Select Committee has reported upon it, then all that devolves upon the Council is to consider the clauses of the Bill in detail, and I do not see where the opportunity will be afforded of discussing the principle of a Bill generally. It has always been the custom of the Council to discuss the principle of a Bill when it is referred to a Select Committee, and I trust that you, Sir, will be able to affirm that that custom is a sound and proper one.

"With reference to the criticisms to which this Bill has been subjected by my hon'ble friends, I desire to say that I think they have laid undue stress on the danger of oppression and abuse of its provisions. I think neither of my hon'ble friends have drawn sufficient attention to the fact that the powers conferred by the Bill are not vested in the hands of any police officer unless he is an officer above the rank of native constable; that is to say, those powers will only be exercised by officers in the position of head-constable, Sub-Inspector, Inspector, Superintendent, or it may be a European constable. If the hon'ble members consider that such powers as are proposed by this Bill to be exercised by police officers of standing and experience are dangerous, they are of course entitled to their opinion, but this I must say that if they object to these powers being exercised by officers of such position, then practically their contention will tend to weaken and emasculate all police administration. The object the Government had in framing this clause of the Bill was to provide the most ample safeguards to prevent the abuse of police powers, and with that particular object it is not proposed to confer any powers on ordinary police constables as is done in England. The rank and file of constables are withdrawn from the provisions of this section. It was to meet the objections we have just heard that this class of police officers was purposely excluded, and as the learned Advocate-General very justly observed, further safeguards are introduced in the Bill for the same purpose. Police officers who are empowered to exercise authority under this section cannot arrest any one for making solicitations towards immorality if such person gives his name and address. That, I conceive, is a very great safeguard. If any one objects to give his name and address, the mere fact of such objection places him under suspicion.

"There is another point to which I wish to refer, and that is, that these provisions against solicitation are not principally directed against the unfortunate women who may patrol the streets in order to earn a precarious and dishonourable livelihood. The number of such women in Calcutta, as I am informed, is extremely limited. The number of street-walkers, so great in London, is extremely few in Calcutta, and were their case only considered, I apprehend that the Government would not have embarked upon legislation. But there is a worse evil in this city, to an extent which is unknown in England, but may be paralleled on the Continent. The streets of this city are infested by male touts who introduce men to the dwellings of prostitutes, and it is mainly with a view to bring these men under the clutches of the law that this Bill has been framed.

"Lastly, I must say that I am surprised, and the feeling of surprise is mingled with some share of regret, that the endeavour of the Government to meet the wishes of the Associations who have memorialised the Government with a view to the suppression of immorality in this city, should not have been more cordially met by my hon'ble friends. The desire of the Government is to comply, as far as possible, with the representations of the Associations to which I have referred. It was represented to the Government that the scandal of solicitation in Calcutta had become considerable, and that legislative measures were necessary to put it down. That representation seemed to the Commissioner of Police and to the Lieutenant-Governor to be a reasonable one, and in endeavouring to comply with it this Bill, which has unfortunately met with such opposition at to-day's meeting of the Council, was drafted. I hope and trust that the opposition raised to-day will be suitably answered, and that our deliberations in Select Committee may succeed in obviating the objections which have been taken; but if it should appear that the safeguards which the proposed section contains are really insufficient to prevent abuse and oppression, then I am convinced that the Government and this Council will not hesitate to adopt such further safeguards as may be found necessary and expedient. The only desire the Government has in introducing this Bill is to take steps in response to the representations made to the Government—to take steps, I say, for the prevention of open acts of immorality known as solicitation, and in accomplishing this object I trust that the Government will receive the co-operation of all the members of this Council."

The Hon'ble MR. DUTT said:—"I have listened with considerable interest to the discussion upon this Bill, and after giving it my best consideration, I still think there is considerable force in the objections which my friends, the Hon'ble BABU SURENDRANATH BANERJEE and the Hon'ble MR. LALMOHAN GHOSE, have taken against section 5 of the Bill. As, however, the last speaker, the Hon'ble MR. COTTON, thinks that that section will receive careful consideration at the hands of the Select Committee, I do not wish to dwell upon that point. There is another matter to which I wish to draw the attention of the Select Committee, and that is, that in one respect the Bill does not go far enough. I understand that the memorial from which the Hon'ble BABU SURENDRANATH BANERJEE has read dwells mostly upon the subject of brothels in this town, and it is a matter of serious complaint that in the northern portion of this town and in many other parts of Calcutta, houses occupied by public women are a public nuisance. I think it was the main object of the memorialists to ask for protection being given against the annoyance to which the respectable inhabitants are subject day after day and night after night. It is very frequently the case that public women in this town, often in respectable neighbourhoods, cause annoyance by loud singing and objectionable behaviour, and as far as I am aware, no adequate protection is given in such cases; and as a resident of this town I can add my testimony to that of the memorialists, that no adequate protection is afforded against such annoyance.

"I hope that either in the Select Committee or in our meeting in Council after the Report of the Committee has been submitted, the provisions of this Bill will be so far extended as to compel the residents of houses of ill-fame in this town to behave in an orderly manner. In most European towns the inmates of such houses are compelled to live in a decorous and orderly way, and that I think is what the memorialists have asked for in respect of Calcutta. I am not sure whether the Select Committee have power to extend the scope of the Bill so far, or whether it would be the work of the Council after submission of the Select Committee's report, but this being the main object of the memorialists, I mention it in order that it may be taken into consideration."

The Hon'ble MAULVI SERAJUL ISLAM KHAN BAHADUR said:—"I happen to be a member of the Purity Society, and took part in the action which the Society has taken in this matter, and I am bound to say that this Bill does not provide really and mainly what we want, namely, the suppression of brothels; and therefore I agree with the last speaker, that the Bill ought to be enlarged to that extent. With regard to section 5, I agree with my hon'ble friends that it is likely to prove an engine of oppression to the public; therefore there ought to be more safeguards than are provided in the section. If that is done, I shall have nothing to say against the principle of the Bill."

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN LAMBERT said:—"After what has fallen from the learned ADVOCATE-GENERAL and from the Hon'ble MR. COTTON on this occasion as regards the merits of the Bill—observations with which I entirely agree—it seems to me unnecessary at this time to refer at any length to the objections which have been brought forward by the Hon'ble BABU SURENDRANATH BANERJEE and the Hon'ble MR. LALMOHAN GHOSE. The chief point of the objections now urged against the provisions of this Bill is to be found in the fact that the Police are to bring up these cases into Court without a complaint. No doubt that is unusual, and the matter is open to discussion and consideration; but my present view is that, if that objection prevails, then the Bill will be inoperative, and it will be far better not to bring this Bill upon the Statute Book, and I would recommend that the Bill be withdrawn. I shall be prepared upon a future occasion to give my reasons for holding this opinion. The objections which have been made in this Council Chamber and outside will receive fitting attention when the Bill comes before the Select Committee. The remarks which have fallen from the Hon'ble Babu SURENDRANATH BANERJEE and the Hon'ble MAULVI MUHAMMAD YUSUF will be considered in Committee; and to ensure that these hon'ble members may have the fullest opportunity of putting forward their views, I beg to move that, with their permission, their names may be added to the names already proposed for the Select Committee."

The Hon'ble THE PRESIDENT said:—"With reference to what has been remarked by the Hon'ble MR. COTTON with regard to the observations which fell from the Hon'ble the Advocate-General, I do not think there is really any such difference of opinion between them as might at first sight appear. I do not understand that the Hon'ble the Advocate-General intended to deprecate any discussion of the principle of the Bill on this occasion. The object of his remarks was to point out that this was not the occasion for the discussion of the details of the Bill, as they would be considered in Select Committee, and this remark applies more particularly to hon'ble members who will serve on the Select Committee, and will have an opportunity there of pressing objections and suggesting amendments. I myself would go a little farther, and would say that I would not deprecate any hon'ble member expressing his views even on any details of the Bill—not, indeed, discussing these at length or assuming that they are not liable to be amended; but it is for the convenience of the Council that we should know that there are certain details to which he could not give his assent, or that he should suggest any necessary safeguards which would in his opinion effectually carry out the objects of the Bill. It seems to me that the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill has met the difficulty by adding the two hon'ble members who have discussed the details of the Bill to the Select Committee, where they will have full opportunity of expressing their views.

"With regard to what has been remarked by the Hon'ble MR. DUTT and the HON'BLE MAULVI SERAJUL ISLAM, I should explain that there is some misunderstanding as to the object of the memorial to which reference has been made. That object is not, as the two hon'ble members supposed, to suggest that greater power should be taken to put down brothels, which could be shown to be nuisances, or against which any objection could be urged by persons residing in the neighbourhood on account of annoyance caused by the inmates. The correspondence between this Government and the Government of India, which contains two important reports by the Hon'ble SIR JOHN LAMBERT, shows that the Police have complete power to deal with cases of that kind, namely, that where objection is made by the neighbours that a brothel is a nuisance, or that annoyance is caused thereby, the Police have not only the power, but the power is fully exercised, of putting down the nuisance. The object of the memorial in question was that brothels should be suppressed, even if no annoyance or nuisance is complained of; that the mere fact of it being proved that a place is used by people who lead immoral lives as a brothel should be sufficient to set in motion the power to turn out the inmates, and thus put a stop to the nuisance. That is a proposal quite different from what has been discussed in this Council, and I doubt if hon'ble members would support that view. I may say at once that the Government has been unable to support it, and I think it would be going too far to enlarge this Bill by giving a power of that kind."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Saturday, the 23rd instant.

The Imperial Institute, in pursuance of its objects as defined by the Royal Charter, which include the encouragement and development of British manufactures and industries, will provide attendants, lighting, and all needful supervision and general facilities incidental to the Exhibition as a whole.

Exhibitors will be expected to provide, at their own cost, the Exhibits, Glass Cases and Fittings, and to incur the cost of transit to and from the Institute, and of the necessary attendants for the installation and arrangement of the Exhibits.

As regards processes, the Imperial Institute will be prepared to receive applications, and to provide motive power to a moderate extent, for the display of such processes, subject to the Executive Council being of opinion that the utility and attractiveness of the process to be illustrated is sufficient to justify the outlay thereby involved.

The Committee of Advice has selected and recommended to the Council a preliminary list of firms to whom invitations to exhibit are being transmitted, but applications for permission to exhibit will be received from individuals and firms from all parts of the British Empire.

No sales will be allowed in the Exhibition Galleries, but Exhibitors will be permitted to take orders for articles at the Exhibition. No circulars or trade cards must be distributed by Exhibitors.

A Catalogue will be issued and sold in the Exhibition, in which a reasonable description of the Exhibits, and of any special features to which attention is called by the manufacturers, may be inserted free of charge.

The exhibiting space will be allotted by the Committee of Advice, in proportion to the demand, amongst those individuals and firms included in these lists (or in subsequent lists, to be approved by the Committee) who may wish to exhibit.

All Exhibits, Glass Cases, Fittings, &c., must arrive at the Institute not later than noon on SATURDAY, APRIL 27th, 1895. No cases or Exhibits will be received after that date. The Exhibits must be installed and arranged in their cases not later than noon on THURSDAY, 2ND MAY, 1895.

Screens or other erections must not exceed 8 feet in height.

The passage way indicated in the plan must be preserved throughout the whole length of the gallery.

The Executive Council reserve to themselves the right of refusing to admit to the Institute premises any Cases, Fittings, or Exhibits arriving after noon on the 27th April, and to remove from the Exhibition Gallery, at the cost of the Exhibitor any Exhibits, Cases or Fittings, the arrangement of which may not be completed to the satisfaction of the Council by noon on the 2nd May. In such instances the Executive Council reserve the right to dispose, at their absolute discretion, of the space which thus may become available. Exhibitors will not be allowed to supplement or change their Exhibits during the time the Exhibition remains open, without the permission in writing of the Council.

The acceptance by a firm or individual of the invitation to exhibit will be taken as consent on his part to allow all his Exhibits, Cases and Fittings to remain undisturbed in the Galleries until the close of the Exhibition, and as an agreement on his part to the right of the Council to order, or, if necessary, to cause, without explanation, the removal of the Exhibit at any time they may think proper, and, further, as an agreement to abide by the Regulations here set out.

The conditions above stated are subject to the provisions which are set out in the Special Prospectus issued in connection with each division of the Exhibition.

The Executive Council, while undertaking to supply adequate general control, watching and care, accept no responsibility or liability as regards the Exhibits in respect of damage or loss by fire or accidents, or otherwise.

An invitation to a firm or individual to exhibit will be considered as cancelled if a definite reply is not received by the 2nd February.

All communications should be addressed to—

The Secretary to the Photographic Exhibition (1895), Imperial Institute, London, S. W.

The Council reserves to itself the right, in the event of the space applied for considerably exceeding the accommodation available, or for other causes, to allot space only to certain of the applicants.

FIRST FORECAST OF THE OILSEED CROPS OF BENGAL, 1894-95.

THE following is published for general information.

REVENUE DEPT., The 22nd February 1895. C. E. BUCKLAND, Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

DEPARTMENT OF LAND RECORDS AND AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

First Forecast of the Oilseed Crops of Bengal, 1894-95.

1. Explanatory.—The oilseed crops dealt with in this report are (1) linseed, (2) rapeseed and mustard, (3) the rabi or summer variety of til or gingelly, and (4) other oilseed, e.g. castor-oil, sarguja or niger seed, &c. The bhadoi variety of til, which is sown during the rains and reaped early in the cold weather, has been excluded from this report.

Returns have been received from all districts except Gaya, Angul and the Khondmals.

2. As remarked in the preliminary note on the standing wheat crop, issued on the 30th January 1895, the latter part of the last monsoon season was characterized by an unusually late and heavy rainfall, which lasted till the end of the first week of November, being particularly heavy in Bihar, Chota Nagpur and North Bengal. The late rainfall retarded cultivation, and in most districts prevented the usual area from being sown and interfered with the prospects of the crop. In some districts in Eastern Bengal sowing was interfered with by the late continuance of the floods. The crops benefited, however, by the abundant stock of moisture left in the soil by the heavy and late rains; although no rain has fallen since early in November (except a few light showers in the latter half of January), the crops do not appear to have suffered in many places from want of moisture.

3. Area cultivated.—Exclusive of Gaya, Angul and the Khondmals, the total area in Bengal sown with oilseeds in the current year is estimated at 3,907,300 acres against 4,073,300 acres (excluding the same districts) estimated to have been sown in 1893-94. This gives a decrease of 166,000 acres or nearly 4·1 per cent. on the area sown last year. The decrease is solely due to the unusually late continuance of the monsoon rains. It may be remarked that there was a similar falling off in the area sown with oilseeds last year as compared with the year 1892-93, due likewise to an excessive rainfall in October 1893. The total area sown this year is undoubtedly below the normal, but the present estimate of normal area being open to considerable doubt, it is not possible to institute any exact comparison between the normal and present year's areas.

4. Character of the crops.—Out of 43 districts from which returns have been received, only four districts estimate the outturn of the oilseed crops at 16 annas; 24 districts report the crops as varying from 12 to 15 annas, and in the remaining districts the outturn is variously estimated at from 8 to 12 annas. On the whole, the outturn of the oilseed crops in Bengal may be estimated at 12 annas. The prospects of the standing crops appear to be slightly better than those of last year.

Burdwan.	Burdwan ...	Linseed	23,200	26,300	26,400	10	11	In the Sadar sub-division, owing to excessive rain, the condition of the crops is worse than it was last year. Unusual rainfall after the sowing time affected the outturn to some extent in the Kalna sub-division. In the Katwa sub-division owing to seasonable rainfall in sowing time there is reason to believe that the outturn of this year's crops would be better than last year. In the Ranigan] sub-division there is a decrease in outturn due to late sowing on account of rains.

It is impossible to obtain accurate figures, but I am sure from my own observation that it cannot be less than 10,000. As regards other crops, the fluctuations between this year's area and that of the last year is not excessive, but it shows considerable decrease when compared with the normal area. It is explained that this is due to excessive rainfall at the time of sowing.	The Collector raised his figure for normal area under "Other oilseeds" from 2,300 acres to 10,000 acres, and returned this year's area under the same crop as 10,000 acres, but kept the figure (2,100 acres) for last year unchanged. This has been changed to 10,000 acres in this office.

Murshidabad	Linseed and Rapeseed mustard.	30,500	27,000	26,600	11	14	The decrease in area sown this year as compared with the normal and the last year's area is due to the low lands not being fit for cultivation owing to the heavy rains during the sowing season. The increase in the estimated outturn, as compared with that of last year, is attributable to the moisture of lands caused by the rains mentioned above.

Jalpaiguri	Rapeseed and mustard.	25,000	24,900	25,800	12	15	The increase in area under "Other oilseeds" is due to the fact that it has been shown this year for the first time by the Tahsildar of Falakata. The Sub-divisional Officer of Alipore says that the Tahsildar must have lost sight of it in previous years. Gradual opening of the Duars accounts for an increased area having been sown with rape and mustard. Seasonable rain produced good results.	The Deputy Commissioner did not return area under last year's "Other oilseeds." This year's area has accordingly been reproduced in column 5.
